An estimated 350,000 persons thrilled to the opening-day event of the fourth annual California Sea Festival Saturday, as supersonic jet planes rocketed between the Long Beach oil islands, lighted small boats paraded and colorful fireworks dotted the night sky.

The evening's presentation, which officially opened the 21-day festival, drew massive crowds to the Long Beach strand between Alamitos Avenue and Belmont Pier.

Sgt. Ray Gandy released a police attendance estimate of 350,000 persons, and said a platoon of 60 officers controlled traffic as more than 80,000 cars converged on the city's shore line.

The festival, which runs through Aug. 23, opened with a "Fly-by" of antique aircraft and a simulated World War I aerial dogfight.

Then the Blue Angels, flying F-4II Phantom jet fighters, rocketed across the festival area.

As they buzzed oil islands A and B and skimmed over the tops of shoreline high-rise buildings, the Angels' twin-engine craft created a thunderous roar. The sleek airships zoomed skyward and returned time and again.

Switchboards at the police department and at the Independent, Press-Telegram were flooded with calls of hundreds of Long Beach residents who were frightened or annoyed by the noisy fighter craft.

Some, apparently unaware the Angels were to present their air show, even threatened to picket City Hall in attempts to forestall any future jet air shows in Long Beach.

Ironically, participation by the Navy flight team was threatened with cancellation because of overcast skies that made impossible a scheduled practice run Friday evening. Clearing skies placed the Angels back on the festival's Saturday program.

The jet-powered air show whetted appetites of the festival's spectators for the remainder of the evening's presentation.

The Angels were followed by a gyrocopter "fly-by", an aerobatics display, appearance of the 7San Pedro-to-Catalina hydrofoil, a Coast Guard air-sea rescue demonstration, and a free-fall sky diving drop.

Members of the Navy's "Leap Frogs" dived out of a plane at 12,000 feet, free-falling until they reached an altitude of 2,500 feet, while smoke marking their descent.

All the sky divers landed safely as dusk fell.

A 30-boat "Parade of Lights" followed the air drop as area boating enthusiasts competed for the Two fliers died a couple of weeks ago — splattered against the side of a mountain.

But fliers are killed every day; the stories grow old quickly.

In a few days all that remained in print was a short obituary — when and where they would be buried.

Jim Patterson and Chuck Behymer deserved more.

They weren't just flying around for the fun of it, nor were they flying around to make a bundle.

They were flying around the rugged Sierra Nevada, unpaid and on their own time trying to find 35 people who have been missing since their aircraft apparently crashed in a snowstorm.

They aren't the only ones who have searched since the "Gamblers Special" went down Feb. 18. And they aren't the only ones that have crashed during the search. But they're the only ones, thus far, who have died.

They flew and died as members of Long Beach Group 7, Civil Air Patrol.

They're not the only ones that flew with the CAP. They're not the only CAP members who have crashed — and they're not the only ones who have died. They join four others in the CAP files of "killed in action."

Forty-four-year-old James R. Patterson worked six days a week as an auto parts salesman to support his wife and four children. His hobby was flying and he owned his own plane.

Q. An eastern friend has told me that the California divorce rate equals the marriage rate. I doubt that this is true. Can you tell me the correct figures L.J.P., Long Beach.

A. Total marriages in the state have outnumbered total divorces and annulments by about two to one during the past five years. "We've still got them coming together faster than they break apart," said John Brokett of the state Department of Vital Statistics in Sacramento. Last year there were 161,145 marriages and 75,367 divorces and annulments. In 1967 150,000 marriages took place, and 70,069 divorces and annulments. Kennedy Accident Victim's Body May Be Exhumed

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — The body of Mary Jo Kopechne, the pretty blonde secretary killed when Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's car plunged into a remote island pond two weeks ago may be exhumed for an autopsy. Dist. Atty Edmund S. Dinis, whose southern Massachusetts district encompasses the accident site on Chappaquiddick Island, has decided to reopen the accident investigation, considered closed by police.

Blythe Evans, district attorney of Luzerne County, Pa., confirmed Saturday that Dinis had talked with him by telephone and asked about the legal steps necessary to exhume Miss Kopechne's body. The 28-year-old blonde secretary to the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., was buried nearly two weeks ago in Plymouth, Pa., her birthplace.

Dinis, thwarted in his initial attempt before the Massachusetts Superior Court to ask for a judicial review of the July 18 accident which apparently caused a major reversal of Kennedy's political career, now expects word from district court level early next week.

IN REGARD to the autopsy, observers were at a loss to explain what Dinis had in mind. Dr. J. Donald R. Mills, the Edgartown medical examiner who pronounced Miss Kopechne dead from drowning, originally asked the district attorney's office if an autopsy was desired and got a negative reply.

An autopsy generally is used to determine the cause of death, it appeared Dinis wanted to confirm Mills' finding at the scene.

Mills made an unusual statement the morning of Kennedy's trial in which he said that had he and Dinis known that the senator was the driver of the car when they were deciding whether or not to perform an autopsy, they would have gone ahead with it.

In his written statement, Mills said so many questions had come up about why an autopsy was not performed, and considering Kennedy's stature, that he had come to the conclusion an autopsy, whether medically needed or not, would have been in the best interests of the senator.

MEDICAL examiner Dr. Richard Ford of Boston, one of only four examiners in Massachusetts qualified to perform autopsies, said the performance of one on Miss Kopechne now would have uncertain results.

"One, she's been embalmed," Ford said, "and that destroys any evidence of drowning. But if you find nothing else — no other cause of death — you can reasonably assume she drowned."

Ford said if Miss Kopechne died from a "broken neck in the spillover of the car," for example, this could be determined by autopsy.

Dinnis' announcement that he would seek an inquest into the accident also surprised many people who pointed out that Edgartown Police Chief Dominick J. Arena, who investigated the accident on the tiny island across Katama Bay from Edgartown, has said repeatedly the case was closed as far as he was concerned.

73-Million L.B. School Budget Due

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

Uncertain about state aid yet buoyed by an unexpected upsurge in local assessed valuation, Long Beach school trustees are expected to adopt a record 1969-70 budget Monday that:

Projects total estimated expenditures at $72,844,227, up $2.2 million from 1968-69's $70.6 million.

Requires a $4.34 per $100 assessed valuation tax levy, some 20 cents above last year's $4.14 but 4 cents below working estimates made in early July.

Formal ratification of the fiscal document is expected to follow a public hearing at 4 p.m. Monday in Board of Education chambers, 701 Locust Ave.

Budget officials included a $15,135,044 revenue figure as an estimated, unofficial total for still-to-be-allocated state aid. With the Legislature still debating various programs, actual dollar amounts may not be known before late August, officials here say.

Among aid measures now under consideration in Sacramento are several that could provide Long Beach with $500,000 to $1 million beyond the budgeted sum, it is known.

Instrumental in pushing down next year's levy, a spokesman said, was a higher total assessed valuation announced recently by the county and state Board of Public Utilities. All county property taxes are based on assessed valuation, figured in California as about 25 per cent of a property's market value.

INSTEAD OF a nine-tenths per cent increase in valuations — the figure used in calculating the July "publication budget" — the total actually increased 2.9 per cent — to $1,246,757,460 from $1,218,844,342.

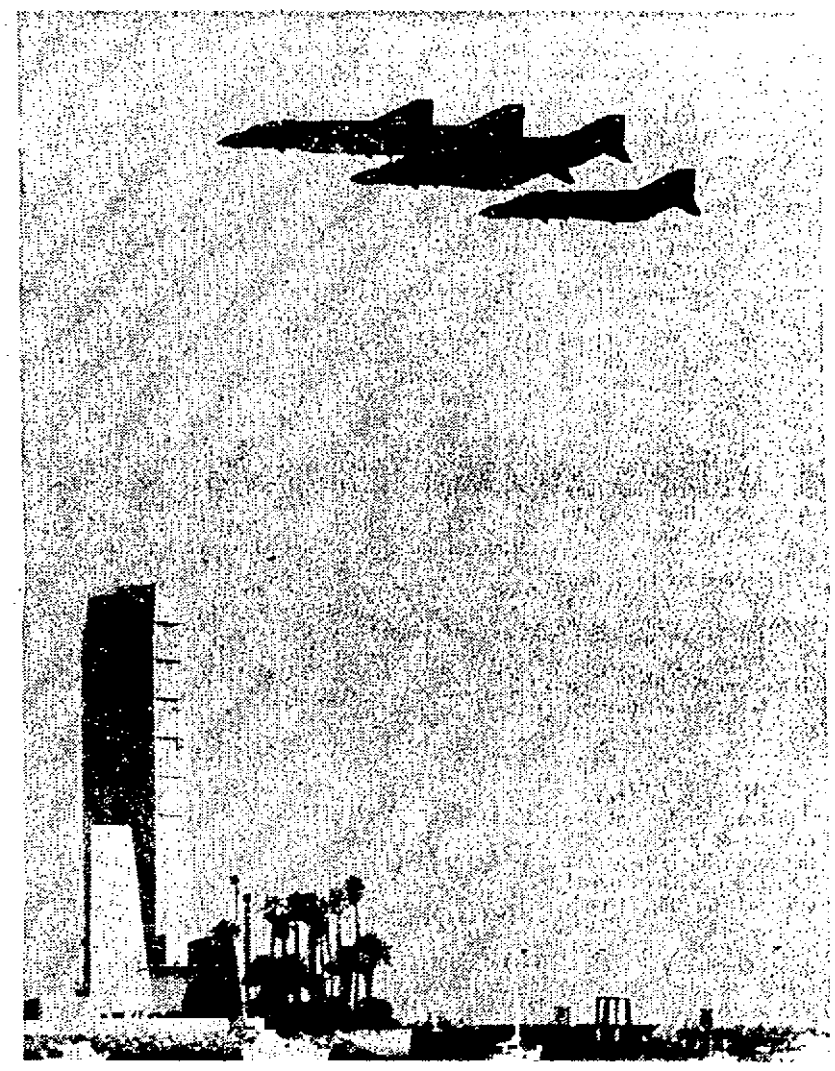

Thus a Long Beach owner of a $20,000 home next year will pay $217 in school taxes compared with $207 in 1968-69. (Other homeowners may accurately fig-

Presidents Both Bid for Peace

By LEWIS GULICK

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — President Nixon was swept up and almost overwhelmed Saturday by thousands of cheering Romanians who shouted "Nix-on, Nix-on, Nix-on!" and "Hoo-rah!" as they waved American flags.

Late at night crowds still lined the streets and applauded him as he went to an official reception. Nixon called it "a wonderful day."

"They're such great people — great people," he said. Mrs. Nixon termed the welcome "marvelous" and said she had "never seen people come out like that" late at night for another round of well-wishing.

The cheering began at Otopeni airport, decorated with U.S. and Romanian flags, as Nixon became the first U.S. President to make a state visit to a Communist capitol.

WELCOMED BY President Nicolae Ceausescu, the Communist party boss who has not feared to ruffle the feelings of the Soviet Union, Nixon at once made a bid for peaceful coexistence, saying: "Nations can have widely different internal orders and live in peace."

The cheering swelled to a roar as Nixon and Ceausescu set out in an open limousine for the 12-mile ride from the airport.

It was ironic that Nixon, long a fighter against communism in the United States, received in Communist Romania the warmest welcome given him anywhere on his round-the-world trip.

POLICE said the crowd was larger than turned out for Charles de Gaulle last year.

Three times during the drive into the city throngs forced the motorcade to stop. When Nixon got out of the open car to shake BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Someone dropped an American flag as the crush mounted. The man next to him moved quickly to retrieve it. The pressure from the crowd almost knocked him down. "I will keep it," he said.

The end was near after almost four hours of waiting. Thousands of Romanians had taken positions near Bucharest's Arch of Triumph, a strategic point to watch President Nixon's motorcade roll along the tree-lined boulevard of the capital.

Excitement grew. Off came the paper hats which many had made from newspapers to ward off a searing sun.

A small group of Czechoslovak tourists readied their cameras. They had come to Bucharest from the Romanian seaside just before access to the capital was sealed off on the eve of Nixon's visit.

"WE DID NOT want to miss this," explained one German-speaking Prague student. "I think about a thousand Czechs have come to Bucharest to see the President. We won't see him in Prague so soon. I'm sure about that."

A helicopter was circling 300 feet overhead.

"There he comes," shouted an elderly man, who gave a running commentary from a vantage point on the steps leading up to the Arch.

Applause and shouts greeted the President. Standing six to seven deep, they shouted: "Nixon, Nixon."

"That's him," shouted a woman. "I know his face. I have watched him on television when he was waiting for the American astronauts on that ship."

Flags — American and Romanian — were waved frantically as the President passed by. Even the press buses got a good-natured cheer from the crowd.

"THIS WOULD have been unbelievable only a few years ago," said an English-speaking teacher. He shook his head wonderingly.

"This is a good thing for Romania," said a bystander. "A very good thing."

Many marched off toward downtown Bucharest for a second look at the President in the afternoon. They rolled up their flags carefully.

"What will you do with your American flag?" a reporter asked a man who said he has been a Communist party member since 1950. He smiled proudly: "I will keep it for my son."

Pope Paul Back; Unable to Halt Biafran Conflict

Combined News Services

...Pope Paul VI returned home early Sunday from Uganda, where he drew emotional acclaim from African Catholics, promised papal money for development and tried unsuccessfully to help resolve the Nigerian civil war.

The papal jet touched down at Rome's Fiumicino Airport ending a wearying 52-hour African journey for the 71-year-old pontiff. It was hig eighth trip outside Italy since becoming the spiritual leader of the world's half-billion Roman Catholics six years ago and his first as Pope to Africa.

The pontiff closed his three-day visit to Uganda with a last-minute meeting with a three-man delegation frmm Biafra, and announcement of the fund, reported to total $1 million.

During the day, surrounded by throngs of pilgrims, the pontiff consecrated the altar of a shrine commemorating 22 black African martyrs, burned to death in the 19th century.

The meeting with the Biafrans was described as "long and cordial," by Rt. Rev. Msgr. William Carew of Canada, the Pope's top English-speaking aide.

"Discussion was held concerning the possibility of commencing talks toward the solution of the present conflict and also on aid," Msgr. Carew said. Msgr. Carew, two other papal aides, President Milton Obote and Ugandan Foreign Minister Sam Odaka, attended the 90-minute meeting with the Pope.

On Friday night the Pope met for two hours and 15 minutes with Chief Anthony Enahoro, Nigeria's top peace negotiator.

The papal party expressed some optimism, though no firm commitment for talks by the two warring sides had been obtained.

RENUNCIATION

Anatoly Kuznetsov, the Soviet writer who found asylum in London this week, has renounced all his published works as ruthlessly distorted by political censors.

In a long statement being published in the Sunday Telegraph, he said, "Kuznetsov is a dishonest conformist, cowardly author." From now on, he said, he would write in freedom using the name "A. Anatol."

Kuznetsov also wrote letters of resignation to the Soviet Communist Party and the Writers' Union. He said he rejected Marxism-Leninism as obsolete and naive.

"I beg the Soviet government not to persecute my mother, my son, my wife or my personal secretary," he wrote. "I swear that they knew nothing at all."

He was referring to his plans to escape, which he said he had been preparing for a year. He was even ready to swim underwater across a frontier, he said, after he had twice been refused permission to travel abroad.

Kuznetsov, one of the best-known of the young liberal writers in the Soviet Union, went to London July 24 in response to an invitation from the Society for Cultural Relations With the U.S.S.R.

Last Tuesday, the Soviet Embassy said he had disappeared and asked the British government to find him. The next day Kuznetsov, whose latest work, "The Fire," had been under attack at home, requested and received permission from the British government to remain in the country indefinitely.

A young brunette missed being the first woman quarantined with the three Apollo 11 astronauts and 16 other men when fears that she was exposed to lunar material turned out to be unfounded Saturday.

Miss Florence Pipes, a technician working in a biology laboratory, had her hand in a glove extending into a cabinet to handle lunar material and discovered a possible puncture in the glove.

An alarm was sounded and she went through the established procedures of having her arm bathed in sodium hypochloride. However, officials then discovered the cabinet contained no lunar material, and they determined there was no need to quarantine Miss Pipes.

If she had been sent into isolation, she would have been the first woman to be quarantined with the astronauts. There are facilities inside the isolation chambers to accomodate unexpected women guests, they said.

PRINCE FLIES

Prince Charles, at the controls of a single-engine Chipmunk aircraft, passed his flying test Saturday and qualified for his preliminary flying badge at Tangmere Royal Air Force Base. Dr. Gerald Dorman, new president of the American Medical Association, said Saturday the organization was wrong in its long fight against Medicare for the elderly.

Dorman, whose organization has been charged with blocking the appointment of Dr. John Knowles as assistant secretary of health, also said he would have been against any active opposition to Knowles' appointment.

The New York doctor also said that AMA opposition to federal intervention in medical care has changed in the past three or four years.

"I think they have accepted the law of the land and are working with the government to try to make it effective," he said.

DEVELOPER

Land developer J. C. Forkner died at his Fresno home Friday night. He was 96. Born in Kansas, he came to Fresno in 1910 and bought 12,000 acres of bleak land. He built an extensive network of irrigation canals on the land and planted more than 600,000 fig trees.

Forkner purchased 48 of the first tractors built by Henry Ford. He persuaded Ford later to visit the ranch to see the tractors in operation. Over the years the land was sold in parcels of 10 to 40 acres and part of it became an exclusive residential district known as Fig Garden.

PROMOTED

President Nixon promoted two crew members of his Air Force One jet Saturday while flying from Pakistan to Romania.

Summoned to the presidential cabin were Lt. Col. Charles W. Rogers of Arcade, N.Y., the navigator, and M. Sgt. William Justus of Winsted, Conn., one of the radio operators.

Nixon pinned the silver eagle of a full colonel to Roger's right shoulder and attached the insignia of Chief M. Sgt. to the left arm of Justus.

GM Balks at Steel Price Hike

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The steel industry, long accustomed to criticism over its pricing policies, Saturday pondered a stiffer-than-usual challenge to its latest drive for sharply higher steel prices.

The challenge came from an unexpected source — the automobile industry, steel's biggest customer.

General Motors Corp. notified U. S. Steel Corp. to hold up all deliveries of steel products at the higher prices announced by the steel firm Wednesday.

Steel industry sources said General Motors apparently balked at the size of the U.S. Steel increase, which was a surprising 4.8 per cent on big-volume products accounting for about half of all steel industry shipments.

The increases, ranging between $6 and $9.50 a ton, covered hot and cold rolled sheets and strips, galvanized and other coated sheet, and tinplate — products used in the manufacture of automobiles, cans and household appliances, and in construction.

At least five other steel companies followed the lead of U.S. Steel and raised prices, although some shied from matching the size of the increases posted by the No. 1 steelmaker.

The question was: Can the price increases stick? Industry sources were confident they would, at least in substantial part.

Although the price increase was the largest in seven years, the steel industry pointed to unusual rises in costs plus a dip in profits in the first half of this year. U.S. Steel's profits dropped 31 per cent in the second quarter.

Wages for 400,000 steelworkers employed by 11 major companies rose 14.2 cents an hour Aug. 1 under terms of a three-year labor contract signed last year. Steelworker pensions rose by 30 per cent, and a two-cents-an-hour automation fund became effective. An arbitration ruling on incentive pay due this week probably will result in another substantial labor cost increase.

The steel industry hoped to improve its profit situation in the latter half of the year with a twin rise in production and prices. Production is booming and shows signs of growing stronger, and steel exports have risen while imports of foreign steel have dropped.

In addition, the first 1970 model cars began rolling off the assembly lines this week. By next week all the big four auto companies will be in production on the new models, and this will mean more business for the steel industry.

The price hike came under the fire of Sen. William E. Proxmire, D-Wis., vice chairman of the Joint Economic Committee. He said the Nixon Administration should tell the Congress and the people whether the price increases were warranted.

Atom Arms Plant Fire Reported

DENVER (UPI) — Atomic Energy Commission spokesman said Saturday a fire was found Wednesday night in a plutonium storage area of Rocky Flats, a nuclear arms production site operated by Dow Chemical Co.

The fire, which released "minor contamination," was extinguished shortly after it was found, Mike Sunderland, an AEC spokesman said.

The blaze was discovered in an area used to protect plutomium recovered from an earlier blaze at the plant. That fire, on May 11, caused an estimated $50 million in damage and temporarily halted nuclear production in the United States, a spokesman said.

Arise, My Love, There's 405-Foot Balloon on Roof

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — A falling high altitude research balloon instrument package ricochoeted off the roof of a Roswell home Saturday, just 10 feet from a sleeping woman and 20 feet from where her husband was eating breakfast. There were no injuries.

The 2,700-pound package skimmed off the roof, ripping a hole 10 by 12 feet, and crashed against a garage next door.

The Air Force balloon was launched from the city's old municipal airport and was supposed to reach an altitude of more than 100,000 feet before drifting 130 miles westward to the White Sands Missile Range.

THE BALLOON collapsed soon after launch and fell a few blocks away over a residential neighborhood where the intrument package broke the morning calm at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Waldemar Doering.

After the initial shock, Doering commented, "It hit with a big crash that woke my wife. That's something I haven't been able to do in years.

Yards and yards of polyethylene material from the 405-foot tall ballloon and material from its parachute were hanging from electrical power lines throughout the neighborhood.

Electric company crews shut off power to the 2,400-volt power lines and then helped Air Force crews clean away the mess.

Naked Truth Comes Out: Miss Nude America Isn't

NAKED CITY, Ind. (AP) — The first Miss Nude America is apparently neither a Miss nor an American, and even fell short of total nudity by the margin of a wedding ring, a watch, a charm bracelet and high-heeled pumps.

Fourteen contestants competed for the title Saturday at a nudist camp on the Hoosier prairie, parading around an outdoor ring wearing white construction helmets and carrying flags of various states.

PUTTING on the helmets gave the girls something to do with their hands," said Dick Drost, 33, who runs the Naked City nudist colony and who promoted Saturday's pageant.

When the parading was done, an all-male jury awarded first prize to Miss Nude Nevada, a leggy 22-year-old blonde, who then identified herself as the wife of Peter Boisclair, a Toronto, Canada, paper salesman.

She said the organizers of the contest had instructed each girl to claim residence in one of the 50 states.

Second prize went to a redhead who called herself Ellen of New Mexico, and a blond tagged Judith of California barely finished third.

Most of the girls displayed a practiced self-assurance rarely seen this side of the burlesque runway, but one entrant became so embarrassed when asked to pose for pictures that she modestly covered her mouth.

Nixon to Reveal Historic Welfare Reform Proposal

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The battle over the shape of President Nixon's welfare reform plan has ended with a partial victory for the major protagonists.

The plan to be unveiled by Nixon on Friday still is subject to last-minute tinkering. But, if accepted by Congress in its present shape, it would represent the first substantive overhaul of relief for the poor since the system began 34 years ago. It includes these major elements:

National minimum payments to welfare clients in all the federally supported programs — aid to the aged, blind, permanently disabled and families with dependent children.

Sizeable money incentives to get welfare clients off relief through job training and upgrading of their existing skills.

The addition of $2 billion a year of federal money to the $4.7 billion already commited to welfare, an action that could alleviate the burden of state and local governments struggling with spiraling welfare costs.

The shape of the reform represents a victory for Robert H. Finch, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the presidential assistant for urban affairs.

IT MEETS their goal of closing an "inequity gap" in the present system, which treats totally dependent Americans better than those working but impoverished. It also aims at the Finch-Moynihan goal of diminishing welfare as an institutional way of life.

The scope of the reform is, in a different sense, a victory for Dr. Arthur F. Burns, counselor to the President and the official principally engaged in a six-month welfare reform struggle with Finch and Moynihan. By devising a plan less costly than that originally proposed by the urbanologists, Nixon seemingly has satisfied Burns, keeping the budget within bounds of fiscal caution.

At the heart of the Administration plan is the recognition the welfare system should distinguish among three different types of welfare individuals: The underemployed, and the totally dependent.

The underemployed would be offered a greater hope of earning their way off welfare by keeping a larger share of their outside income.

The trainable unemployed would be spurred to seek a skill by the additional monthly grants.

And the totally dependent, most of them children, would be granted more money to live, hopefully, in more dignity.

The plan should also appeal to Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz by linking reforms to job training and skill upgrading.

Nixon's package plan will not go so far as many reformers want. In fact, it will not be massive enough in scope to assure success of his own 1968 campaign promise to take the poor off the welfare rolls and put them on the payrolls.

THERE IS NO effort to establish a guaranteed annual income or, as some call it, a negative income tax providing every American with enough money to live.

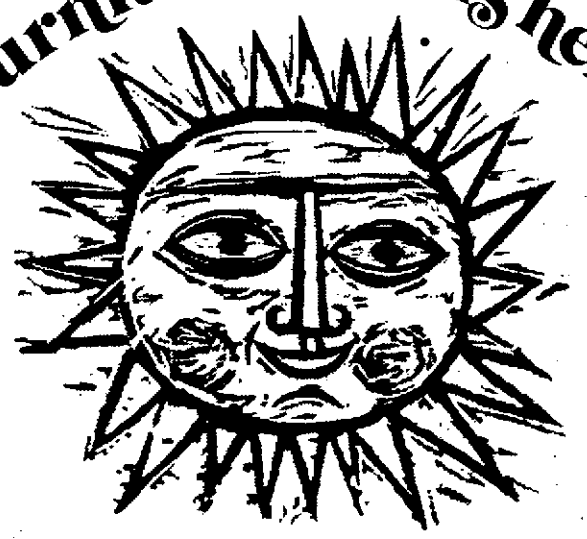

But the White House plan is the first step toward both Nixon's pledge and a guaranteed income.

Naked Truth Comes Out: Miss Nude America Isn't

NAKED CITY, Ind. (AP) — The first Miss Nude America is apparently neither a Miss nor an American, and even fell short of total nudity by the margin of a wedding ring, a watch, a charm bracelet and high-heeled pumps.

Fourteen contestants competed for the title Saturday at a nudist camp on the Hoosier prairie, parading around an outdoor ring wearing white construction helmets and carrying flags of various states.

PUTTING on the helmets gave the girls something to do with their hands," said Dick Drost, 33, who runs the Naked City nudist colony and who promoted Saturday's pageant.

When the parading was done, an all-male jury awarded first prize to Miss Nude Nevada, a leggy 22-year-old blonde, who then identified herself as the wife of Peter Boisclair, a Toronto, Canada, paper salesman.

She said the organizers of the contest had instructed each girl to claim residence in one of the 50 states.

Second prize went to a redhead who called herself Ellen of New Mexico, and a blond tagged Judith of California barely finished third.

Most of the girls displayed a practiced self-assurance rarely seen this side of the burlesque runway, but one entrant became so embarrassed when asked to pose for pictures that she modestly covered her mouth.

Nixon to Reveal Historic Welfare Reform Proposal

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The battle over the shape of President Nixon's welfare reform plan has ended with a partial victory for the major protagonists.

The plan to be unveiled by Nixon on Friday still is subject to last-minute tinkering. But, if accepted by Congress in its present shape, it would represent the first substantive overhaul of relief for the poor since the system began 34 years ago. It includes these major elements:

National minimum payments to welfare clients in all the federally supported programs — aid to the aged, blind, permanently disabled and families with dependent children.

Sizeable money incentives to get welfare clients off relief through job training and upgrading of their existing skills.

The addition of $2 billion a year of federal money to the $4.7 billion already commited to welfare, an action that could alleviate the burden of state and local governments struggling with spiraling welfare costs.

The shape of the reform represents a victory for Robert H. Finch, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the presidential assistant for urban affairs.

IT MEETS their goal of closing an "inequity gap" in the present system, which treats totally dependent Americans better than those working but impoverished. It also aims at the Finch-Moynihan goal of diminishing welfare as an institutional way of life.

The scope of the reform is, in a different sense, a victory for Dr. Arthur F. Burns, counselor to the President and the official principally engaged in a six-month welfare reform struggle with Finch and Moynihan. By devising a plan less costly than that originally proposed by the urbanologists, Nixon seemingly has satisfied Burns, keeping the budget within bounds of fiscal caution.

At the heart of the Administration plan is the recognition the welfare system should distinguish among three different types of welfare individuals: The underemployed, and the totally dependent.

The underemployed would be offered a greater hope of earning their way off welfare by keeping a larger share of their outside income.

The trainable unemployed would be spurred to seek a skill by the additional monthly grants.

And the totally dependent, most of them children, would be granted more money to live, hopefully, in more dignity.

The plan should also appeal to Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz by linking reforms to job training and skill upgrading.

Nixon's package plan will not go so far as many reformers want. In fact, it will not be massive enough in scope to assure success of his own 1968 campaign promise to take the poor off the welfare rolls and put them on the payrolls.

THERE IS NO effort to establish a guaranteed annual income or, as some call it, a negative income tax providing every American with enough money to live.

But the White House plan is the first step toward both Nixon's pledge and a guaranteed income.

Shelling by Cong Drops Off

SAIGON (AP) — Enemy shellings dropped to two attacks Saturday, the smallest number in two months.

But the fury of U.S. bombing raids shook buildings in Saigon as B-52 bombers hit targets 17 miles southeast of the capital. The big bombers had not struck so close to Saigon since April 12, when they bombed 14 miles away.

SEVERAL soldiers were wounded in one of the two enemy fire attacks on a South Vietnamese military unit north of Saigon. A U.S. spokesman said there were no casualties or damage in the other attack.

Saturday's shellings in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Saigon time were the lowest since May 30 when one rocket-mortar attack was reported.

Enemy shellings have been followed a generally downward curve since the current lull in ground action began nearly seven weeks ago. During the 24 hours ending Friday morning, enemy gunners hit 11 targets, including five U.S. units or installations where two Americans were wounded.

IN OTHER ground action Saturday, 15 North Vietnamese regulars were killed after being surprised by two Cobra gunships of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division.

The helicopter pilots came across the enemy troops, 15-20 strong, 25 miles northeast of Saigon. The gunships rolled in to attack while summoning fighter-bombers. One helicopter was hit by ground fire but made it safely back to its base at Cu Chi.

The dive bombers mounted three strikes against the enemy positions, then the 25th Division infantry swept the area.

The American troops killed five North Vietnanese and found the bodies of 10 others killed in the air strikes.

Van Thieu's Aide Held as Cong Spy

New York Times Service

SAIGON — A special assistant to President Nguyen van Thieu of South Vietnam and several ranking civil servants and military figures have been arrested in the last 10 days in a government crackdown on an alleged Communist intelligence network.

A government spokesman confirmed Saturday that nearly 50 persons, including Huynh van Trong, Thieu's special assistant for political affairs until his dismissal two weeks ago — and three officials at the ministry that screens Viet Cong defectors, had been rounded up and charged with espionage.

THE INVESTIGATION which may have considerable political overtones, is continuing and more arrests are expected.

Trong was appointed a presidential assistant in March, 1968. According to reliable Vietnamese sources, he was sent to Paris last August or September to prepare the way for South Vietnamese participation in the peace talks.

Last October, he was reported to have gone to the United States along with several other aides to assess the political situation and establish contacts with the campaign staff of the then Republican presidential candidate, Richard M. Nixon.

Among other things, the aides were reported to have extended an invitation to Nixon from Thieu to visit South Vietnam shortly after the election. The invitation was made public a few days after the election but Nixon rejected it.

South Vietnamese police sources described Trong as the central figure in the espionage network, but they declined to give any details of the role he allegedly played.

THE GOVERNMENT spokesman also was unable to provide any details of how the ring operated or what sort of information was allegedly passed to the Viet Cong. The police sources said that several hundred feet of microfilm had been seized in recent weeks along with numerous stolen government documents.

Chinhluan, a South Vietnamese newspaper, reported Saturday the espionage network had been under police scrutiny for almost a year and that it was one of the largest such organizations ever uncovered.

Police sources in Saigon said that the spy ring had contacts in Cambodia, Hong Kong, Laos and France, and that it has passed "strategic military and political intelligence" to the Communists.

United States officials in Saigon said they knew of the existence of the intelligence ring and the government investigation, but declined to give any details. The matter was described as "extremely sensitive" by one senior officer.

Noguchi Asks Look at Hollinger

Dr. Thomas Noguchi, the newly reinstated Los Angeles County coroner, said Friday the Board of Supervisors "owe it to the people to at least look into some of the matters" involving the role of County Administrative Officer Lindon S. Hollinger in his firing.

Noguchi was reinstated to his $31,000-a-year job by the Civil Service Commission Thursday.

Hollinger presented the supervisors with a 10-page letter outlining some 60 charges against the pathologist.

Noguchi said he expected some employes in his department who contributed to the charges against him to probably resign. But he added: "I would like to work with all the people I had before. I hope everybody is going to stay."

The commission held a six-week hearing in the Noguchi case. The coroner was charged in Hollinger's letter of praying for disasters to bring glory to his office.

43 Passengers Rescued From Sinking Airliner

MARSEILLES, France (AP) — An Italian airline transport bounced off the runway and sank in shallow water in a lagoon here Saturday but two fast lifeboats and a helicopter saved all 45 persons aboard.

Officials reported only a few cases of minor injuries and shock.

The twin-jet Caravelle, from Rome, "seemed to have hit the runway awfully fast," said Frenchman Luc Pelegrino, a passenger, "then it sounded like a tire blew out."

The pilot popped the emergency parachute from the tail of the plane, which alerted rescue teams.

The helicopter brought nine professional lifesaver divers who knifed back and forth around the sunken hulk, pushing victims into lifeboats and getting them aboard the helicopter.

The pilot told newsmen later the aircraft touched down normally but that when he applied the brakes, they did not work.

Topless Bill Put on Reagan's Desk

SACRAMENTO (UPI)— The Assembly voted final passage Saturday to the legislature's "topless-bottomless act" Saturday and sent it to Gov. Reagan. The bill permits local government to regulate topless and bottomless shows. There has been confusion about whether the state or cities and county have jurisdiction to regulate unclad waitresses and entertainers.

Senate Okys Inquest Changes

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — The Senate Saturday passed and sent to Gov. Reagan a bill substantially revising the responsibilities of coroner's inquest juries.

The measure, introduced by Assemblyman James A. Hayes, R-Long Beach, would remove the ruling of "justifiable homicide" from the possible verdicts an inquest jury could reach.

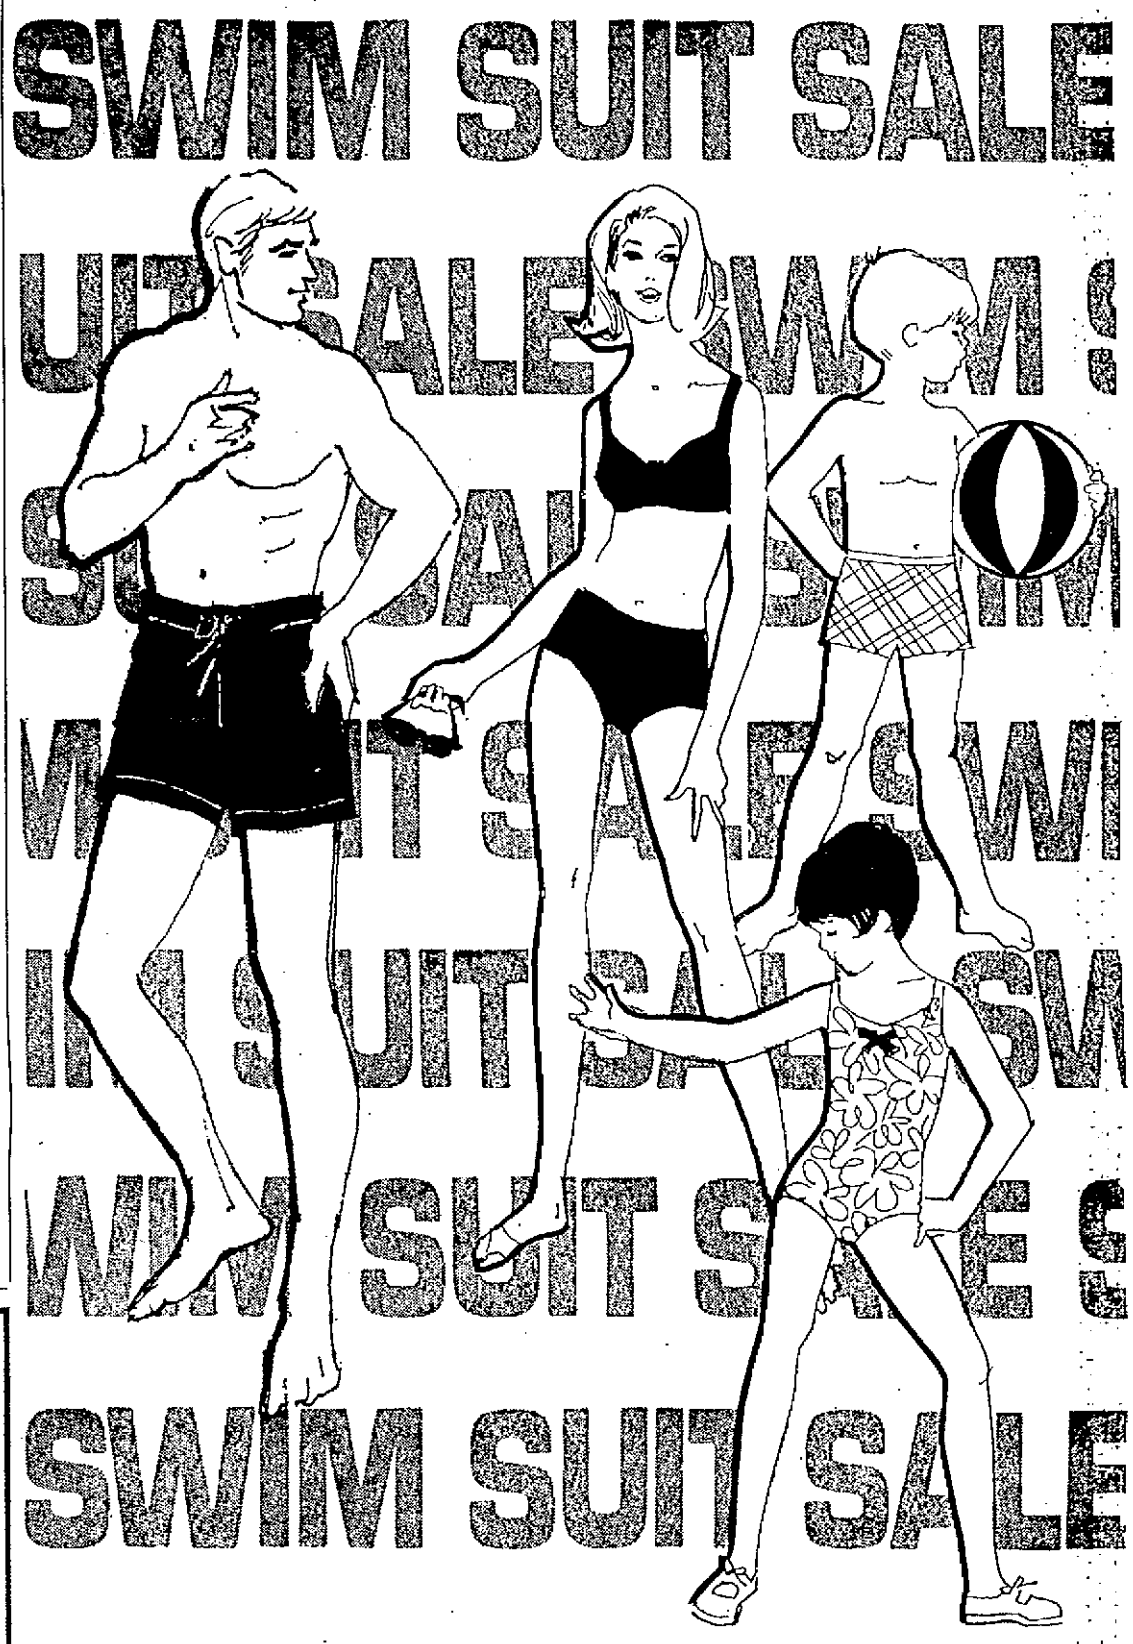

The vote was 29-0. It had passed the Assembly July 8 by a 64-4 vote.

Under the bill, a coroner's jury could return one of four verdicts when it hears a case: death from natural causes, by suicide, by accident, or at the hands of another person.

The district attorney would retain the responsibility of deciding whether to file criminal charges if the latter verdict is reached.

Quake Deaths Told

HONG KONG (UPI)— The Hong Kong Times said Saturday that an earthquake on July 26 killed more than 3,000 persons in the Communist Chinese city of Swatow. There was no confirmation from official sources.

CAP Pilots Risk Their Lives For Others, Receive No Pay

This, according to his friends, was his one luxury.

A CAP member for about four years, he'd fly searches whenever called.

"You could always count on Jim to go out," they said.

He was called Sunday, July 12. His answer: "Sure."

There was a new CAP member, Charles E. Behymer, 41, who had never been on a search before, but was a capable pilot with his own aircraft.

An electrician, Behymer also was a dedicated pilot who worked at extra jobs during the evenings to defray the cost of flying. He had wanted to join in on the CAP searches — 166 during the year — but because he worked weekends on his regular job and many times at night until after midnight, he had to refuse.

His hours at work had been switched just before the weekend of July 12.

So when Patterson called, asking him to join him as observer in the search for the long-missing DC-3, he was quick to answer: "Sure."

They took off early Sunday morning, along with five other Long Beach planes and another 16 from throughout the state.

The rest of them returned to base.

Patterson's plane crashed on the eastern slope of the Sierra, about 20 miles from Bishop, killing both men.

"THEY KNEW when they went out," Lt. Col. Al Soldin says, "that, even if they found the plane, they might not help the people in it — but at least they would end the torment of the families — the torment of not knowing."

This is the theory all CAP members go searching with, especially if the search has gone on for some time, Soldin says.

Since Dec. 7, 1941, the day the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, the Civil Air Patrol has been in operation. Ninety CAP planes were lost during World War II scanning the U.S. coastline for submarines, depth charges under their wings, hunting for downed military planes, transporting military personnel or carrying medical supplies to disaster areas.

And although the war ended, the CAP casualty rate hasn't.

FIFTY WINGS now operate, one in each state, under command of Maj. Gen. Walter B. Putnam, a bespectacled, tough-talking flier who earned the nickname "one man Air Force of Bataan" when he flew 200 missions in the first nine months of World War II.

Putnam controls 85,000 CAP members, administers education to 35,000 cadets and can call on 5,100 aircraft for search and rescue missions from his headquarters in Montgomery, Ala.

And when Putnam calls on California, he comes up with 22 groups broken into 146 squadrons.

MAJ. CASEY JONES, LEFT, LT. COL R. BIDDLE CHART A SEARCH

When he gets to Long Beach Group 7 — under Lt. Col. Arthur E. Biddle, commanding officer, Maj. Casey Jones, administrative officer, and Chief of Staff Soldin — he never lacks for cooperation.

PATTERSON and Behymer were flying with Squadron 65 out of Long Beach Airport. But they could, as well, have been with Squadron 63 from Lynwood, or 132 from Lakewood or 125 from Compton.

All do the same thing. All fly when called on. All take their chances of crashing into the side of a mountain.

Soldin, who has done his share of searching — whether it's for sharks along the swimming beaches, for downed fliers in the mountains, or for a lost child in the desert — claims all who join CAP are "not only dedicated to flying, but to their fellow men."

He cites the case of another Long Beach CAP member, Jerry Roke:

"Jerry took off in bad weather — something few fliers would do — to fly to Burbank to pick up some serum from the Highway Patrol then took off again for Blythe. He saved a five-year-old girl's life with the serum."

Roke was killed two months later when, on another mission, his plane slammed into a mountain near Palomar.

"JERRY WASN'T paid for the mission in which he saved the little girl's life and he wasn't paid for the mission in which he lost his own life," Soldin says. "He was just a dedicated guy."

LT. COL. AL SOLDIN
Group 7 Chief of Staff

CAP searchers, Soldin says, aren't just fresh from the flying school. To search, you must qualify for a special search license which deals with flying in rugged mountain terrain.

"You've got to be checked out on mountain flying. There's no buddy-buddy system here. You're either a pilot or you practice until you become one."

And while you're flying — 500 feet off the ground — you look for small things, the CAP Chief of Staff says, like a small fire or a windshield or metal reflection.

And while flying and looking, you've got to remember the tricks of the trade:

"You never fly into a canyon — always out of it. You always fly on an upwind side of a ridge. You never turn in a canyon. In a desert, looking for a child, you can get to 50 feet above the desert floor, but, preferably, you should stay at 500 feet, and, if there's much turbulence, go to 1,000."

FORGET SOME of the "tricks" or some of the safeguards, the father of six says, and the next plane they're looking for will be yours."

"I don't consider myself a good pilot," Soldin says, "I consider myself a safe pilot. When I hang up my wings and say I'm through, then I can say I'm a good pilot."

Meanwhile, he and the rest of the Long Beach Group pilots will continue to spend their free time flying more missions searching for the lost "Gambler's Special" and other planes that regularly disappear in the rugged Sierra.

They'll pay for their own uniforms, pay for the books they need in their studies, pay for a necessary two-week a year encampment, and even pay dues.

They pay for the privilege of risking their lives to help others.

350,000 Open Sea Festival

Queen's Trophy, which was to be presented late Saturday at the Long Beach Yacht Club.

The Queen's Trophy for the best boat overall went to Luau Moku, a double hulled outrigger canoe complete with lighted torches, hula girls and paddlers. Owners are Bunny Miller and Val Hying, of Long Beach.

The Luau Moku also received the award for best lighted boat.

Award for the best unlighted boat went to the Northern Cross, owned by Roy Jarvis, Independent, Press-Telegram advertising department executive.

Recipient of the award for best musical was Sweet Tooth, owned by Dr. Frank Blair, of Long Beach. Cited as best group display was the U.S. Power Squadron group of which Dr. Blair is commodore.

Troop members of the Long Beach Sea Explorers ship Malolo were honored as the best dressed crew.

The procession of boats, part of a flotilla of more than 100 craft that dotted the bay, was led by the Coast Guard cutters Morris and Point Evans and the service's ice-breaker tug Pendant.

The Long Beach fire boat brought up the rear of the waterborne parade.

As the night wore on, the three and a half miles of shore line marked off for festival attendance remained clogged with spectators who viewed a colorful aerial pyrotechnics display.

Fireworks were rocketed aloft from a floating launching pad — a THUMS barge situated between the two nearer oil islands.

The festival continues today with the Grand National Catalina Water Ski Race, which gets under way at Belmont Pier a 8 a.m.

At 11 a.m., the final two races in the Southern California Pacific catamaran championship will be held, along with the final two races in International Sabot regatta competition.

The catamaran event will be held in Long Beach harbor and the Sabot competition gets under way at Alamitos Bay.

Final events in the American Water Ski Association's regional tournament will be held at Marine Stadium at noon.

Monday, the three first-day races in international Sabot regatta junior competition will be held at Alamitos Bay starting at noon.

Burglars Loot Home

Burglars who looted the home of Emma E. Riley, 26 W. Zane St., took silverware, clothes and cash worth $300, Long Beach police said Saturday.

Record $72,884,227 School Budget Approval Due in L.B.

ure their own cost through the valuation shown on official county tax bill, or estimate it by using 25 per cent of the sale price.)

Budget-shaping procedures were complicated from the first — in March — by the twin millstone of declining state aid and continuing inflationary pressures.

A $3 MILLION deficit officials then feared was averted by trimming some $2.23 million from areas believed least harmful to the educational process. Among these: plant operations and maintenance, capital outlay, special projects and equipment.

Increased salaries and fringe benefits voted in June by the Board of Education for teaching and nonfacenity personnel will cost an additional $3,032,062 next year.

The final recommended expenditure then, of about $72.8 million to operate Long Beach schools was based, officials say, on this rough formula:

Trim original fund requests by $2.23 million; add $3.83 million in salary and other personnel gains; make other budgetary adjustments and arrive at a working total about $2.2 million above last year's.

A breakdown of salary-benefit improvements first became available as budget-making neared an end. Released by the district budget officer were these:

SALARIES

Kindergarten - 12 - grade teachers, 5.1 per cent increase, total additional cost, $1,735,571.

City College, 6.9 per cent, $382,382.

Classified employes, 5 per cent, $448,528.

INCREMENTS

Normal increases granted for seniority and other reasons, $550,000 total, 1.3 per cent.

RETIREMENT

Increases in district's share paid to various retirement funds.

Teachers fund, $152,98.

Classified fund, $78,388.

Social Security, $46,545.

MEDICAL-DENTAL CARE

Medical, $244,850.

Dental (estimated premium for six months beginning Jan. 1) $199,780.

Unofficial figures from California's largest cities indicate Long Beach's 20-cent tax increase ranks among the lowest.

Los Angeles expects to top 49-cents; San Francisco, 64-cents; Oakland, 48-cents; San Diego, 38-cents.

U.S. Lawyers Get Break in Taxes for Fancy Garb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal lawyers are getting an expense-account break on the fancy clothes that tradition requires them to wear when arguing a case before the Supreme Court.

A cutaway coat and striped trousers are the unvarying "uniform" for the barristers but not many of them own such seldom-worn attire. So they have been forced to borrow or rent the clothes at $10 to $15 a day.

Now the comptroller general has ruled that since the formal day wear is required the rental my be claimed as a business expense.

Nixon Wants to Visit 'Just About Everywhere'

BUCHAREST (UPI) — President Nixon, showing signs of fatigue but still beaming, indicated Saturday night he plans to do even more traveling after his current round-the-world trip.

His targets for the next trip appeared to be the Soviet Union and other iron curtain countries as well as the United Arab Republic.

At a reception given by Romanian President Nicolas Ceausescu, Nixon chatted jovially with Soviet ambassador A. V. Basov and told him he would like to visit Russia. There were similar self-invitations extended to other diplomats he met during his 40-minute stay at the party in the Council of Ministers building.

TO THE EGYPTIAN ambassador, Moustapha Moukhtar, Nixon said he hoped to travel someday to the United Arab Republic. "I'm sure you will be very welcome," replied the ambassador's wife.

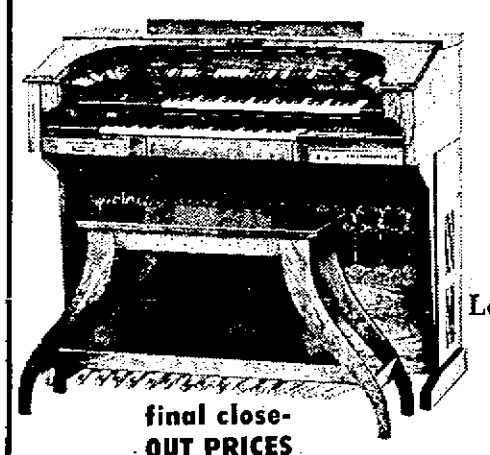

Nixon told the Bulgarian ambassador, Georgi Bogbanov, that Bulgaria was the only country in Eastern Europe that he had not visited.

"History lies behind you," replied Boghanov.

To the Yugoslav ambassador, Jaksa Petric, Nixon expressed regrets that he had not been able on this trip to drop by for a visit with President Josip Broz Tito. And to the Swedish ambassador, Baron Carl Rappe, Nixon said he and his wife hoped to visit Sweden some day and tour all of Scandinavia.

This, according to his friends, was his one luxury.

A CAP member for about four years, he'd fly searches whenever called.

"You could always count on Jim to go out," they said.

He was called Sunday, July 12. His answer: "Sure."

There was a new CAP member, Charles E. Behymer, 41, who had never been on a search before, but was a capable pilot with his own aircraft.

An electrician, Behymer also was a dedicated pilot who worked at extra jobs during the evenings to defray the cost of flying. He had wanted to join in on the CAP searches — 166 during the year — but because he worked weekends on his regular job and many times at night until after midnight, he had to refuse.

His hours at work had been switched just before the weekend of July 12.

So when Patterson called, asking him to join him as observer in the search for the long-missing DC-3, he was quick to answer: "Sure."

They took off early Sunday morning, along with five other Long Beach planes and another 16 from throughout the state.

The rest of them returned to base.

Patterson's plane crashed on the eastern slope of the Sierra, about 20 miles from Bishop, killing both men.

"THEY KNEW when they went out," Lt. Col. Al Soldin says, "that, even if they found the plane, they might not help the people in it — but at least they would end the torment of the families — the torment of not knowing."

This is the theory all CAP members go searching with, especially if the search has gone on for some time, Soldin says.

Since Dec. 7, 1941, the day the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, the Civil Air Patrol has been in operation. Ninety CAP planes were lost during World War II scanning the U.S. coastline for submarines, depth charges under their wings, hunting for downed military planes, transporting military personnel or carrying medical supplies to disaster areas.

And although the war ended, the CAP casualty rate hasn't.

FIFTY WINGS now operate, one in each state, under command of Maj. Gen. Walter B. Putnam, a bespectacled, tough-talking flier who earned the nickname "one man Air Force of Bataan" when he flew 200 missions in the first nine months of World War II.

Putnam controls 85,000 CAP members, administers education to 35,000 cadets and can call on 5,100 aircraft for search and rescue missions from his headquarters in Montgomery, Ala.

And when Putnam calls on California, he comes up with 22 groups broken into 146 squadrons.

MAJ. CASEY JONES, LEFT, LT. COL R. BIDDLE CHART A SEARCH

When he gets to Long Beach Group 7 — under Lt. Col. Arthur E. Biddle, commanding officer, Maj. Casey Jones, administrative officer, and Chief of Staff Soldin — he never lacks for cooperation.

PATTERSON and Behymer were flying with Squadron 65 out of Long Beach Airport. But they could, as well, have been with Squadron 63 from Lynwood, or 132 from Lakewood or 125 from Compton.

All do the same thing. All fly when called on. All take their chances of crashing into the side of a mountain.

Soldin, who has done his share of searching — whether it's for sharks along the swimming beaches, for downed fliers in the mountains, or for a lost child in the desert — claims all who join CAP are "not only dedicated to flying, but to their fellow men."

He cites the case of another Long Beach CAP member, Jerry Roke:

"Jerry took off in bad weather — something few fliers would do — to fly to Burbank to pick up some serum from the Highway Patrol then took off again for Blythe. He saved a five-year-old girl's life with the serum."

Roke was killed two months later when, on another mission, his plane slammed into a mountain near Palomar.

"JERRY WASN'T paid for the mission in which he saved the little girl's life and he wasn't paid for the mission in which he lost his own life," Soldin says. "He was just a dedicated guy."

LT. COL. AL SOLDIN
Group 7 Chief of Staff

CAP searchers, Soldin says, aren't just fresh from the flying school. To search, you must qualify for a special search license which deals with flying in rugged mountain terrain.

"You've got to be checked out on mountain flying. There's no buddy-buddy system here. You're eigher a pilot or you practice until you become one."

And while you're flying — 500 feet off the ground — you look for small things, the CAP Chief of Staff says, like a small fire or a windshield or metal reflection.

And while flying and looking, you've got to remember the tricks of the trade:

"You never fly into a canyon — always out of it. You always fly on an upwind side of a ridge. You never turn in a canyon. In a desert, looking for a child, you can get to 50 feet above the desert floor, but, preferably, you should stay at 500 feet, and, if there's much turbulence, go to 1,000."

FORGET SOME of the "tricks" or some of the safeguards, the father of six says, and the next plane they're looking for will be yours."

"I don't consider myself a good pilot," Soldin says, "I consider myself a safe pilot. When I hang up my wings and say I'm through, then I can say I'm a good pilot."

Meanwhile, he and the rest of the Long Beach Group pilots will continue to spend their free time flying more missions searching for the lost "Gambler's Special" and other planes that regularly disappear in the rugged Sierra.

They'll pay for their own uniforms, pay for the books they need in their studies, pay for a necessary two-week a year encampment, and even pay dues.

They pay for the privilege of risking their lives to help others.

President Cheered Wildly on Arrival in Romania

hands, he sometimes was all but engulfed and nearly knocked off his feet. Ceausescu, smiling, got out with him.

The crowds began chanting Nixon's name then he cried in Romanian: "Long live Romanian-American friendship." Some tossed bouquets into the limousine and shouted "Hoo-rah."

Riding behind the presidential open limousine, Mrs. Nixon in a closed car came close to being overlooked by the crowd. Many did not see her and Mrs. Ceausescu pass by. Mrs. Nixon blew kisses to the crowd.

U.S. ADVISERS hope visit will have a long-range impact in opening up the East European bloc to increasing Western influence. But aides said Nixon did not intend to make any specific commitments during his 27-hour stay, but to discuss topics in general terms.

Romanian trade with the United States, while relatively small, has increased more than tenfold from the $2 million it totaled in 1963. The Romanians would like to get on better trade terms.

In his welcoming speech, the 51-year-old Romanian chief stressed the theme of peaceful coexistence, as "a safe way of building a climate of confidence."

Nixon replied that "the United Saates believes that the rights of all nations must be equal."

HE DECLARED his hope this would permit all Europe to "pursue to fulfillment their just aspirations for a better life, free from the fear of war or threats of war."

"I believe," he continued, "that if human beings can reach the moon, human beings can reach an understanding with each other on the earth.

"If we are to make progress in this lifetime effort, we must see the world as it is, a world of different races, of different nations of different social systems — the real world, where man's main interests divide men and many unite them."

In a toast at a state dinner Nixon apparently took an indirect jibe at what has come to be known as the Brezhnev doctrine of limited sovereignty among Communist states.

"Speaking for the American people, I can say that we respect your national independence and sovereignty," the President told the Romanians. "We wish you success and prosperity in the development of your country."

After the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, the Soviet party chief, Leonid I. Brezhnev, made it clear that so far as the Soviet Union is concerned Communist governments and parties cannot make any decision which damages "socialism."

NIXON SAID: "We know mankind cannot build a just and lasting peace until all nations recognize and respect the rights of other nations, large and small, to a secure existence and to the fulfillment of their national aspirations."

In his answering toast Ceausescu renewed Romanias call for dissolution of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact, the Communist world's equivalent of NATO. He also called for the liquidation of foreign military bases and the withdrawal of all troops inside their national boundaries.

Besides Vietnam, this also referred to the Soviet forces in various East European countries, including Czechoslovakia.

CEAUSESCU said securing conditions that "enable each national to decide its own future and the road of its social and political development is an imperative requirement of international life."

He added the most important condition for peace was to "establish in the relations between all states the principles of independence and national sovereignty, to liquidate once and for all the policy of domination and interference in the internal affairs of others."

THE NIXONS are visiting a housing development and an outdoor village museum Sunday. Then Nixon will hold final conversations with Ceausescu before flying to Britain to give Prime Minister Harold Wilson a brief report on his tour. The Nixons are due back at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland at 8:05 p.m. PDT.

Major radio and television networks said Saturday they had these plans for live coverage of President Nixon's arrival at Andrews Air Force Base Sunday night after the world trip:

Live television — American and National Broadcasting Cos. and Columbia Broadcasting System.

Live radio — CBS, NBC and Mutual Radio. CBS said it will cover the President when he returns to the White House.

ACTION LINE

your payment for all damages—must be filed within 76 days of the accident, Mrs. Berry said.

Bandit Builders

Q. Can ACTION LINE settle a family debate? Are the gambling machines used in Nevada manufactured in the United States? I have heard that all gambling devices must be made outside the country. E.W., Long Beach.

A. Most of the Nevada slot machines, roulette wheels and other gambling equipment are made in the United States, according to Bob Plummer, publicity director for the Mint Hotel in Las Vegas. Some of the casinos have a few specialty slot machines made in Europe, but most of the one-armed bandits are made by the Mills and Raven Companies in Reno and the Bally Co. in Chicago.

Maestro

Q. Can Action LINE find out when and where the great orchestra conductor Eugene Ormandy was born? My mother and aunt are Ormandys and were born in Sarvar, Hungary in the early 1900s. They came to the United States in 1911 and lost all track of their relatives. I wonder if they are related to Ormandy. E.L.B., Long Beach.

A. Ormandy was born Nov. 18, 1899 in Budapest, Hungary, 150 miles form Sarvar. He is the son of Benjamin and Rosalie Ormandy. A child prodigy, he was the youngest student at the Royal Academy of Music at 5½, and received his bachelor of arts degree at 14. He became a music professor at 17. The red-haired conductor moved to the United States in 1921 and became an American citizen. His big break came when he substituted for Toscanini as conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1936. He has been with the orchestra ever since. You can write to Ormandy in care of the Philadelphia Orchestra, 230 S. 15th St., Philadelphia, Pa. 19102.

Patch Work

Q. I have volunteered to make an armed services flag for our church in memory of those members who have lost their lives while in the service. I want to sew the insignias of each branch of the service on the flag, but I have been unable to find them. Can ACTION LINE help? L.B., Long Beach.

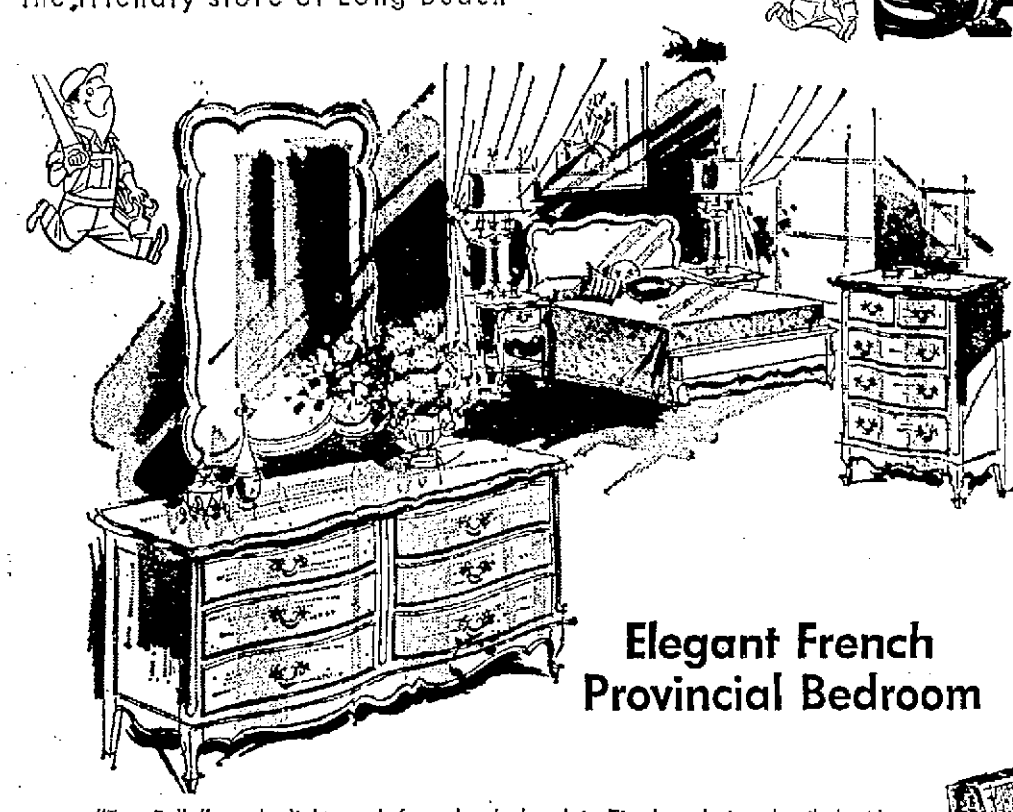

A. Julius Horowitt, a Long Beach tailor, can order military insignia patches for you from New York. The patches cost 50 to 60 cents. Horowitt's shop is located at 205 E. Broadway.

SOUND OFF!

Long Beach landlords are going berserk. They are all getting rich quick. Rents have gone out of reach for ordinary people and people on Social Security. The rents are not only ridiculously high but there are all kinds of restrictions on how many tenants are allowed in an apartment, their age, sex, how many are employed, no cats, no children, no dogs, etc. Some of the places are not fit to live in and should be condemned but still have exhorbitant rents. Something should be done about these money-grabbing landlords like putting a ceiling on rents so people can live in Long Beach like human beings. I, for one, plan to leave Long Beach. There must be better places to live where one can manage on a limited income. E.C., Long Beach.

Riding behind the presidential open limousine, Mrs. Nixon in a closed car came close to being overlooked by the crowd. Many did not see her and Mrs. Ceausescu pass by. Mrs. Nixon blew kisses to the crowd.

U.S. ADVISERS hope visit will have a long-range impact in opening up the East European bloc to increasing Western influence. But aides said Nixon did not intend to make any specific commitments during his 27-hour stay, but to discuss topics in general terms.

Romanian trade with the United States, while relatively small, has increased more than tenfold from the $2 million it totaled in 1963. The Romanians would like to get on better trade terms.

In his welcoming speech, the 51-year-old Romanian chief stressed the theme of peaceful coexistence, as "a safe way of building a climate of confidence."

Nixon replied that "the United Saates believes that the rights of all nations must be equal."

HE DECLARED his hope this would permit all Europe to "pursue to fulfillment their just aspirations for a better life, free from the fear of war or threats of war."

"I believe," he continued, "that if human beings can reach the moon, human beings can reach an understanding with each other on the earth.

"If we are to make progress in this lifetime effort, we must see the world as it is, a world of different races, of different nations of different social systems — the real world, where man's main interests divide men and many unite them."

In a toast at a state dinner Nixon apparently took an indirect jibe at what has come to be known as the Brezhnev doctrine of limited sovereignty among Communist states.

"Speaking for the American people, I can say that we respect your national independence and sovereignty," the President told the Romanians. "We wish you success and prosperity in the development of your country."

After the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, the Soviet party chief, Leonid I. Brezhnev, made it clear that so far as the Soviet Union is concerned Communist governments and parties cannot make any decision which damages "socialism."

NIXON SAID: "We know mankind cannot build a just and lasting peace until all nations recognize and respect the rights of other nations, large and small, to a secure existence and to the fulfillment of their national aspirations."

In his answering toast Ceausescu renewed Romanias call for dissolution of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact, the Communist world's equivalent of NATO. He also called for the liquidation of foreign military bases and the withdrawal of all troops inside their national boundaries.

Besides Vietnam, this also referred to the Soviet forces in various East European countries, including Czechoslovakia.

CEAUSESCU said securing conditions that "enable each national to decide its own future and the road of its social and political development is an imperative requirement of international life."

He added the most important condition for peace was to "establish in the relations between all states the principles of independence and national sovereignty, to liquidate once and for all the policy of domination and interference in the internal affairs of others."

THE NIXONS are visiting a housing development and an outdoor village museum Sunday. Then Nixon will hold final conversations with Ceausescu before flying to Britain to give Prime Minister Harold Wilson a brief report on his tour. The Nixons are due back at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland at 8:05 p.m. PDT.

Major radio and television networks said Saturday they had these plans for live coverage of President Nixon's arrival at Andrews Air Force Base Sunday night after the world trip:

Live television — American and National Broadcasting Cos. and Columbia Broadcasting System.

Live radio — CBS, NBC and Mutual Radio. CBS said it will cover the President when he returns to the White House.

ACTION LINE

your payment for all damages—must be filed within 76 days of the accident, Mrs. Berry said.

Bandit Builders

Q. Can ACTION LINE settle a family debate? Are the gambling machines used in Nevada manufactured in the United States? I have heard that all gambling devices must be made outside the country. E.W., Long Beach.

A. Most of the Nevada slot machines, roulette wheels and other gambling equipment are made in the United States, according to Bob Plummer, publicity director for the Mint Hotel in Las Vegas. Some of the casinos have a few specialty slot machines made in Europe, but most of the one-armed bandits are made by the Mills and Raven Companies in Reno and the Bally Co. in Chicago.

Maestro

Q. Can Action LINE find out when and where the great orchestra conductor Eugene Ormandy was born? My mother and aunt are Ormandys and were born in Sarvar, Hungary in the early 1900s. They came to the United States in 1911 and lost all track of their relatives. I wonder if they are related to Ormandy. E.L.B., Long Beach.

A. Ormandy was born Nov. 18, 1899 in Budapest, Hungary, 150 miles form Sarvar. He is the son of Benjamin and Rosalie Ormandy. A child prodigy, he was the youngest student at the Royal Academy of Music at 5½, and received his bachelor of arts degree at 14. He became a music professor at 17. The red-haired conductor moved to the United States in 1921 and became an American citizen. His big break came when he substituted for Toscanini as conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1936. He has been with the orchestra ever since. You can write to Ormandy in care of the Philadelphia Orchestra, 230 S. 15th St., Philadelphia, Pa. 19102.

Patch Work

Q. I have volunteered to make an armed services flag for our church in memory of those members who have lost their lives while in the service. I want to sew the insignias of each branch of the service on the flag, but I have been unable to find them. Can ACTION LINE help? L.B., Long Beach.

A. Julius Horowitt, a Long Beach tailor, can order military insignia patches for you from New York. The patches cost 50 to 60 cents. Horowitt's shop is located at 205 E. Broadway.

SOUND OFF!

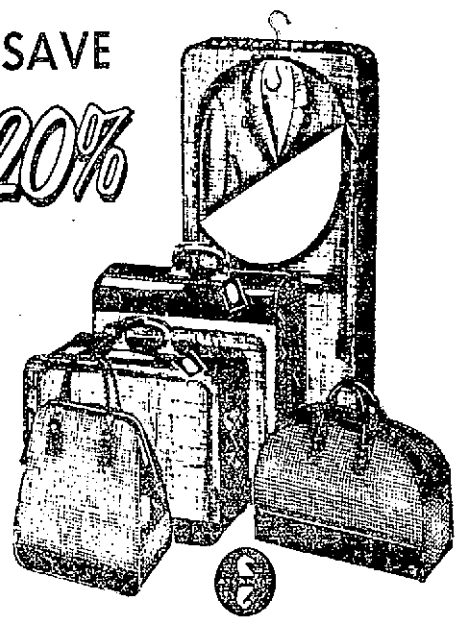

Long Beach landlords are going berserk. They are all getting rich quick. Rents have gone out of reach for ordinary people and people on Social Security. The rents are not only ridiculously high but there are all kinds of restrictions on how many tenants are allowed in an apartment, their age, sex, how many are employed, no cats, no children, no dogs, etc. Some of the places are not fit to live in and should be condemned but still have exhorbitant rents. Something should be done about these money-grabbing landlords like putting a ceiling on rents so people can live in Long Beach like human beings. I, for one, plan to leave Long Beach. There must be better places to live where one can manage on a limited income. E.C., Long Beach.

Mariner 6 Data Shows No Evidence of Life on Mars

By RALPH DIGHTON

PASADENA (AP) — Mariner 6 has turned up no evidence that even the crudest form of vegetation could exist on Mars, a panel of scientists agreed Saturday.

A U.S. Space Agency official said, however, that continued search for life on the apparently barren planet is justified.

The statements came at a new conference at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory on scientific findings of Mariner 6, held as a sister spacecraft, Mariner 7, was televising approach pictures preliminary to a 2,080-mile-high flyby of Mars Tuesday.

Dr. John E. Naugle, associate administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, summarized the scientists' reports:

"If there are any Martians traveling about the universe they probably would go to the moon rather than earth because the moon would appear more hospitable to them."

He was referring to photographs televised by Mariner 6 earlier in the week that show the Martian surface as rugged, desolate and crater-pocked much like earth's moon.

Other scientists said the pictures and information from electronic instruments on Mariner 6 also showed:

The Martian atmosphere contains little if any nitrogen or oxygen, two of the elements necessary to support earth-type life. Gases detected include hydrogen, a very small amount of oxygen, carbon monoxide and carbon dioxide.

There are definite indications of water ice in scattered low areas scanned during the spacecraft's equatorial sweep as it flew within 2,130 miles for closest-ever analysis of the surface. The ice is very thin, however, only a fraction of an inch thick — much like frost on earth.

Temperatures in the scanned regions range from 75 degrees Fahrenheit during the day to 100 degrees below zero at night.

The mission of the two spacecraft was to determine whether Mars' hostile environment could harbor life, a subject of speculation for centuries. Their findings will help with the design of planned future interplanetary explorers.

One of the most surprising findings was that Mars' atmosphere apparently has no nitrogen, one of the major elements of earth's air and a necessity for life as we know it.

Apollo's Top Scientist Quits Post

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The Space Center's chief scientist resigned without explanation, dropping a different kind of puzzle into the investigation of moon mysteries under way here Saturday.

Dr. Wilmot N. Hess announced he was quitting as director of science and applications at the manned spacecraft center. The unexpected announcement was all the more surprising since it came amid the center's biggest scientific effort, the study of lunar fragments and other information brought back from the moon by Apollo 11.

He will become director of research laboratories of the Environmental Sciences Service Administration at Boulder, Colo. He refused to discuss his reasons for leaving, or the timing of the announcement.

He said the Apollo 11 mission was "a tremendous success scientifically."

"We accomplished all the scientific experiments planned," he said. "The crew did a terrific job in the sample collection."

U.S., Soviet Fleets Visit Yugoslav Port

BELGRADE (AP) — Ships of the Soviet Black Sea fleet and the American Sixth Fleet visited Yugoslavia at the same time, it was disclosed here Saturday.

It was believed to be the first time ships of the two major powers had called in simultaneously at the ports of any country.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said a detachment of Soviet ships left the south Adriatic port of Kotor Saturday after a seven-day visit. The U.S. rocket destroyer Dewey arrived Thursday at Dubrovnik for a four-day visit, Tanjug said.

'Professor' is 11; He Teaches 48 Teachers

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Slim, blond Scott Buethe, 11, walked into his father's college class at New Mexico State University last week and gave 48 seasoned teachers a lesson in rocketry.

Scotty, who will be a sixth grader this fall, gave a lecture and advised his students Wednesday as each one built a single-stage model rocket. Thursday he supervised as each student successfully launched and recovered his rocket.

Scotty's father, Dr. Chris Buethe, instructor for the first graduate course in "aerospace education," said his son is one of about 15 "resource persons" for the class. The others are adults.

Scotty has an IQ of "over 140."

TWO YEARS AGO Scotty had a straight A average, his father said. "But he dropped off a little last year. School gets kind of boring in places when you're not allowed and encouraged to study on your own. "There's an exciting world to learn about, but it's not always in school."

For Scotty, that world is in aerospace technology. "I've always dreamed of being the first person to step onto Mars."

He started building model rockets from commercial sets about a year ago.

"He now has got to the stage where he studies the specifications of the parts and has started designing some of his own to get a little better, performance," said his father. "Walking into his room sometimes is a bit dangerous."

Scotty wasn't awed by teaching a college class. It was fun, he said later.

But his father said the boy had his notes prepared more than a month in advance and was so excited the day of the lecture that he forgot a box of rocket parts. His mother had to bring them to him in class.

HIS STUDENTS, 42 of them women, were attentive and impressed. Mrs. Eda Baird, a fifth grade teacher, said Scott "accomplished more than an adult."

The top student in the class was Mrs. Robert Murphy, who will be Scott's science teacher next fall.

"They respected me as a grown teacher," Scotty said later.

"At first they didn't know the terms, but they learned them and remembered them and we moved right along."

Outside the classroom, Scotty has a special interest in swimming and excels at diving. He also likes baseball.

His father, who has taught high school and college physics, said he has encouraged Scotty's interests, but hasn't pushed him.

Scotty wants to be a pilot, his father said, "and we agree with his evaluation of himself. He has good eyes, good coordination and intelligence. But sometimes it kind of frightens you. He's already asking my advice about his college major."

GARY MILLER AND FATHER, CHARLES, AFTER 'BOMB' REMOVAL

Night of Terror; Angry Teacher Hangs 'Bomb' on Youth's Neck

FESTUS, Mo. (AP)— A 60-year-old high school teacher who was irked because someone put sugar in the fuel tank of his auto, was charged with felonious assault Saturday after authorities dismantled his "homemade bomb" from around the neck of a 19-year-old boy.

Rupert M. Johnson, a teacher of vocational education at Crystal City High School, was held in lieu of $50,000 bond in Jefferson County Jail.

Gary L. Miller was recuperating from a night of terror that ended on a high school football field where bomb experts cautiously removed the device.

IT ALL STARTED at 3:30 p.m. Friday when Johnson went to the Miller home to complain about repair work Gary's father, Charles Miller, did on the Johnson car.

Sheriff's Deputy Irvin Ferguson said "apparently he (Johnson) thought there was still some sugar in the engine."

Only Gary Miller was home, said Festus Police Chief Burl Rudisiale, and Johnson asked Gary to accompany him to his home to help convince Mrs. Johnson to buy a car.

Gary told officers that Johnson displayed a .32 caliber automatic pistol and bound and gagged him. After he was blindfolded the pipe device was placed around his neck and tightened, Gary said. It consisted of four ½-inch diameter pipes connected by elbows.

The boy was allowed to summon his father and later a former circuit court judge, Edward T. Eversole, was called to the Johnson home. All were held at gunpoint, police said.

EVERSOLE RAN into the bathroom and escaped out the window and in the confusion the elder Miller subdued Johnson.

Police said Johnson warned the pipe collar would blow up if touched. He told officers he had made a similar one that he tested on a dog and that it had "blown the dog's head off."

Bomb experts from the St. Louis Police Department, 35 miles away, and the Granite City, Ill., Army Engineer Depot were called. They tried to beat a one-hour deadline that Johnson mentioned as the time he set for explosion.

The boy was taken to the center of a high school football field and the deadline passed without incident.

Shortly after 3 a.m. authorities removed the so-called bomb. It contained only a few pieces of wood, a small battery and some heavy string.

Trial Hinted for Ousted Czech Aide

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) - The Communist party newspaper Rude Pravo published Saturday what it called parts of the secret files of former Interior Minister Josef Pavel, increasing speculation that he will be tried.

Alexander Dubcek, former reformist leader of the Communist party, was forced to fire Pavel after the soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in August, 1968. Pavel is living in Prague.

The Rude Pravo article apparently was designed to prove that Pavel fell down on his job, but the material quoted showed his agents were shadowing westerners and liberal Czechoslovaks and analyzing their activities.

Hargis Will Build College in Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The director of the Christian Crusade, Rev. Billy James Hargis, announced Saturday he plans to built a two-year liberal arts college here to teach "God, government and Christian action."

Hargis told the annual crusade convention the college will open in 1970 as a two-year institution and will later be changed into a four-year college.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

by Dennis A. Foltz
of Lawson's Jewelers
Downtown Long Beach Only

Last week we asked "Did you know, for example, there is no such item as a "Blue-White Perfect" diamond?"

Here are but a few of the reasons why there is no "Blue-White Perfect" diamond:

A diamond is a product of nature. From the scientific view, it is crystallized carbon. However, no one has been able to explain exactly how a diamond was created. Being a product of nature, it could not be perfect, as nothing created by nature is ever "perfect." Perfection is "the state of being without defect, flaw, or blemish."

Do you know anything, created by nature, that meets the definition of perfection? Not even a flower, nor the sunset, nor a bird, nor man or woman.

Thus, as to perfection, it is the degree of perfection. For commercial purposes, the definition of a "perfect" diamond is that you cannot detect a defect, flaw, or blemish with the aid of a 10 power microscope. However, if you use a 20 power microscope or a 40 power one, you would probably detect an imperfection.

Such an imperfection, or inclusion (this is the word the trade uses to mean a defect, flaw, or blemish within the diamond) does not detract from the intrinsic value or beauty of a diamond because, as we have just explained, every diamond has some.

So it is the degree of imperfection or inclusion that one should be aware of. As no two diamonds are alike, just as there are no two fingerprints exactly alike, such imperfections, or inclusions, act as identification marks for that particular diamond.

Please note that for those who follow the Stars: If you were born under the influence of Leo, the Lion, from August 14th until August 23rd, the jewel to wear is DIAMOND.

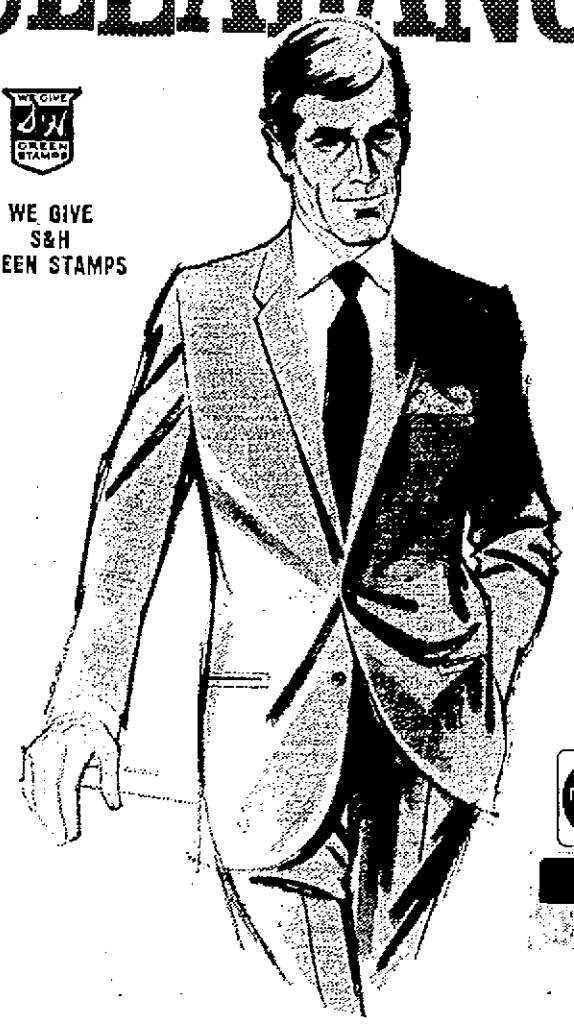

Next week we will tell you how such imperfections or inclusions are reflected in the value of the diamond.

Remember, we, at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach Only, will try and answer any question you may write to us about. If possible we would publish such question and the answer in this newspaper.

Civil Defense Is Fighting for Its Survival

By PHILIP BALBONI

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — The United States civil defense program is in its most critical phase since the frantic,. early days of the cold war. In many ways, it is fighting for economical survival.

The little known problems of civil defense — the nationwide program of preparedness against nuclear attack and natural disaster — were explained in an interview with one of the country's top civil defense experts, Allan R. Zenowitz, president of the National Association of State Civil Defense Directors and director of the Massachusetts Civil Defense Agency. He is regarded as one of the best organized and most efficient of men in America.

ZENOWITZ, AN extremely enthusiastic advocate of civil defense, was back from a two-day strategy session in Washington with his eight regional civil defense vice presidents. At that meeting top policy considerations were discussed, and Zenowitz indicated that a major review was under way at the highest levels of government.

While President Nixon's Safeguard antiballistic missile system was not discussed directly, Zenowitz said the civil defense directors were under pressure from the Pentagon and other places to come out in support of the program.

He freely admitted that should the ABM go down to defeat in Congress or be compromised severely, the burdens of civil defense would be increased vastly.

"This is the last stand for civil defense," Zenowitz said.

"No, I'd like to change that — let's say we hope to maintain our present level of operations, but the program is in very severe difficulty and our financial belt gets tighter and tighter all the time."

CONGRESS, ZENOWITZ said, is being asked for $68 million for civil defense nationwide. "What we would need now to give the program real impetus is $150 million and that would be a drop in the bucket.

"To get a program of real substance you would need $350 million," he said. The chances of getting that amount from a Congress deluged as never before by appropriations requests from every governmental agency, Zenowitz suggested, were almost nonexistent.

One of the director's top assistants, Richard Ridgeway, who sat in on the interview, said if the National Civil Defense budget "were cut next year by say another $8 million, we're in deep trouble."

Ridgeway, who participated in the Washington talks, said it was the consensus of those present that America's overall posture for wartime emergency, especially the much publicized shelter program, was minimal. "While local governments are interested in civil defense," he said, "the federal government's interest has been a rapid retrograde movement. They are now barely giving us enough to survive and we cannot afford to lose any more of our key people."

HE SAID it was the conclusion of the regional vice presidents that the "fallout protection system is still the best system in use today of saving lives in case of nuclear attack and is relatively inexpensive." However, Ridgeway added, the program "fails to excite public interest and is heavily cloaked in misunderstanding."

Both Zenowitz and Ridgeway agreed that the backyard shleters of the 1950s and the early 1960s were fading fast and while still effective against radiation and fallout, the elaborate shelters once advocated had proven both too expensive and generally unnecessary.

Zenowitz pointed out with dismay that while the Soviet Union spends $5 per capita per year on civil defense and European countries average better than $2 per capita (Switzerland also spends $5 per capita., the United States alots less than 40 cents per person annually for civil defense.

"THE SOVIETS play for the marbles in civil defense," Zenowitz said with little trace of humor.

"We must be prepared for irrational acts by other governments. The Soviets we know well now, but if that government collapsed, what would happen?" he asked.

"We're not selling death insurance — this is life insurance and nobody wants to use their life insurance."

ASKED WHAT specific steps were needed for the future improvement of civil defense, Zenowitz gave these:

—Training programs in every school in the country which would teach all aspects of public safety. "This is the most important priority," he said.

—Shelters in new urban areas, in subways and in industry, with great emphasis on dual or multipurpose structures to make shelters more attractive economically.

—A much improved warning system so a person "will know what is happening, have confidence in government and in survival."

—Public information and forging a new image for civil defense. "This tin hat and whistle image is a thing of the past. We are not just waiting for the big bomb. What we need in civil defense is a marketable product which will interest the public," he said.

The director also recommended inclusion of shelters in every new federal building and in those which use federal funds for construction (this is now before Congress combining all disaster preparedness operations into a unified program, greater involvement by the private sector and encouraging young people to enter civil defense as a career.

Zenowitz summed it up this way: "Civil defense will be with us this whole century because of the world situation, its instabilities. We feel we have nowhere to go but up. My worry now is for the man in the street if the balloon goes up tomorrow."

Civil Defense Is Fighting for Its Survival

By PHILIP BALBONI

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — The United States civil defense program is in its most critical phase since the frantic, early days of the cold war. In many ways, it is fighting for economical survival.

The little known problems of civil defense — the nationwide program of preparedness against nuclear attack and natural disaster — were explained in an interview with one of the country's top civil defense experts, Allan R. Zenowitz, president of the National Association of State Civil Defense Directors and director of the Massachusetts Civil Defense Agency. He is regarded as one of the best organized and most efficient of men in America.

ZENOWITZ, AN extremely enthusiastic advocate of civil defense, was back from a two-day strategy session in Washington with his eight regional civil defense vice presidents. At that meeting top policy considerations were discussed, and Zenowitz indicated that a major review was under way at the highest levels of government.

While President Nixon's Safeguard antiballistic missile system was not discussed directly, Zenowitz said the civil defense directors were under pressure from the Pentagon and other places to come out in support of the program.

He freely admitted that should the ABM go down to defeat in Congress or be compromised severely, the burdens of civil defense would be increased vastly.

"This is the last stand for civil defense," Zenowitz said.

"No, I'd like to change that — let's say we hope to maintain our present level of operations, but the program is in very severe difficulty and our financial belt gets tighter and tighter all the time."

CONGRESS, ZENOWITZ said, is being asked for $68 million for civil defense nationwide. "What we would need now to give the program real impetus is $150 million and that would be a drop in the bucket.

"To get a program of real substance you would need $350 million," he said. The chances of getting that amount from a Congress deluged as never before by appropriations requests from every governmental agency, Zenowitz suggested, were almost nonexistent.

One of the director's top assistants, Richard Ridgeway, who sat in on the interview, said if the National Civil Defense budget "were cut next year by say another $8 million, we're in deep trouble."

Ridgeway, who participated in the Washington talks, said it was the consensus of those present that America's overall posture for wartime emergency, especially the much publicized shelter program, was minimal. "While local governments are interested in civil defense," he said, "the federal government's interest has been a rapid retrograde movement. They are now barely giving us enough to survive and we cannot afford to lose any more of our key people."

HE SAID it was the conclusion of the regional vice presidents that the "fallout protection system is still the best system in use today of saving lives in case of nuclear attack and is relatively inexpensive." However, Ridgeway added, the program "fails to excite public interest and is heavily cloaked in misunderstanding."

Both Zenowitz and Ridgeway agreed that the backyard shleters of the 1950s and the early 1960s were fading fast and while still effective against radiation and fallout, the elaborate shelters once advocated had proven both too expensive and generally unnecessary.

Zenowitz pointed out with dismay that while the Soviet Union spends $5 per capita per year on civil defense and European countries average better than $2 per capita (Switzerland also spends $5 per capita., the United States alots less than 40 cents per person annually for civil defense.

"THE SOVIETS play for the marbles in civil defense," Zenowitz said with little trace of humor.

"We must be prepared for irrational acts by other governments. The Soviets we know well now, but if that government collapsed, what would happen?" he asked.

"We're not selling death insurance — this is life insurance and nobody wants to use their life insurance."

ASKED WHAT specific steps were needed for the future improvement of civil defense, Zenowitz gave these:

—Training programs in every school in the country which would teach all aspects of public safety. "This is the most important priority," he said.

—Shelters in new urban areas, in subways and in industry, with great emphasis on dual or multipurpose structures to make shelters more attractive economically.

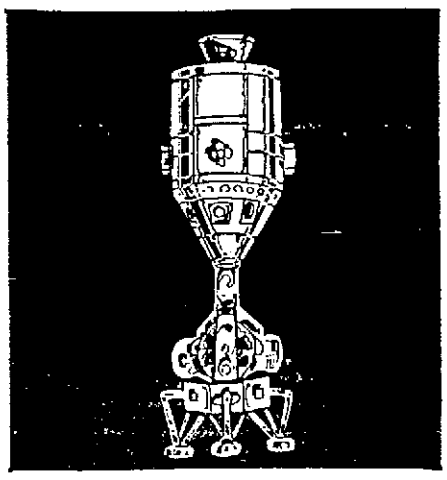

—A much improved warning system so a person "will know what is happening, have confidence in government and in survival."

—Public information and forging a new image for civil defense. "This tin hat and whistle image is a thing of the past. We are not just waiting for the big bomb. What we need in civil defense is a marketable product which will interest the public," he said.

The director also recommended inclusion of shelters in every new federal building and in those which use federal funds for construction (this is now before Congress combining all disaster preparedness operations into a unified program, greater involvement by the private sector and encouraging young people to enter civil defense as a career.

Zenowitz summed it up this way: "Civil defense will be with us this whole century because of the world situation, its instabilities. We feel we have nowhere to go but up. My worry now is for the man in the street if the balloon goes up tomorrow."

ANOTHER STEP ON ROAD BACK
Ex-Alcoholic James Carter and Bride, Hermine

Reclaimed Bum Wed in Bowery Mission

By ELIZABETH BASSETT

NEW YORK (AP) — Bowery bums and other friends were at the Bowery Mission Saturday afternoon to see James H. Carter get married — another step on the road back for the onetime minister who spent 14 years as an alcoholic.

Carter, 54, and Hermine Elizabeth Schmid, 46, were wed in a half-hour ceremony that terminated with the bridegroom blowing a kiss to the bride.

The wedding was the first ever held in the 90-year history of the Bowery Mission, the skid-row shelter that helped reclaim Carter from the dereliction into which he drifted following a family tragedy 16 years ago.

On June 12, 1953, Carter's wife of seven years and his expected child died in childbirth. The episcopal minister started drinking and in two months — after a life in which his strongest drink had been communion wine — he was an alcoholic.

HE GAVE UP his ministry and wandered the country, once finding himself in California but not able to remember how he got there.

He said he was picked up for vagrancy more than 50 times during a year and a half in Washington, D.C. When he was out of jail, he panhandled.

In 1959, after two years in New York, living in flophouses and on park benches, he went to the Bowery Mission for help. The mission provides food, clothes, shelter and therapy for alcoholics who enter the three- to six-month program.

Getting back on the wagon was long and uncertain, but he has not had a drink in two years.

"I just want to forget the past," Carter said on his wedding day. "A lot of it was very unhappy.

Carter has been acting as assistant to the director of the mission. "This is where I found peace and life as it ought to be," he said.

AFTER A BRIEF honeymoon, the couple will move to Warwick, N.Y., a small town 50 miles north of New York City where they will live with his wife's parents.

Carter met his wife, a now-retired telephone operator, five months ago at the home of one-time drinking buddy, Leo Heller. Heller who acted as best man, now heads the Good Shepherd Mission in Paterson, N.J.

Carter said it took "exactly one month for me to propose and she accepted before I even said it."

CANDID ABOUT COST

Pentagon is Leery of Plane Criticism

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's announcement that new anti-submarine warfare planes would cost about $16.2 million each departed from a past practice which plagued the Defense Department in the case of the C-5A supertransport aircraft.

What the Defense Department did in announcing Friday a contract to develop the S-3A antisubmarine warfare aircraft was to use the highest cost estimate, rather than the lower flyaway price as was done with the C-5A nearly four years ago.

This time, the Pentagon cranked in such costs as spare parts, training, various kinds of support equipment and other factors which brought up the unit price but probably minimized the possibility of embarrassing cost overruns in later years.

OFFICIALS SAID that if they had chosen the flyaway cost for the S-3A, omitting spare parts and other related expenses, they could have used an estimated price as low at $8.2 million for each new plane.

The contract for the C-5A supertransport now carries an estimated price of $5.125 billion, $1.756 billion over the estimate of four years ago.

This has caused strong attacks in Congress on Pentagon pricing policies and on the whole conduct of military procurement.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird appears to be attempting, with the S-3A project, to avoid the grief which resulted from the C-5A episode and others in the same ball park.

The anti-submarine plane for the 1970s will be built under a contract which provides for close scrutiny at periodic stages in the eight-year program, to monitor what are called performance milestones.

THUS, IF THE contractor falls short at any stage, the Pentagon would be in position to withhold subsequent production authorizations.

This contract is the first practical test of the new Pentagon regime's stated intention to control closely the whole contracting process so as to curb cost overruns which have become a way of life in military buying.

The announcement Friday pledged "close and constant management direction will be maintained."

Pastor Says Hanoi Will Free 3 GIs

CHICAGO (UPI) — The head of the "Remember the Pueblo Committee" said Saturday he learned from a "high level government source" that three U.S. servicemen captured by the North Vietnamese will be released by Wednesday.

The Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom, a suburban minister who heads the Pueblo committee, said his information came from the same government source which correctly informed the committee last December of the impending release of the crew of the captured intelligence ship by Communist North Korea. The Pueblo crew was freed a week later, on Dec. 23, 1968.

In Washington a State Department spokesman said it would have no comment on Lindstrom's statement. He said the State Department had heard nothing about the three prisoners of war since the North Vietnamese announced July 3 that they would be freed.

City Fires Police Force, But the Sheriff Moves In

ANDERSON (AP) — City Manager Gary Oberholzer fired Anderson's striking policemen and dispatchers Saturday after they showed up to return to work.

Shasta County sheriff's deputies, who had been asked to help provide protection for the sawmill city of about 6,000, took over the police station and declared it a sheriff's office substation.

Oberholzer's mass dismissal came less than 24 hours after the nine policemen and dispatchers had gone on strike over his firing of Chief Christopher Bell.

THEY HAD agreed to return to work if the city council would agree to hear their grievances. The council has scheduled a meeting for Monday morning.

The controversy centers on the council's attempts to trim the size of the police force to fit within its budget. Bell criticized the council for wanting to cut his staff, and he was fired.

The only regular policeman left in town is Lt. John Holland, second in command under Bell, who has said, "I'm staying right here." Two dispatchers, one of them on vacation, are still on the force.

The Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom, a suburban minister who heads the Pueblo committee, said his information came from the same government source which correctly informed the committee last December of the impending release of the crew of the captured intelligence ship by Communist North Korea. The Pueblo crew was freed a week later, on Dec. 23, 1968.

In Washington a State Department spokesman said it would have no comment on Lindstrom's statement. He said the State Department had heard nothing about the three prisoners of war since the North Vietnamese announced July 3 that they would be freed.

City Fires Police Force, But the Sheriff Moves In

ANDERSON (AP) — City Manager Gary Oberholzer fired Anderson's striking policemen and dispatchers Saturday after they showed up to return to work.

Shasta County sheriff's deputies, who had been asked to help provide protection for the sawmill city of about 6,000, took over the police station and declared it a sheriff's office substation.

Oberholzer's mass dismissal came less than 24 hours after the nine policemen and dispatchers had gone on strike over his firing of Chief Christopher Bell.

THEY HAD agreed to return to work if the city council would agree to hear their grievances. The council has scheduled a meeting for Monday morning.

The controversy centers on the council's attempts to trim the size of the police force to fit within its budget. Bell criticized the council for wanting to cut his staff, and he was fired.

The only regular policeman left in town is Lt. John Holland, second in command under Bell, who has said, "I'm staying right here." Two dispatchers, one of them on vacation, are still on the force.

Magnuson Against Use of Safeguard

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Warren G. Magnuson said Saturday he would vote against deployment of the Safeguard antiballistic missile at this time because the weight of scientific opinion suggested it "may never work."

Next Wednesday, after four weeks of debate, the Senate will vote on President Nixon's proposal to deploy the Safeguard system. The first vote, and the crucial one, probably will be on an amendment by Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., and Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., which would permit continuation of research and development but prohibit deployment in the coming year.

MAGNUSON DID not say he would vote specifically for the Cooper-Hart amendment, but he did not qualify his opposition to deployment.

The opposition to the antimissile system had counted the Washington Democrat among their number for some days, but this was his first formal statement.

The opponents now believe they have 50 of the 51 votes needed to pass the Cooper-Hart amendment. Two senators, John J. Williams, R-Del., and Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., still are counted uncommitted. If they should vote with the Administration, then the amendment would be defeated on a tie vote under Senate rules.

The opponents believe Williams will vote with the Administration. But they have some hope of getting Anderson's vote simply because he is concerned that an issue of such transcendent importance should be decided by such a close vote.

2 Survive 300-Foot Fall in Car

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two men escaped death when their vehicle plunged 300 feet into a canyon from the Angeles Crest Highway Friday night.

Describing the accident "a nightmare," George Overton, 43, of Pasadena told sheriff's deputies that he believes he dozed off for a brief moment and when he awakened, the lights of an oncoming car blinded him. The next thing he knew, his car was plunging down the mountain.

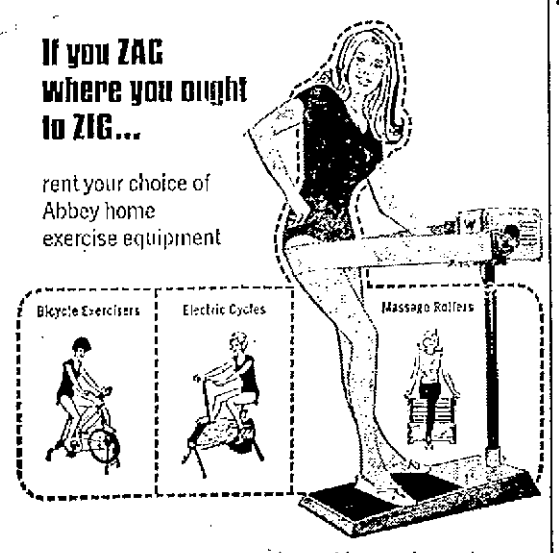

John Alexander, 54, Pasadena, a passenger in Overton's car, was unconscious and wedged into the car when it came to a halt, Overton said.

Overton, suffering from a broken arm, hiked up to the highway where a motorist picked him up 10 hours after the accident.

Italy Chiefs Fight to End Crisis

New York Times Service

ROME — Amintore Fanfani, president of the Italian senate, accepted Saturday night an "exploratory mandate" to find a solution to the 28-day-old political crisis that Caretaker Premier Mariano Rumor said he had failed to resolve.

Fanfani's task, knowledgeable political sources said, will be to reconcile feuding Socialists to a one-party Christian Democrat government to be headed by Rumor, who had been premier for nearly seven months when a Socialist schism toppled his government July 5. The "exploratory" mandate given the 61-year-old Fanfani, it was noted, is similar to that given to the head of the chamber of deputies just before Rumor's first cabinet was formed last December.

FANFANI was called in after President Giuseppe Saragat ended a day of formal political consultations with leaders of the nation's 12 parliamentary groupings. According to a communique issued at the head of state's Quirinale Palace after their talk, Fanfani is to report back there today on his efforts "to integrate the elements of judgment expressed" by the "various political forces."

As Caretaker Premier, Rumor was given a broad mandate July 13 to form a new government. He was unable to heal the Socialist division and unable, initially, to get Socialist voting support for a one-party, minority cabinet of Christian Democrats. When he reported his failure, his negotiations with the leftwing Socialists were stalled on their demand that the one-party rule be of fixed duration and be followed by a resurrection of the old coalition.

Laotians Want More U.S. Bomber Support

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — The Laotian high command wants U.S. Air Force bombers to double the number of strikes flown in support of Laotian troops battling North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao forces, Laotian cabinet sources said Saturday.

The sources said Gen. Ouane Rattikone, the Laotian commander-in-chief asked the government to request the additional raids when he briefed the cabinet on the military situation at a meeting this week.

OUANE was reported to have told government ministers that his troops are becoming demoralized by continued heavy casualties and an inability to stave off advances for better armed, more numerous Communist forces.

THE SOURCES said Ouane believed that direct ground intervention by a major power, presumably the United States, was going to be necessary in Laos if the political moves by Premier Souvanna Phouma did not succeed in getting the Communists to call off their military drive.

Two Czech Leaders in Soviet

New York Times Service

MOSCOW — Czechoslovak Communist Party Leader Gustav Husak and President Ludvik Svoboda arrived Saturday in the Crimea, less than three weeks before the anniversary of last year's Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Tass, the Soviet press agency, said the Czechoslovak leaders were met at the Simferopol Airport by Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nikolai V. Podgorny.

THE TRIP had not been announced beforehand and Tass said they had come to the Soviet Union "at the invitation of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee for a short vacation."

Most diplomatic observers believe that the Soviet and Czechoslovak leaders will combine the vacation with a thorough review of the current situation in Czechoslovakia and of the possibility of any disorders breaking out on the anniversary of the invasion on Aug. 21.

Police Find 2 Victims of Sniper Car

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — Two young men were shot to death Saturday by what police believed were snipers in a moving auto.

Police quoted witnesses to the first swaying as saying shots were fired from a car carrying six Negroes. Both victims were white.

The shots, presumably from a high-power rifle, penetrated a parked car, killing one of five occupants, police said. Barry Laverne Kimmet, 24, of New Providence, was shot through the head.

A few minutes later police found Charles Daniel Gebhard, 23, of Lancaster, slumped over the wheel of his car. He died shortly afterward in a hospital.

President Shores Diplomatic Dikes

BY DON HASTINGS

The World

PRESIDENT RICHARD M. NIXON shored diplomatic dikes last week on the Asian leg of a whirlwind world tour. He conferred with leaders of the Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand, South Vietnam, India and Pakistan before flying behind Europe's Iron Curtain for a state visit to Romania. The President assured all that the United States would continue to honor its aid commitments and to work for world peace.

CENTRAL AMERICA'S MINI-WAR between El Salvador and Honduras ended informally Tuesday when El Salvador agreed to pull occupation troops out of the neighboring republic. The action followed a threat by the Organization of American States, meeting in emergency session in Washington, to brand El Salvador an aggressor and impose diplomatic and economic sanctions.

SOUNDS OF NATIVE HORNS and tribal drums welcomed Pope Paul VI to the heart of Africa Thursday. The Pope's visit was to attend a meeting of African bishops, but developed into a peace mission as he met with delegation from Nigeria and Biafra, torn by two years of civil war.

A STRONG CENSURE RESOLUTION against Portugal was adopted last week by the United Nations Security Council. The council charged Portugal with an air attack on a Zambian village June 30 that took two lives.

The Nation

The eyes of the nation were still filled with stars last week as motion pictures and color photographs of the Apollo 11 moon-landing mission and "close-up" photos of Mars were released to the public. The moonwalk pictures were so clear and sharp that NASA spokesmen described them as "fantastic." The Mars photos were taken by the instrument-laden Mariner 6 spacecraft as it swept within 2,130 miles of the red planet's surface before zooming beyond to an orbit around the sun. Clarity of pictures sent 60 million miles from Mars was much better than scientists had hoped. They revealed that the Martian surface is crater-pocked, like the moon's.

IN A STATEMENT PRECLUDING a 1972 presidential bid, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., announced Wednesday he plans to remain in the Senate, continue as assistant majority leader, run for re-election next year and serve a full six-year term if elected. The announcement came five days after the senator said on television that he was considering resigning from the Senate following an automobile accident at a Massachusetts resort in which a secretary to his late brother, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, was killed. An overwhelming majority of Massachusetts residents who responded to Sen. Kennedy's appeal for help in reaching a decision about his Senate future, indicated they wanted him to remain in office.

HE IS GIVING "SERIOUS CONSIDERATION" to running for the Senate in 1970, former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said last week. If he runs, it will be for the seat now held by Sen. Eugene McCarthy, who has said he will not seek re-election from Minnesota.

EXTENSION OF THE 10 PER CENT income tax surcharge for the remainder of the year was narrowly approved by the Senate Thursday. The Senate vote was 51-48. The Administration had sought a full year's extension, with the surcharge dropping to 5 per cent during the first six months of 1970. The House had already approved the Administration's program. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield indicated the President faces a demand for a commitment to major tax reforms by the time the surtax expires again.

INVESTIGATION TO DETERMINE whether three senior officers aboard the destroyer USS Frank E. Evans will be court-martialed for the loss of the ship and 74 crewmen will begin this week, the Navy announced Wednesday. The Evans was cut in two in a collision with an Australian aircraft carrier in the South China Sea on June 3 during joint maneuvers.

THE NUDE, STRANGLED BODY of the eighth young woman to die violently in the Ann Arbor, Mich., area in two years was found at the beginning of week. The victim was Karen Sue Beineman, 18, of Grand Rapids. At week's end, police charged John Norman Collins, 23, with the slaying and were attempting to link him to the other killings.

A FEDERAL PRISONER being escorted from Pennsylvania to California by two unarmed marshals put a razor blade to the throat of stewardess Deborah Sullivan, Thursday and ordered the pilot of a Los Angeles-bound Trans World Airlines jetliner to fly to Cuba. The hijacker, Lester Perry, 32, was taken into custody by Cuban officials when the plane landed in Havana. The plane, its remaining 122 passengers and crew of eight, returned to the United States Thursday night. Another jetliner flight, this one originating in Los Angeles, also detoured to Havana, but 64 passengers and three hostesses left the DC-9 when it landed at Midland-Odessa Airport, Texas, to refuel.

The West

DR. THOMAS T. NOGUCHI was reinstated as Los Angeles County chief medical examiner-coroner by unanimous decision of the county's three-man Board of Civil Service Commissioners. The 42-year-old pathologist, fired by the Board of Supervisors five months ago for "erratic behavior," was returned to his $31,105-a-year job with full back pay. Commissioners O. Richard Capen, Harry Albert and Thelma Mahoney ruled after a seven-week hearing and a month of deliberations that the county "did not carry the burden of proof to sustain the charges" which led to Noguchi's dismissal.

THE FIRST DIVORCE-LAW REFORM to be enacted in California since 1872 was approved by the Senate last week and sent to Gov. Ronald Reagan. The legislation, a compromise worked out by a Senate-Assembly committee, makes hopeless discord between man and wife the only cause needed to end most marriages.

TWO WOMEN DROWNED last Sunday when their car backed off a San Pedro pier and dived into 30 feet of water. Mrs. Brenda Roach, 25, of 3995 Vernon St., Long Beach, apparently put the car into reverse by mistake as she started to drive away from Berth 73. She and her passenger, Mrs. Peggy Joan O'Brien, of 2314 Taper Ave., San Pedro, perished.

The War

Administration and military spokesmen indicated last week that President Nixon may order the withdrawal of another 50,000 American troops from Vietnam. Reason for a second cutback is the continuing lull in ground fighting, which has lasted for six weeks. If the present tempo of combat continues for another three weeks, officials said, it is certain to be one of the key considerations in further reducing the number of servicemen in Southeast Asia.

Pornography Has Danish Field Day

By JAMES WARD

COPENHAGEN (UPI — There may be something rotten in Denmark in some eyes, but it's now legally on sale in bookstores and film shops.

The little man who once whispered offers to "sell you filthy pictures" has lost his job to a topless counter girl who peddles the same goods as openly as she sells cigarettes and candy.

The back alleys and dark corners that once were the market places of "dirty books" and pornographic pictures and movies have given way to a modern "sex supermarket" — And that's what it is called—where obscenity is big business and getting bigger.

THE SEX revolution and the law have combined to make Denmark perhaps the biggest legal market in the world for the production, sale and distribution of pornography. On July 1, the country removed all but a few minor laws against obscene books, pictures and film.

Today, a one-time blacksmith named Leo Madsen is on his way to making a million from pornography — all legally. Else Knudsen, a 21-year-old university medical student, and scores of other young men and women are working their way through school by making love before Madsen's movie cameras.

Grethe Andersen's massage parlor for men in downtown Copenhagen is doing bigger business than ever since the sex barriers were legally lowered.

And there are claims the new freedoms have led to a drastic reduction in Denmark's sex crimes — although Police Inspector Knud Hornslet believes increased police patrolling also has helped a lot.

DENMARK TRIED legislation against obscene material and tried police raids to enforce the laws. One haul in February, 1967, netted magazines and books worth 10 million kroner ($1.3 million) in magazines and books.

But the move to do away with laws against pornography had already begun. The supreme court acquitted the publishers of "Fanny Hill," in 1964, and restrictions against printed pornography were erased in 1967.

This year the courts removed the last barriers except for a few aimed at keeping pornography from the hands of children under 16.

"It is not the duty of the administration to censor the reading matter of the public, nor what they want to see," says Knud Thestrup, minister of justice, whose liberal views belie his 69 years.

"In my opinion," Thestrup says, "pornographic books and pictures very quickly become distasteful and boring to people with normal sexual relations and there is no need for us to censor this."

But there is a market for pornography and Madsen, who at 37 looks like an aging beatnik, caters to it. From a start selling old books in a former dairy shop in 1965, Madsen today peddles an estimated $1.6 million annually in magazines, books and film from six shops. He says he has 25,000 mail-order clients in the United States alone.

"PORNOGRAPHY is a necessity of life for many people and I'm convinced that the decrease in the sexual crime rate has a lot to do with the increased sale of magazines," he says.

Madsen is convinced he is doing good. "I could show you scores of letters from happy Americans with thanks to me for helping their marriages out of dead waters," he says. "Americans are pretty quick about picking up suggestions and good sexual advice."

Then there is the flourishing "porno-cinema" — pornographic theater. Per Justesen operated his as a "private club" before the July 1 law change. Now he is open to the public and pulls in about 150 "guests" per night, each paying 20 kroner ($2.50).

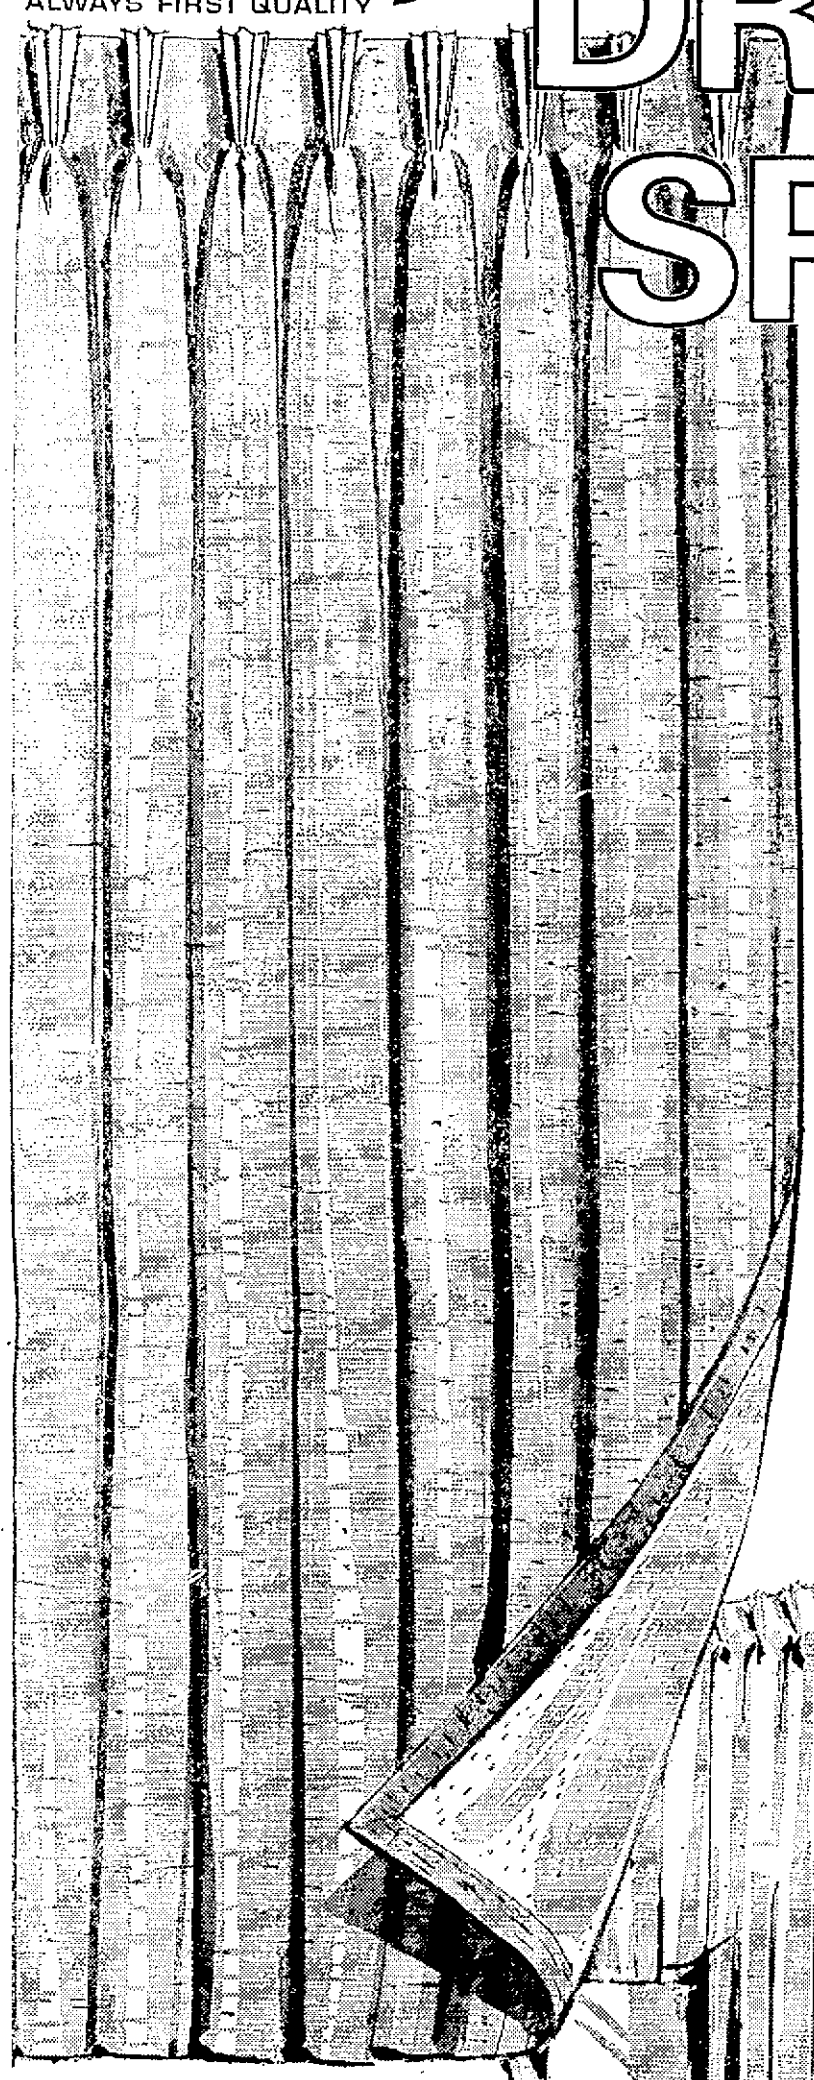

"It's an all-male crowd," he says, "and they behave well. I think it's good for people just to walk inside a place like mine and get a sort of satisfaction."

HAVE THE RELAXED rules on pornography really helped lower the rate of sex crimes? The opinion is divided.

Tyge Kjaer, a 24-year-old sociologist, believes so. He says Denmark's reduction in sex crimes ran to 30 per cent between 1967 and 1969.

LT. GEN. S. C. PHILLIPS
Leaves Apollo Program

Apollo's Chief Goes to SAMSO

Lt. Gen. Sam C. Phillips, on loan from the Air Force as director of the Apollo space program from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, has been named to succeed Lt. Gen. John W. O'Neill as commander of the Air Force Space and Missile Systems Organization in El Segundo.

Gen. O'Neill, a resident of Palos Verdes, has been chosen to succeed Lt. Gen. Charles H. Terhune Jr. as vice commander of the Air Force Systems Command.

AS DIRECTOR of the Apollo program in Washington, D.C., Gen. Phillips had an impressive record of achievements, most widely known of which was the success of the Apollo 11 moon launch which sent three American astronauts, Neil Armstrong, Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin and Mike Collins to the moon. Armstrong and Aldrin were the first humans to set foot on the moon while Collins stayed aloft in orbit in the command ship Columbia. The feat has been hailed around the world as a tribute to American engineering, technology and determination.

Gen. O'Neill, who has commanded SAMSO for the past two years, has been responsible for management of most Air Force ballistic and space programs, present and future.

SAMSO is responsible for advanced planning, research, development and deployment of the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile force which has become a mainstay of the United States strategic deterrent power. Of this force the Minuteman is the primary ingredient.

The SAMSO programs, however, are not limited to ballistic missiles alone. SAMSO and its parent organization, the Systems Command, also direct the development of boosters for numerous communications and space research satellites now either in orbit or planned for the future.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

FORECAST FOR MONDAY

Your birthday today: Despite resistance, you make exciting starts this year, once you get past the incoming year, once you get past the initial upheaval of getting started. Savings are easier even though activity increases. Capital is easier secured for business ventures. Romantic interests take a new, provocative trend. Today's natives are lucky in business — without very strenuous effort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get going early — there's plenty to do. Make allowances for delays or inconveniences and keep on striving for a full day's achievement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your zeal comes under some testing today with trivial annoyances. It seems that you become accustomed to Sunday conditions and for the moment find workday Monday a bit harsh.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Older people pose good questions and sermons some difficult decisions. Be sure you have the whole story before going ahead.

CHACER (June 21-July 22): Certain tension is inevitable today. Avoid getting bogged down. Whimsical gestures help both you and your companions to cheer up. Put in a full schedule, as there is a change coming up tomorrow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This is the day and evening to seriously consider your present state of affairs and what you may be able to do with your talents. For long-range plans, expect turning points in March and September.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Nothing goes very swiftly today so that you have a bit more time to scrutinize details. Settle into a more leisurely pace and last longer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you will just get going in earnest, all sorts of helpful turns are likely to happen today in your affairs and contacts.

LT. GEN. S. C. PHILLIPS
Leaves Apollo Program

Apollo's Chief Goes to SAMSO

Lt. Gen. Sam C. Phillips, on loan from the Air Force as director of the Apollo space program from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, has been named to succeed Lt. Gen. John W. O'Neill as commander of the Air Force Space and Missile Systems Organization in El Segundo.

Gen. O'Neill, a resident of Palos Verdes, has been chosen to succeed Lt. Gen. Charles H. Terhune Jr. as vice commander of the Air Force Systems Command.

AS DIRECTOR of the Apollo program in Washington, D.C., Gen. Phillips had an impressive record of achievements, most widely known of which was the success of the Apollo 11 moon launch which sent three American astronauts, Neil Armstrong, Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin and Mike Collins to the moon. Armstrong and Aldrin were the first humans to set foot on the moon while Collins stayed aloft in orbit in the command ship Columbia. The feat has been hailed around the world as a tribute to American engineering, technology and determination.

Gen. O'Neill, who has commanded SAMSO for the past two years, has been responsible for management of most Air Force ballistic and space programs, present and future.

SAMSO is responsible for advanced planning, research, development and deployment of the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile force which has become a mainstay of the United States strategic deterrent power. Of this force the Minuteman is the primary ingredient.

The SAMSO programs, however, are not limited to ballistic missiles alone. SAMSO and its parent organization, the Systems Command, also direct the development of boosters for numerous communications and space research satellites now either in orbit or planned for the future.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY

Your birthday today: Despite resistance, you make exciting starts this year, once you get past the initial upheaval of getting started. Savings are easier even though activity increases. Capital is easier secured for business ventures. Romantic interests take a new provocative trend. Today's natives are lucky in business — without very strenuous effort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get going early — there's plenty to do. Make allowances for delays or inconveniences, and keep on striving for a full day's achievement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your fact comes under some testing today with trivial annoyances. It seems that you become accustomed to Sunday conditions and for the moment find workday Monday a bit harsh.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Older people pose good questions and perhaps some difficult decisions. Be sure you have the whole story before going ahead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Certain tension is inevitable today. Avoid getting bogged down. Whimsical diversions help both you and your companions to cheer up. Put in a full schedule, as there is a change coming up tomorrow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This is the day and evening to seriously consider your present state of affairs and what you may be able to do with your talents. For long-range plans, expect turning points in March and September.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Nothing goes very swiftly today so that you have a bit more time to scrutinize details. Settle into a more leisurely pace and last longer.

President Primary Bill Passed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Legislature gave final approval Saturday to a bill giving California an open presidential primary with the names of all nationally recognized candidates on the ballot.

Gov. Reagan, the only candidate in last year's Republican presidential primary running as a favorite son, vetoed a similar bill last year.

Reagan objected to the proposal because he said it would force a man to campaign in California even if he didn't want to. And he has said this year that nothing has happened to make him change his mind.

The Senate's 26-0 vote Saturday accepted an amendment inserted by the Assembly which would place on the ballot the names of persons recognized in California, as well as nationally, as candidates for the nomination.

Sen. Alfred E. Alquist, D-San Jose, said his bill would give California a primary similar to Oregon's, and could make California the key testing ground for public sentiment before the parties select their candidates.

Alquist says if Reagan vetoes the bill again this year, he may try again, but with a constitutional amendment which would allow the voters to decide whether to adopt the open primary.

Free Lunch Bill Nears Passage

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A Senate-passed bill to provide up to 500,000 disadvantaged children with a free school lunch cleared a key Assembly committee Saturday and moved to the full house for consideration.

The measure by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, won unanimous approval in the Ways and Means Committee. Moscone predicted later it would clear the full Assembly and be signed into law by Gov. Reagan.

The bill appropriates $5 million to match expenditures by local school districts from their own tax funds for meals for needy children from poverty areas.

Reagan Gets Sex Class Veto Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The senate without debate gave final legislative approval Saturday to a bill permitting parents to pull their children out of sex education classes.

The measure by Sen. John G. Schmitz, R-Tustin, was sent to Gov. Ronald Reagan for his expected signature on a 23-0 vote.

Specifically, the measure calls for schools to notify parents that family life or sex education courses are going to be taught. Parents may then serve notice in writing that they do not want their children to participate in the classes.

Boy Snatched From Shark's Jaws at Florida Beach

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — A 13-year-old boy, attacked by a shark while swimming in the Gulf of Mexico, was removed from the intensive care unit of a hospital Saturday in "fair" condition.

The youth, Robert Wamser, suffered severe lacerations of the right leg and left arm. He underwent an operation following the attack, and one source said he faces additional surgery.

His father, R. J. Wamser, was with the boy in the surf at the time of the attack.

"The shark had the boy's whole foot in his mouth," the father said. "I just kept kicking the shark until it let go, then I dragged him (the boy) to the beach."

Authorities cleared the beach after the attack, but reopened it Saturday. A coast gurad helicopter pilot said there were no more sharks than usual in the area.

The attack was the first of its kind in the mid-Florida Gulf Coast area since 1958, when an 8-year-old boy lost his leg in a shark attack off Longboat Key near Sarasota.

The elder Wamser said he and Robert had waded out about 20 feet into the surf and dived into a wave. The shark attacked as they surfaced and Robert suddenly screamed: "Dad, Dad, Help, a shark has got me."

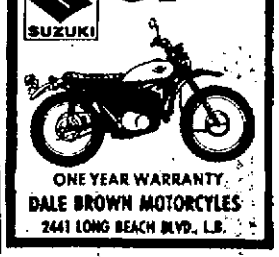

"We couldn't have been in more than three feet of water," the father said. "It was right in front of the life guard stand. God, it was horrible."

American Sentenced to Lebanon Prison

BEIRUH, Lebanon (UPI) — One American was sentenced to three years in prison at hard labor for drug smuggling and another was arrested on the same charge, authorities said.

The two were identified as Emett D. Rimble, 23, of Stockton, Calif., and Jeffery H. Chore of New York City, 20. Rimble was described as a professor at an unidentified university in Oklahoma. Chore is described as a student at Wisconsin University.

DDT Curbs Approved by Committee

SACRAMENTO (UPI)— Legislation clamping further controls on the sale and use of pesticides such as DDT in California Saturday received unanimous endorsement of the Assmebly Ways and Means Committee.

"This bill is very corrective and long overdue," Chairman Frank Lanterman, R-La Canada, told the author, Sen. Anthony Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills.

It went to the Assembly floor.

The bill represents the last major pesticide control proposal of the 1969 session. A Senate bill banning DDT was killed earlier in the Assembly Agriculture Committee.

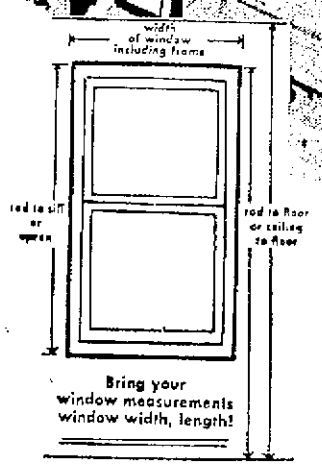

The Beilenson bill gives the state Agriculture Department additional standards under which it could ban harmful bug killers and requires the agriculture director to report back to the Legislature.

Schools Guided on Controversy

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM
SUNDAY, AUGUST 3, 1969 SECTION B—PAGE B-1

"When a thing ceases to be a subject of controversy, it ceases to be a subject of interest."—English essayist William Hazlitt.

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Education Editor

"Most of the Long Beach school curriculum is composed of established truths and values," declares a policy statement just adopted by the Board of Education, although junior and senior high school studies here " . . . also include many controversial issues" evoking emotional responses ranging from extremely heated to merely vexatious.

How to deal fairly and objectively with today's burning ideas is the subject of a policy statement regarding treatment of controversial issues in the classroom agreed on last week by the board.

The board's updating of its 1962 guidelines again recognizes "the rights of pupils" to study — but not be taught -- controversial issues.

"LIBERTY WITHOUT LICENSE," a phrase hallowed in American history, was not used during discussions of the statement.

It does, nevertheless, sum up a reaffirmed official philosophy that no subject is necessarily off-limits, if it relates specifically to a subject being taught in a classroom, and student-

HERE'S NUMBER FOR GRAND PRIZE!

A vacation for two at Jamaica in the beautiful West Indies! That's the grand prize won by a lucky Southland resident in the Independent, Press-Telegram's "Lucky Driver" contest. The winning entry, drawn by Mrs. Hanna Dyke, local manager for the Department of Motor Vehicles, bears license number Z1048835.

The owner of this California driver's license has 10 days to claim the prize at the newspapers' customer service desk, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach.

The grand prize includes round trip air passage to the island via Delta Airlines, and accommodations at the Silver Seas Hotel in Jamaica.

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

LET'S SEE now. The Legislature has passed a bill giving itself a nice raise. Still in the mill is another bill giving the Gov. and his staff a nice raise.

The legislative pay boost has to have the gov's signature. The gov's pay raise has to have the legislators' vote.

It's a neat piece of financial hanky-panky, and you and I know who's being whipsawed — us.

Just for the heckuvit, and completely without hope of any success, I'm dropping the dear old gov. a line urging him to veto both bills. Would you like to join me in an exercise in futility?

ON THE very day he had read an item here quoting somebody about warm, friendly Long Beach, Bob Johnson had a heart attack while driving on Los Coyotes Diagonal.

Johnson, a state employe, managed to get his car to the side of the street, where he called to a passing woman for help.

"That's just the way with you old men — always trying tricks to pick up a girl," she snorted, walking on.

She was hardly a girl, and the whole thing so amused Johnson he laughed, relaxed, and was able to drive on to the Navy Hospital. She may have saved his life.

REEF Restaurant, the harbor spot with the tropical isle atmosphere, observes its 11th birthday this weekend, and that directs notice to a local success story.

The Reef was the first unit of what grew to be L.B.-based Specialty Restaurants Corp., headed by Dave Tallichet, who came here years ago to run the Lafayette Hotel. Specialty Restaurants, which went public a while back, now has 13 deluxe places running. In 1970, it will open 10 more, including a big one atop the 40-floor Crocker Citizens Bank bldg. in downtown L.A. It recently opened two in Chicago, is aiming at Orange County, Florida, Hawaii. The Reef, where Ralph Fulton manages, is booming along after 11 years and the permanent berthing of the Queen Mary close by won't hurt anything.

AT 84, Mrs. Pearl Glasscoe of Long Beach has 27 great-grandchildren, which sounds like a record of some kind.

Mrs. Glasscoe got a letter this week from one of her great-grandchildren, Mark Nandus, 12, who lives in Santa Cruz. She was so amused by what he said she read it to me.

"I hope you are alive when I see you next time," wrote Mark.

Mrs. Glasscoe thinks she will be. She passed her driver's test the other day.

AN outgoing guy, Judge Chas. Smith paused in the courthouse parking lot to say a word of greeting to a young mother and three boys sitting on a fence.

"Eenie, meenie, minie," he quipped. "Where's mo?"

"He's on his way," said the gal, rising to show her figure in profile.

ANOTHER landmark goes. Mac Bailey notes that the house at the end of Eighth St. on California is to be torn down. She says it's an old movie studio, moved from the site of the old Balboa studios at 6th and Alamitos, where such stars as Fattie Arbuckle and Mabel Normand performed . . . Mac Bailey claims that church people got worked up over the scandalous events at the studio and Hollywood got the industry. That was 50 years or more ago.

Wallace to Explain Resume

By GEORGE LAINE
Staff Writer

Long Beach poverty war boss Carl Wallace will fly to San Francisco Monday where he will attempt to explain to the West Coast chief of the poverty agency charges that he lied on his job resume.

The meeting is expected to "crystalize" the current uncertainty arising from questions of Wallace's honesty in his orginal job applicatioun and ensuing descriptions of his previous employment.

JACK O'NEIL, a Long Beach city employe who also serves as a member of the executive committee of the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities, said Wallace acknowledged the Monday meeting during a conference at City Hall Friday morning.

"We had a pleasant meeting," O'Neil said. "We

Glendale Scout Dies When Tree Falls on Tent

A 13-year-old Boy Scout was killed Saturday when a large tree suddenly fell on a tent in the Firestone Boy Scout Reservation in Orange County's Brea Canyon.

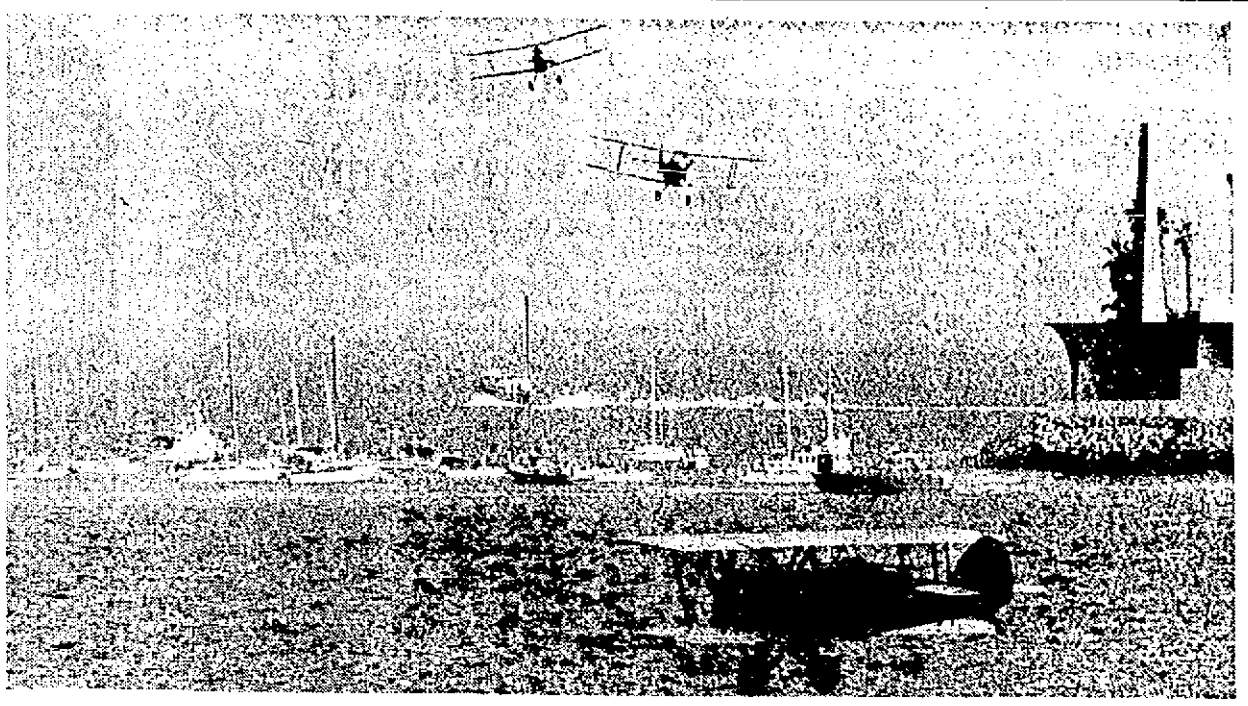

Charles Van Dyke, of Glendale, was dead on arrival at St. Jude's Hospital in Fullerton at 12:45 p.m., about an hour after the accident.

Firemen and rescue workers tried for almost an hour to extricate him from under the tree and the collapsed tent.

The coroner's office said there was no apparent reason for the tree falling, and termed the tragedy "an act of God."

The eyes had it Saturday.

And so did the ears.

Feats of skill and courage in the air dominated the Long Beach shore line as this year's version of the California Sea Festival got off to — what else? — a flying start. Thousands along the beach — and some spectators caught in traffic — were delighted.

During the opening day show, the thousands who lined the beach paid compliments with "ohs" and "ahs" as they squinted to watch thrilling precision of the Navy's Blue Angels and an engrossing "dogfight" between "Snoopy" and the "Red Baron" — vintage airplanes still showing their stuff.

Later, plumes of white smoke held all eyes with the fascination of following the downward drop of members of the Navy's underwater demolition team. The sky divers made free-falls — smoke trailing from their boots so spectators could watch progress — from a head-spinning 12,000 feet. And, just when a few of the less confident spectators thought they'd never do it, they popped 'chutes to land precisely in the beach "target areas."

Thrilling in another way — because of its smooth, seemingly effortless movement — was the San Pedro-to-Catalina hydrofoil as it skimmed over the water. "Is it really on the water, Daddy " a youngster asked.

For more thrills, there was an acrobatics display by a gyrocopter and an air-sea rescue demonstration by Coast Guardsmen.

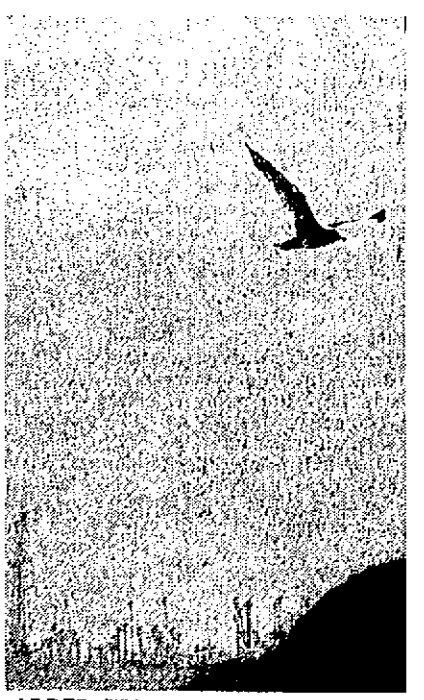

After all that, the folks needed a little rest. They got it, as a gigantic facsimile beer can drifted lazily overhead, towed by a helicopter.

Irvine Appointment Will Challenge Activist

By BOB GRIVET
Staff Writer

A former student activist will get a chance to put some of his ideas into practice next fall as the newly-appointed assistant dean of student affairs at the University of California, Irvine.

Mike Krisman, student body president at Irvine in 1966-67, once incurred U.S. State Department displeasure by taking a trip to Cuba and is a strong critic of American society.

"THE POWER OF the public is not equal to private interests," he says, "even though our officials supposedly represent the public interest.

We did have a free economy, but I can't say we have one now."

Krisman's appointment has drawn displeasure from Orange County Young Republicans, who say they plan a county-wide petition protest directed at UCI Chancellor Daniel G. Aldrich and the UC Board of Regents.

The YRs claim that under Krisman's presidency of the UCI student body activism was "introduced" to campus.

Krisman graduated last June with a history degree.

He was interested in first-hand observation of Cuba "because it is Latin America's only totally-planned economy — the others are military dictatorships or oligarchies."

He said Fidel Castro's Communist experiment is neither all bad nor all good — and there may be some lessons in it for America.

Krisman decided to go to Cuba in late December and he spent two weeks there, twice meeting Castro and finding no restrictions on his travel on the island.

HE TOURED WITH two UCLA doctoral candidates and a Swiss student, reaching Cuba by way of Mexico City where the Cuban embassy issued visas to them.

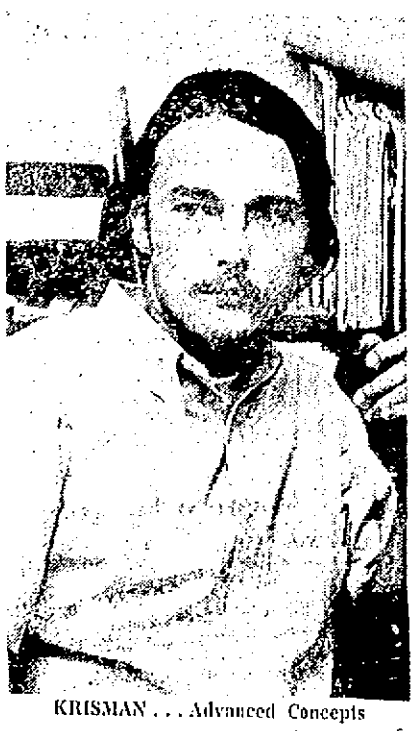

It was the holiday season and the people were celebrating an anniversary of the Castro revolution, he said.

He said he found the people happy, reasonably well fed, and employed gainfully.

"I didn't find what I would call affluence on the American style," he explained, "but the people seemed happy, and the country prosperous — compared with other Latin American countries."

There were "obvious comparisons" in his view: Cuba has a high level of public health and dental care, an expanding edu-

Schools Guided on Controversy

"When a thing ceases to be a subject of controversy, it ceases to be a subject of interest."—English essayist William Hazlitt.

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.

"Most of the Long Beach school curriculum is composed of established truths and values," declares a policy statement just adopted by the Board of Education, although junior and senior high school studies here " . . . also include many controversial issues" evoking emotional responses ranging from extremely heated to merely vexatious.

Ho to deal fairly and objectively with today's burning ideas is the subject of a policy statement regarding treatment of controversial issues in the classroom agreed on last week by the board.

The board's updating of its 1962 guidelines again recognizes "the rights of pupils" to study — but not be taught — controversial issues.

"LIBERTY WITHOUT LICENSE," a phrase hallowed in American history, was not used during discussions of the statement.

It does, nevertheless, sum up a reaffirmed official philosophy that no subject is necessarily off-limits, if it relates specifically to a subject being taught in a classroom, and student-

LET'S SEE now. The Legislature has passed a bill giving itself a nice raise. Still in the mill is another bill giving the Gov. and his staff a nice raise.

The legislative pay boost has to have the gov's signature. The gov's pay raise has to have the legislators' vote.

It's a neat piece of financial hanky-panky, and you and I know who's being whipsawed — us.

Just for the heckuvit, and completely without hope of any success, I'm dropping the dear old gov. a line urging him to veto both bills. Would you like to join me in an exercise in futility?

ON THE very day he had read an item here quoting somebody about warm, friendly Long Beach, Bob Johnson had a heart attack while driving on Los Coyotes Diagonal.

Johnson, a state employe, managed to get his car to the side of the street, where he called to a passing woman for help.

"That's just the way with you old men — always trying tricks to pick up a girl," she snorted, walking on.

She was hardly a girl, and the whole thing so amused Johnson he laughed, relaxed, and was able to drive on to the Navy Hospital. She may have saved his life.

REEF Restaurant, the harbor spot with the tropical isle atmosphere, observes its 11th birthday this weekend, and that directs notice to a local success story.

The Reef was the first unit of what grew to be L.B.-based Specialty Restaurants Corp., headed by Dave Tallichet, who came here years ago to run the Lafayette Hotel. Specialty Restaurants, which went public a while back, now has 13 deluxe places running. In 1970, it will open 10 more, including a big one atop the 40-floor Crocker Citizens Bank bldg. in downtown L.A. It recently opened two in Chicago, is aiming at Orange County, Florida, Hawaii. The Reef, where Ralph Fulton manages, is booming along after 11 years and the permanent berthing of the Queen Mary close by won't hurt anything.

AT 84, Mrs. Pearl Glascoe of Long Beach has 27 great-grandchildren, which sounds like a record of some kind.

Mrs. Glascoe got a letter this week from one of her great-grandchildren, Mark Naudus, 12, who lives in Santa Cruz. She was so amused by what he said she read it to me.

"I hope you are alive when I see you next time," wrote Mark.

Mrs. Glascoe thinks she will be. She passed her driver's test the other day.

AN outgoing guy, Judge Chas. Smith paused in the courthouse parking lot to say a word of greeting to a young mother and three boys sitting on a fence.

"Eenie, meenie, minie," he quipped. "Where's mo?"

"He's on his way," said the gal, rising to show her figure in profile.

ANOTHER landmark goes. Mae Bailey notes that the house at the end of Eighth St. on California is to be torn down. She says it's an old movie studio, moved from the site of the old Balboa studios at 6th and Alamitos, where such stars as Fattie Arbuckle and Mabel Normand performed . . . Mae Bailey claims that church people got worked up over the scandalous events at the studio and Hollywood got the industry. That was 50 years or more ago.

Wallace to Explain Resume

The meeting is expected to "crystalize" the current uncertainty arising from questions of Wallace's honesty in his orginal job application and ensuing descriptions of his previous employment.

JACK O'NEIL, a Long Beach city employe who also serves as a member of the executive committee of the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities, said Wallace acknowledged the Monday meeting during a conference at City Hall Friday morning.

Glendale Scout Dies When Tree Falls on Tent

A 13-year-old Boy Scout was killed Saturday when a large tree suddenly fell on a tent in the Firestone Boy Scout Reservation in Orange County's Brea Canyon.

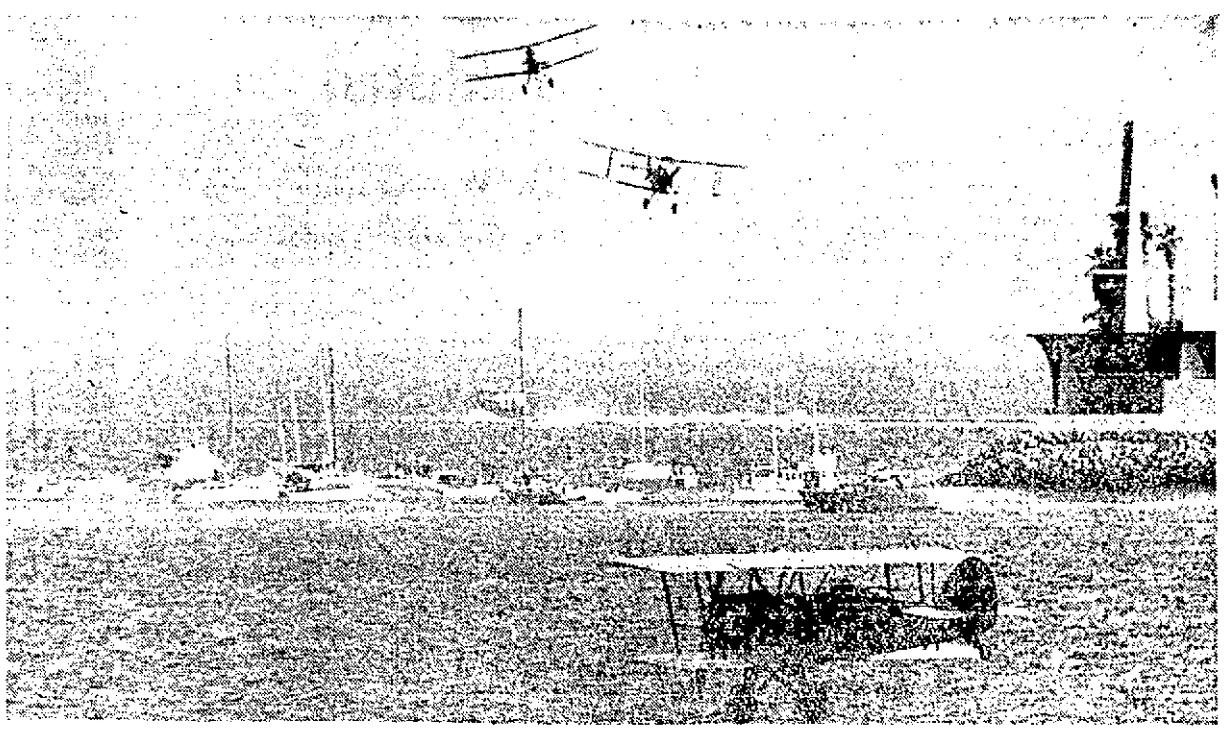

Charles Van Dyke, of Glendale, was dead on arrival at St. Jude's Hospital in Fullerton at 12:45 p.m., about an hour after the accident.

Firemen and rescue workers tried for almost an hour to extricate him from under the tree and the collapsed tent.

The coroner's office said there was no apparent reason for the tree falling, and termed the tragedy "an act of God."

They used our guns and we're sorry

WHEN WAR broke out in mid-July between Honduras and El Salvador, the Nixon Administration deplored the use of United States-supplied arms by both Central American republics.

An unidentified State Department spokesman, conceding that military equipment being rushed into action by both sides, may have come from this country, added a remark that will not exactly ring through the ages: "We consider it very regrettable."

He was not defending the present administration in particular, for the supplying of arms to the hemisphere has been bipartisan policy under Republican and Democratic administration alike.

THROUGH THE years the reasons advanced have emphasized: hemisphere defense throughout Latin America; internal security of the various countries; exertion of U.S. influence on Latin American military establishments; and preservation of the Latin arms market for U.S. manufacturers.

Three weeks before the Central American hostilities, all those arguments had been challenged by four specialists testifying before a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"U.S. military policies and programs in Latin America . . . have been disastrous from a political point of view," asserted Ralph Dungan, former ambassador to Chile. "There is no shaking the prevailing Latin conception of the U.S. as a society dominated to a very large measure by the Pentagon."

He and the three other students of Latin America affairs agreed that there is no external threat to the area, that Communist influence in the region is not a revolutionary menace and that the U.S. military presence is a major reason for our unpopularity in most of the countries.

INSTEAD OF merely "deploring," the State Department and President Nixon should begin reviewing the policy they have inherited. They could do worse than listen to two ranking Senate Democrats on the Foreign Relations Committee, J. William Fullbright of Arkansas and Frank Church of Idaho, both of whom have advocated an early end to U.S. military programs and missions throughout Latin America.

U.S. military assistance to Honduras last year amounted to about $800,000 and to El Salvador about $500,000. These figures sound insignificant; but when added to the lethal handouts of previous years, they are enough to start a small war. And Vietnam has proved how costly and dangerous a small war can turn out to be.

Bits from a diluted news quiz

WHAT KINDS OF NOISES occur at a triple-tandem press conference where a few governors have been set in a row for the convenience and-or frustration of reporters?

Major contributors to the Republican party gathered in the Beverly Hilton Hotel Friday for figurative chalk talks on the status of the party and its plans for gains in 1970. Newsmen had press conferences with two of the main speakers — Congressman Rogers C.B. Morton, the GOP national chairman, and Herbert G. Klein, President Nixon's communications director.

BOB HOUSER

In between those press conferences was a joint one scheduled for four governors — Don Samuelson of Idaho, Norbert Tiemann of Nebraska, David Cargo of New Mexico and Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma. Samuelson's plane was late so the governors' session was only diluted by three parts.

In the glut of utterances by so many political figures, the prospect of quizzing three visiting governors was somewhat less than exciting to newsmen and probably to the governors too. So what do newsmen ask when they really don't care?

ONE ASKED Nebraska's Tiemann to be honest about who would win the Big Eight? Tiemann conceded it would be Oklahoma. Bartlett of Oklahoma registered relish.

Then one of the TV quizzers signaled his cameraman to start rolling and asked — I'm not making this up — if the fact that Nixon did not ask for TV time nor insinuate himself into TV coverage during the moon landing didn't suggest that Nixon was trying to downplay the achievement?

Well, the governors dealt gently with the absurdity. You can look it up in some TV studio if you're interested.

There were some interesting bits. Gov. Tiemann cautioned against counting Ted Kennedy out of the presidency one day. "In 1976 he'll still be a young man and by 1980 he'll still be younger than Nixon is today. What happened was not fatal to his career."

New Mexico's Cargo of course does not favor tax sharing plans for the simple reason that his state gets much more now in federal assistance than it contributes.

Oklahoma's Bartlett said — what else — that the oil depletion allowance should be retained, but conceded a study should be made to determine if oil companies are paying their fair share of taxes. The depletion windfall is needed, he says, to encourage oil exploration.

Cargo said you can't partition to settle the Vietnam war because of the impossibility of drawing any enemy-friend lines in that country without complete Balkanization.

TIEMANN and Bartlett oppose federal administration of the whole welfare program. Cargo favors it, in big words: "The thrust of the program (without federal takeover) is silly. It's eclectic socialism being offered by private practitioners . . . They're compelling states to match funds when they can't match; they're matching us out of existence."

The "silly" he spoke of: Title 19 reduces to five basic services, creating problems like this — a man can get an operation but no drugs are authorized; or, although certain dental care is not covered, the patient may let his teeth rot and then be eligible for surgical care.

So spoke the governors.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Dirty doorsteps

EDITOR:

In your paper I was surprised to read an editor's column belittling J. Edgar Hoover's remarks. It called them "scandalous tidbits." Better start sweeping a few doorsteps here around Long Beach.

For instance: hammering at air pollution (that might be stepping on toes); the man teacher at Cal State who wears dresses and passes out strawberries — wouldn't you like your daughter taught by that one?; the country road entrance to the popular tourist attraction of Ports O Call — one out of five probably end up at the shipping dock because of lack of signs and road markings, a safety hazard at night or any other time. I'm sure there are plenty of other things to occupy the editor's time other than witch hunting.

Mr. Hoover is now fighting for our country's present existence, and needs all the help he can muster.

Lakewood CONDRADENE J. JAMES

'Me, Tarzan'

EDITOR:

Graffiti is fascinating. Here he parallels "Dear Abby" with his: "JANE SITS HOME WHILE TARZAN SWINGS." This is a real social problem today due to non-Christian men. Compare this:

Christ, our example of a perfect bridegroom, says to His bride (the church): "Yea, I have loved you with an everlasting love" (Jeremiah 31:3). The unregenerate man says to his wife on this subject: nothing.

Jesus says: "Lo, I am with you alway" (Matthew 28:20). The natural man says: "You go to your club tonight; I'll go to mine."

Jesus says: I will sup with you, and you with me (Revelation 3:20). The heathen husband today says: "I have a men-only dinner-meeting every night this week."

There are many good (sounding) excuses for these answers. So, I guess marriage will continue to be troubled (people like Graffiti will ease the pressure by joking about it) but, the breakdown of the home will mean the breakdown of everything.

Backyard napalm

EDITOR:

I would like to add a few things to the column by Mr. Robeson concerning the manufacturing of napalm bombs in North Long Beach.

Mr. Robeson did not mention the damage done to windows, doors and plaster inside and out as a result of the explosion. Nor did he mention the noises produced by the plant 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

There was another small explosion eight days after the first one. A large piece of plastic, approximately 3 feet by 6 feet was blown into our backyard. It hit the back of the garage and tore branches from a small tree. My child's wading pool was a few feet from where it hit.

From what I have heard, all that is needed to set off the bombs is an explosion. We have had two, do we need to wait for another?

Do gooder does

EDITOR:

Being called a "do-gooder" used to bother me, but suddenly I feel that I don't measure up to the title.

My eyes have seen, my ears have heard, and my heart has ached for the work that Jerry Grina and Kay Hillman do with Youth Action Commission in North Long Beach. Both of these people are not only dedicated but have love for the people they work with and a valuable insight into the problems they face. They not only must have courage enough to stand up and fight for what they believe in, they must bear the burden of trying to make Youth Action function against vandalism which is aimed at wiping them out. I come away and wonder why a group of people who are working to better our city must fight the city to survive?

I pray that those who have doubts venture forth and see for themselves.

JFK'S dream

EDITOR:

Like most Americans, the pride I feel at this time in our space exploration achievements is overwhelming.

The courage and creativity of the astronauts and everyone behind the scenes will be hailed the highest commendations known.

However, it is my belief that one small point has been overlooked. Why was John F. Kennedy's name omitted from the plaque left on the moon? I'm not saying that President Nixon's signature shouldn't have been on it, but how could we have possibly overlooked the fact that John Kennedy put into words eight years ago what is being put into reality at this moment.

This was his dream.

Food for everybody's thinking. Strange as it is: corruption is a by-product of an affluent society. Corruption is being investigated by governmental agencies; by private and public societies. But, who investigates the investigators?

Cities gaining most in Soviet

THE SOVIET UNION is a land of great contrasts, and you must view everything with the knowledge that the Russians suffered incredible destruction during World War II. Over 20 million people were killed, and 3,000 cities and 300,000 villages were ravaged by the war.

What impresses a visitor to Russia today is that while great strides have been made in building a strong industrial base, much more must be done for the people.

There is a shortage of consumer goods, yet this same economy produces great things in space and transportation in hydroelectric power and heavy machinery.

There has been immense progress in education and health care. Since my previous visits in 1958 and 1963, I sense a new openess and hospitality, and a more critical self-examination.

But, in some ways, Russia has not changed. You see huge apartment buildings and log huts. You see the massive Moscow subways and dirt roads. You see beautiful displays of farm machinery, and you see women cutting the crops with hand knives. The cities still get the most.

The bureaucracy of the Czars has been supplanted by a bigger bureaucracy under the council of ministers. The old Russian clergy and nobility have been replaced by Communist party leaders and bureaucrats.

But the Soviet Union is today a powerful nation — rich in resources, militarily and industrially strong. The people are better off than ever before. They know no other system but communism, and they are slowly smoothing off the rough edges and changing it to meet their needs.

THE MANY FACES and cultures of Russia can be found on the broad boulevards of Moscow. There is a vital spirit in Moscow; it obviously is the center of a great nation. Its people walk with pride and vigor. Its streets are up to 300 feet wide.

There is a tremendous amount of construction in the center of the city. The streets are busy with traffic as never before. In some cities, the thousands of automobiles would cause traffic jams, but because of the broad Moscow boulevards, the traffic flows easily. People drive fast and almost recklessly by our standards. The buses and street cars are new and the streets are clean.

The new architecture is modern. On the way in from the airport, we saw vast areas of new apartment developments. Some quality has been sacrificed for quanity, but we should not underestimate the achievements.

Everywhere you see people walking fast. Their dress is much better than before. The young people look happier; there are many in Moscow from the provinces. There is a great spirit in the city. Moscow is a mecca for visitors from all over the Soviet Union and the world.

ALMOST NO single family housing is being built in Russia. The new housing is concentrated in large apartment complexes, with plenty of green space between buildings for walks, trees, and grass.

But there is very little landscaping; you see weeds all around the new apartments. There is a strange absence of birds.

The large apartment complex is undoubtedly the most efficient form of new housing. I think the Soviet government also likes them because they are more manageable in terms of control over people. They make it easier for political organization and the control of movement.

The Kremlin is the original city of Moscow. Its name means fortress, and princes and their guards lived there in the 11th and 12th centuries. The Soviets have lavished great care on the Kremlin and its grounds. Within the walls are magnificent cathedrals and museums.

As you look across Red Square and the Kremlin, you see people lined up four abreast for almost a mile to see their historical heritage, and particularly Lenin's tomb.

The great mausoleum in which Lenin is buried opens at 10 a.m. and we were given a special escort. We saw the changing of the guard. Then the bells tolled, and the great doors opened. The lines of people, led by an army officer, slowly began to move.

The visitors go quietly by the tomb. There is no smoking or picture-taking. The atmosphere is one of respect and awe.

As you travel in the countryside, you see many women at work in the fields. They are driving tractors and even working on road repair.

You see handpumps for water, and dirt roads for streets. The rural stores are poorly stocked, and the people are not as well-dressed as in the city. You see many old people sitting in front of their homes.

The young people seem happy and healthy. Many of them dress like westerners while their parents dress like their forefathers did 200 years ago.

THERE IS LESS news available in the Soviet Union than in other countries I visited. The Soviet leaders, however, have found it very difficult to keep the impact of world events away from their people — the news comes through on the BBC or Voice of America or some other source.

Just before the lift-off of Apollo 11, Pravda, the most important Soviet newspaper, made note of our moon flight, but their news emphasis was on the unmanned Luna 15 flight to the moon. On the Sunday night when our astronauts landed on the moon, there was nothing about it on Soviet radio or television for several hours.

Nixon tells allies: 'Get out in front'

WASHINGTON—In his private talks with Asian leaders, President Nixon stressed that the United States intends to avoid getting embroiled in any more Vietnams.

He promised that the U.S. would continue to stand behind them but that they would have to get out in front.

American military might will be available to stop naked communist aggression, but not Vietnam-style infiltration and insurrection. He let our Asian allies know that they could count upon American arms, but not American troops, to fight future guerrilla wars.

THE PRESIDENT has concluded that an American presence in communist-menaced countries encourages rather than discourages rebellion. The appearance of U.S. troops gives the Communists a propaganda weapon to inflame the natives against the "American imperialists." It also improves their bargaining position to demand more weapons from Russia and China.

The deeper the U.S. became involved in Vietnam, for example, the higher became the level of Russian-Chinese intervention. The North Vietnames also skillfully exploited the rivalry between the two communist giants, goading them to outdo each other in their support of the war.

Aides who have been in touch with the President on his flaps-up tour, incidentally, say he is positively buoyant.

The breathtaking lunar landing sent his spirits soaring. At the Pacific splashdown he was as excited as anyone on board the rescue carrier. He basked happily in the reflected glory of the three moon explorers.

Their fantastic feat also gave his overseas mission a lift, and he took diplomatic advantage of the prestige they brought to America. The President enjoys diplomatic more than domestic dealings, and his discussions with Asian leaders left him exuberant.

Nor did Nixon mourn the strange accident that apparently has knocked his chief rival for the presidency out of the running. He received detailed, though unsolicited, reports on Sen. Ted Kennedy's troubles.

The President, of course, sympathized with the victims of the tragedy. But he would have been less than human if he hadn't been cheered at the prospect of not having to run against another Kennedy in 1972.

THE PRESIDENTIAL planes have been completely renovated since Nixon inherited them from LBJ. At considerable cost to the taxpayers, the interiors have been made roomier and the chairs cushier. Partitions have also been added to make the Presidential quarters more private . . . The President has four sleek Boeing 707s and an eight seat Jetstar in the White House fleet. Any plane he uses automatically becomes "Air Force One" . . . Pat Nixon was left behind in Honolulu during the astronauts' splashdown because Navy ships have no facilities for ladies—not even First Ladies . . . . In Bangkok some of the President's fellow travelers patronized the local massage parlors to get their weary muscles rubbed. The rubdowns were administered by pretty, accommodating girls.

THE WHITE HOUSE has let it be known that the President will appoint a new associate justice, replacing Abe Fortas, shortly after Mr. Nixon returns to Washington. In this connection, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina has recommended an excellent man.

He is U.S. District Judge Donald Russell, a former South Carolina governor and senator, who also once headed the University of South Carolina.

Russell is the former law partner of the grand old man of South Carolina politics, Jimmy Byrnes, and served as assistant secretary of state when Byrnes was secretary.

When he was governor of South Carolina, Russell invited "all" citizens to attend his inauguration breakfast, and a great many Negroes, rather timidly, showed up. It was the first time since ante-bellum days that anything like this had happened.

Three weeks before the Central American hostilities, all those arguments had been challenged by four specialists testifying before a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"U.S. military policies and programs in Latin America . . . have been disastrous from a political point of view," asserted Ralph Dungan, former ambassador to Chile. "There is no shaking the prevailing Latin conception of the U.S. as a society dominated to a very large measure by the Pentagon."

He and the three other students of Latin America affairs agreed that there is no external threat to the area, that Communist influence in the region is not a revolutionary menace and that the U.S. military presence is a major reason for our unpopularity in most of the countries.

INSTEAD OF merely "deploring," the State Department and President Nixon should begin reviewing the policy they have inherited. They could do worse than listen to two ranking Senate Democrats on the Foreign Relations Committee, J. William Fullbright of Arkansas and Frank Church of Idaho, both of whom have advocated an early end to U.S. military programs and missions throughout Latin America.

U.S. military assistance to Honduras last year amounted to about $800,000 and to El Salvador about $500,000. These figures sound insignificant; but when added to the lethal handouts of previous years, they are enough to start a small war. And Vietnam has proved how costly and dangerous a small war can turn out to be.

Bits from a diluted news quiz

WHAT KINDS OF NOISES occur at a triple-tandem press conference where a few governors have been set in a row for the convenience and-or frustration of reporters?

Major contributors to the Republican party gathered in the Beverly Hilton Hotel Friday for figurative chalk talks on the status of the party and its plans for gains in 1970. Newsmen had press conferences with two of the main speakers — Congressman Rogers C.B. Morton, the GOP national chairman, and Herbert G. Klein, President Nixon's communications director.

BOB HOUSER

In between those press conferences was a joint one scheduled for four governors — Don Samuelson of Idaho, Norbert Tiemann of Nebraska, David Cargo of New Mexico and Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma. Samuelson's plane was late so the governors' session was only diluted by three parts.

In the glut of utterances by so many political figures, the prospect of quizzing three visiting governors was somewhat less than exciting to newsmen and probably to the governors too. So what do newsmen ask when they really don't care?

ONE ASKED Nebraska's Tiemann to be honest about who would win the Big Eight? Tiemann conceded it would be Oklahoma. Bartlett of Oklahoma registered relish.

Then one of the TV quizzers signaled his cameraman to start rolling and asked — I'm not making this up — if the fact that Nixon did not ask for TV time nor insinuate himself into TV coverage during the moon landing didn't suggest that Nixon was trying to downplay the achievement?

Well, the governors dealt gently with the absurdity. You can look it up in some TV studio if you're interested.

There were some interesting bits. Gov. Tiemann cautioned against counting Ted Kennedy out of the presidency one day. "In 1976 he'll still be a young man and by 1980 he'll still be younger than Nixon is today. What happened was not fatal to his career."

New Mexico's Cargo of course does not favor tax sharing plans for the simple reason that his state gets much more now in federal assistance than it contributes.

Oklahoma's Bartlett said — what else — that the oil depletion allowance should be retained, but conceded a study should be made to determine if oil companies are paying their fair share of taxes. The depletion windfall is needed, he says, to encourage oil exploration.

Cargo said you can't partition to settle the Vietnam war because of the impossibility of drawing any enemy-friend lines in that country without complete Balkanization.

TIEMANN and Bartlett oppose federal administration of the whole welfare program. Cargo favors it, in big words: "The thrust of the program (without federal takeover) is silly. It's eclectic socialism being offered by private practitioners . . . They're compelling states to match funds when they can't match; they're matching us out of existence."

The "silly" he spoke of: Title 19 reduces to five basic services, creating problems like this — a man can get an operation but no drugs are authorized; or, although certain dental care is not covered, the patient may let his teeth rot and then be eligible for surgical care.

So spoke the governors.

Dirty doorsteps

EDITOR:

In your paper I was surprised to read an editor's column belittling J. Edgar Hoover's remarks. It called them "scandalous tidbits." Better start sweeping a few doorsteps here around Long Beach.

For instance: hammering at air pollution (that might be stepping on toes); the man teacher at Cal State who wears dresses and passes out strawberries — wouldn't you like your daughter taught by that one?; the country road entrance to the popular tourist attraction of Ports O Call — one out of five probably end up at the shipping dock because of lack of signs and road markings, a safety hazard at night or any other time.

I'm sure there are plenty of other things to occupy the editor's time other than witch-hunting.

Mr. Hoover is now fighting for our country's present existence, and needs all the help he can muster.

'Me, Tarzan'

EDITOR:

Graffiti is fascinating. Here he parallels "Dear Abby" with his: "JANE SITS HOME WHILE TARZAN SWINGS." This is a real social problem today due to non-Christian men. Compare this:

Christ, our example of a perfect bridegroom, says to His bride (the church): "Yea, I have loved you with an everlasting love" (Jeremiah 31:3).

The unregenerate man says to his wife on this subject:

nothing.

Jesus says: "Lo, I am with you alway" (Matthew 28:20). The natural man says: "You go to your club tonight; I'll go to mine."

Jesus says: I will sup with you, and you with me (Revelation 3:20). The heathen husband today says: "I have a men-only dinner-meeting every night this week."

There are many good (sounding) excuses for these answers. So, I guess marriage will continue to be troubled (people like Graffiti will ease the pressure by joking about it) but, the breakdown of the home will mean the breakdown of everything.

Backyard napalm

EDITOR:

I would like to add a few things to the column by Mr. Robeson concerning the manufacturing of napalm bombs in North Long Beach.

Mr. Robeson did not mention the damage done to windows, doors and plaster inside and out as a result of the explosion. Nor did he mention the noises produced by the plant 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

There was another small explosion eight days after the first one. A large piece of plastic, approximately 3 feet by 6 feet was blown into our backyard. It hit the back of the garage and tore branches from a small tree. My child's wading pool was a few feet from where it hit.

From what I have heard, all that is needed to set off the bombs is an explosion. We have had two, do we need to wait for another?

Do gooder does

EDITOR:

Being called a "do-gooder" used to bother me, but suddenly I feel that I don't measure up to the title.

My eyes have seen, my ears have heard, and my heart has ached for the work that Jerry Grina and Kay Hillman do with Youth Action Commission in North Long Beach. Both of these people are not only dedicated but have love for the people they work with and a valuable insight into the problems they face. They not only must have courage enough to stand up and fight for what they believe in, they must bear ths burden of trying to make Youth Action function against vandalism which is aimed at wiping them out. I come away and wonder why a group of people who are working to better our city must fight the city to survive?

I pray that those who have doubts venture forth and see for themselves.

JFK'S dream

EDITOR:

Like most Americans, the pride I feel at this time in our space exploration achievements is overwhelming.

The courage and creativity of the astronauts and everyone behind the scenes will be hailed the highest commendations known.

However, it is my belief that one small point has been overlooked. Why was John F. Kennedy's name omitted from the plaque left on the moon? I'm not saying that President Nixon's signature shouldn't have been on it, but how could we have possibly overlooked the fact that John Kennedy put into words eight years ago what is being put into reality at this moment.

This was his dream.

Food for everybody's thinking. Strange as it is: corruption is a by-product of an affluent society. Corruption is being investigated by governmental agencies; by private and public societies. But, who investigates the investigators?

Cities gaining most in Soviet

THE SOVIET UNION is a land of great contrasts, and you must view everything with the knowledge that the Russians suffered incredible destruction during World War II. Over 20 million people were killed, and 3,000 cities and 300,000 villages were ravaged by the war.

What impresses a visitor to Russia today is that while great strides have been made in building a strong industrial base, much more must be done for the people.

There is a shortage of consumer goods, yet this same economy produces great things in space and transportation in hydroelectric power and heavy machinery.

There has been immense progress in education and health care. Since my previous visits in 1958 and 1963, I sense a new openess and hospitality, and a more critical self-examination.

But, in some ways, Russia has not changed. You see huge apartment buildings and log huts. You see the massive Moscow subways and dirt roads. You see beautiful displays of farm machinery, and you see women cutting the crops with hand knives. The cities still get the most.

The bureaucracy of the Czars has been supplanted by a bigger bureaucracy under the council of ministers. The old Russian clergy and nobility have been replaced by Communist party leaders and bureaucrats.

But the Soviet Union is today a powerful nation — rich in resources, militarily and industrially strong. The people are better off than ever before. They know no other system but communism, and they are slowly smoothing off the rough edges and changing it to meet their needs.

THE MANY FACES and cultures of Russia can be found on the broad boulevards of Moscow. There is a vital spirit in Moscow; it obviously is the center of a great nation. Its people walk with pride and vigor. Its streets are up to 300 feet wide.

There is a tremendous amount of construction in the center of the city. The streets are busy with traffic as never before. In some cities, the thousands of automobiles would cause traffic jams, but because of the broad Moscow boulevards, the traffic flows easily. People drive fast and almost recklessly by our standards. The buses and street cars are new and the streets are clean.

The new architecture is modern. On the way in from the airport, we saw vast areas of new apartment developments. Some quality has been sacrificed for quanity, but we should not underestimate the achievements.

Everywhere you see people walking fast. Their dress is much better than before. The young people look happier; there are many in Moscow from the provinces. There is a great spirit in the city. Moscow is a mecca for visitors from all over the Soviet Union and the world.

ALMOST NO single family housing is being built in Russia. The new housing is concentrated in large apartment complexes, with plenty of green space between buildings for walks, trees, and grass.

But there is very little landscaping; you see weeds all around the new apartments. There is a strange absence of birds.

The large apartment complex is undoubtedly the most efficient form of new housing. I think the Soviet government also likes them because they are more manageable in terms of control over people. They make it easier for political organization and the control of movement.

The Kremlin is the original city of Moscow. Its name means fortress, and princes and their guards lived there in the 11th and 12th centuries. The Soviets have lavished great care on the Kremlin and its grounds. Within the walls are magnificent cathedrals and museums.

As you look across Red Square and the Kremlin, you see people lined up four abreast for almost a mile to see their historical heritage, and particularly Lenin's tomb.

The great mausoleum in which Lenin is buried opens at 10 a.m. and we were given a special escort. We saw the changing of the guard. Then the bells tolled, and the great doors opened. The lines of people, led by an army officer, slowly began to move.

The visitors go quietly by the tomb. There is no smoking or picture-taking. The atmosphere is one of respect and awe.

As you travel in the countryside, you see many women at work in the fields. They are driving tractors and even working on road repair.

You see handpumps for water, and dirt roads for streets. The rural stores are poorly stocked, and the people are not as well-dressed as in the city. You see many old people sitting in front of their homes.

The young people seem happy and healthy. Many of them dress like westerners while their parents dress like their forefathers did 200 years ago.

THERE IS LESS news available in the Soviet Union than in other countries I visited. The Soviet leaders, however, have found it very difficult to keep the impact of world events away from their people — the news comes through on the BBC or Voice of America or some other source.

Just before the lift-off of Apollo 11. Pravda, the most important Soviet newspaper, made note of our moon flight, but their news emphasis was on the unmanned Luna 15 flight to the moon. On the Sunday night when our astronauts landed on the moon, there was nothing about it on Soviet radio or television for several hours.

Nixon tells allies: 'Get out in front'

WASHINGTON—In his private talks with Asian leaders, President Nixon stressed that the United States intends to avoid getting embroiled in any more Vietnams.

He promised that the U.S. would continue to stand behind them but that they would have to get out in front.

American military might will be available to stop naked communist aggression, but not Vietnam-style infiltration and insurrection. He let our Asian allies know that they could count upon American arms, but not American troops, to fight future guerrilla wars.

THE PRESIDENT has concluded that an American presence in communist-menaced countries encourages rather than discourages rebellion. The appearance of U.S. troops gives the Communists a propaganda weapon to inflame the natives against the "American imperialists." It also improves their bargaining position to demand more weapons from Russia and China.

The deeper the U.S. became involved in Vietnam, for example, the higher became the level of Russian-Chinese intervention. The North Vietnames also skillfully exploited the rivalry between the two communist giants, goading them to outdo each other in their support of the war.

Aides who have been in touch with the President on his flaps-up tour, incidentally, say he is positively buoyant.

The breathtaking lunar landing sent his spirits soaring. At the Pacific splashdown he was as excited as anyone on board the rescue carrier. He basked happily in the reflected glory of the three moon explorers.

Their fantastic feat also gave his overseas mission a lift, and he took diplomatic advantage of the prestige they brought to America. The President enjoys diplomatic more than domestic dealings, and his discussions with Asian leaders left him exuberant.

Nor did Nixon mourn the strange accident that apparently has knocked his chief rival for the presidency out of the running. He received detailed, though unsolicited, reports on Sen. Ted Kennedy's troubles.

The President, of course, sympathized with the victims of the tragedy. But he would have been less than human if he hadn't been cheered at the prospect of not having to run against another Kennedy in 1972.

THE PRESIDENTIAL planes have been completely renovated since Nixon inherited them from LBJ. At considerable cost to the taxpayers, the interiors have been made roomier and the chairs cushier. Partitions have also been added to make the Presidential quarters more private . . . The President has four sleek Boeing 707s and an eight seat Jetstar in the White House fleet. Any plane he uses automatically becomes "Air Force One" . . . Pat Nixon was left behind in Honolulu during the astronauts' splashdown because Navy ships have no facilities for ladies—not even First Ladies . . . . In Bangkok some of the President's fellow travelers patronized the local massage parlors to get their weary muscles rubbed. The rubdowns were administered by pretty, accommodating girls.

THE WHITE HOUSE has let it be known that the President will appoint a new associate justice, replacing Abe Fortas, shortly after Mr. Nixon returns to Washington. In this connection, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina has recommended an excellent man.

He is U.S. District Judge Donald Russell, a former South Carolina governor and senator, who also once headed the University of South Carolina.

Russell is the former law partner of the grand old man of South Carolina politics, Jimmy Byrnes, and served as assistant secretary of state when Byrnes was secretary.

When he was governor of South Carolina, Russell invited "all" citizens to attend his inauguration breakfast, and a great many Negroes, rather timidly, showed up. It was the first time since ante-bellum days that anything like this had happened.

L. A. C. SAYS

Look ahead without forsaking the past

By L. A. COLLINS Sr.

ONE OF THE MOST optimistic estimates of the next 10 years is found in a U.S. News preview of the next decade. Compared with the past it presents a fantastic picture of what is to come. But we certainly are facing problems from the past and present that must be overcome if we are to achieve these predictions under our free enterprise system.

Charts are given estimating a typical family at present having an income of $9000 a year which is projected to up to $15,500 a year by 1979. Two-car households at present total 17 million, expected to be 26 million by 1979. At present we have some 100 million cars, trucks and buses on the road. This is expected to be 35 per cent higher, or 135 million by 1970.

The forecast presents a very attractive picture of the future if we can provide the new highways to carry this 35 per cent increase in vehicles. There is little hope of finding the additional streets in our cities to carry the load. It is a reason why mass rapid transit systems must be provided to take some of this traffic off our streets and highways. Time is short and judging by the past we are not using that time as we should.

IN THE SAME June 23 issue of US. News, I found a chart dealing with the past 10 years. It was headed "People on welfare increasing — costs rising even faster." It shows in 1958 there were 7 million people on welfare compared with 9.7 million in 1968. The cost had risen from $3.4 billion in 1958 to $9.8 billion in 1968. This means during these last 10 years of our greatest prosperity we have added 40 per cent to our welfare cases and 188 per cent to the cost of the programs.

It has brought us to a point where we talk of tax reforms — but not tax reductions. No one seems to know what the reforms will be. But as long as we continue spending at ever increasing rates, greater than increased population, we must face up to the cold fact that taxes will be collected from more people — and in greater amounts from some. But only those in very low income brackets will save a few dollars. Their total payments now are a very small percentage of the total tax collections.

AS THESE projected increased family incomes are achieved it will mean the costs of living will also increase. At present rates of increase there is a great probability that government will at some point enact controls over wages-prices-profits and rents. Should government become so involved it will in effect be a managed economy? It will have an effect on our free enterprise system that will change our whole concept of these factors.

It is constantly being talked about in Washington even though the President rejects the idea. But if increasing wages and prices continue to soar there may be no other alternative. We have seen it happen in the past and recovered from it. But if enacted at a time when the economy is booming it may not be rescinded during the working years of many of those now living.

The charts are exciting. But we would all be wise to give thought to the past as we eagerly look to the future. It is doubtful the estimates of the future will be achieved without some of the setbacks we had in the past. We may be sure we have many problems ahead whatever the family incomes may be in 1979 and what these incomes will buy.

Can post office work like a business?

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By CHARLES SUTTON

ASSISTANT Postmaster General Ronald B. Lee's boast that the post office is 99.999 per cent accurate in delivering the mail has probably caused a few people to wonder whether the postal system is as fast as it is accurate.

There's a modest suspicion abroad that mail delivery may not be as consistently prompt as it should be. But there is little question that the postal system is in serious trouble internally. Either it undergoes a vast and rapid modernization, its critics and supporters alike agree, or it faces large-scale operational breakdowns.

Actually, the post office in recent years hasn't exactly been standing still. It has made some surprisingly innovative changes, and has put some highly sophisticated equipment to work for it.

BUT EVEN with the mechanical and distribution improvements, the changes have been relatively modest in the face of the system's monumental needs.

Nor are the needs confined to mechanization and distribution alone, as Lee indicated in a talk to the Long Beach Mail Users Council. Planning, it seems, has also been woefully neglected.

Until recently, the post office tackled its problems on a piecemeal basis. Former Postmaster General Lawrence O'Brien once compared the department to a fireman constantly putting out small conflagrations.

"The question is," he asked, "can we get out of the role of fireman and take some steps in planning?"

O'Brien supplied his own answer. It was he who put Lee in charge of the department's new bureau of planning, marketing and systems analysis.

LEE IS ONE of those bright young men in government who bring a sharp intellect and a ready wit to their jobs, and who promise to move mountains or collapse. In his recent appearance here, the postal official was asked about the possibility of Long Beach getting a new postal annex.

He said there was a definite possibility. But, significantly, he also said the department was considering the annex in the context of other facilities elsewhere. "We're looking at it on a systems basis," he declared. (In the past — and it still may be the case — political influence would have been an important consideration.)

The fact that systems planning is becoming part of postal thinking indicates the extent to which the post office is kicking over the traces of its past.

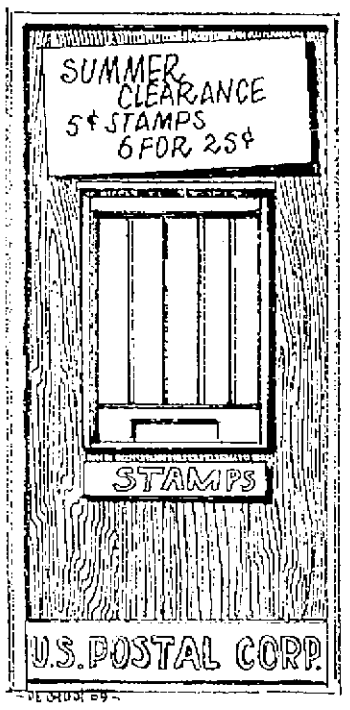

Now the post office must accelerate its pace of change or face the "inevitability" of utter breakdown.

The big question at this juncture is whether the acceleration can take place only after the post office has been torn free of its political moorings and made into a relatively independent public corporation, or whether the reforms can be brought about through changes in the present system.

LEE, ONE OF the first men to recommend the public corporation concept, is inclined to think that unless the post office is given a chance to conduct itself as a modern business — free of any dependence on Congress and insulated from politics — there's little hope for its redemption.

His views parallel those of Frederick R. Kappel, the former board chairman of American Telephone and Telegraph Co. who headed the President's Commission on Postal Organization last year. In backing the corporation plan, Kappel said the post office would improve its fiscal standing through systems improvements and business like management. "It takes a business," he said, "to give good service."

Those who have had unhappy experiences with the telephone company, or some other private utility, might question Kappel's unqualified faith in the virtues of business organization. Obviously, not all businesses are as efficient as the public might expect, and not all can be equated with the public good.

THIS DOESN'T mean that a corporate arrangement might not be better than the present setup. But it does mean, as some critics of the corporation plan argue, that a business-run post office may not be a cure-all.

The critics, contend that the corporation plan is, to some extent, an escape hatch for those in Congress who fear the political consequences of additional postage rate increases. As an editorial in the Federal Times, a weekly newspaper for federal government workers, put it, "The easiest way for (the lawmakers) to get rid of the problem is to pass it on to someone else" — the someone else being a public corporation.

Yet, as the paper pointed out, there's nothing to prevent the corporation from raising rates and reducing service. "The public could complain, but the complaints would have far less effect than they now have when directed at the congressmen." Which is to say that, for all its faults, the present system has the saving grace of being somewhat responsive to public opinion.

BACKERS of the corporation plan would say the present system is also responsive to the lobbying of the postal workers, who, under a business setup, would lose their political pull.

All of which illustrates the ticklish alternatives presented by postal reform. The question simply doesn't lend itself to easy answers — especially in the politically charged atmosphere in which it is being considered.

Yet Congress, in deliberating the fate of the various reform proposals, could do a lot worse than keep in mind the postal system's basic and historic purpose: to serve the public first and the balance sheet second.

If you see a camel scrounging hay keep hoping you're not in the way

By STERLING BEMIS

BASHIR AHMED is a Karachi camel driver who visited the U.S. eight years ago as a guest of Lyndon Johnson, who was then vice president and glad to be noticed.

In return for the howdy, LBJ waved his magic pen. The government shipped a truck to Pakistan as a gift to Ahmed. The camel driver failed to react like the poor Arab in the Arabian Nights who, when granted his wish by the Genie, or Genius, fell to his knees and exclaimed, "Allah be praised!" Instead he said, in flowery Urdu: "What's this jazz about a truck that will get stuck in the desert the first time I make a run for Lahore!"

It is possible he saw no resemblance between LBJ and a Genie, or Genius.

It came to pass the American Embassy in Karachi rented the truck for $176 a month, which qualified Ahmed as the Howard Hughes of the Sind Desert. Recently the embassy returned the truck and cut off the rent. A clerk at the embassy told Ahmed: "Johnson is finished and so are you."

LAST WEEK Ahmed was in the news, complaining that the U.S. had terminated his personal foreign aid program. But before you start a neighborhood Aid to Ahmed collection, please pay attention. Help is wasted on any man who drives a camel. He is beyond help.

The author of this essay has been informing people for years about camels. On request (mainly his own) he is going to share some of this secret lore so you can never say you weren't warned.

Sir F. Palgrave, the Encyclopedia Britannica authority says of the camel: "He is from first to last an undomesticated and savage animal rendered serviceable by stupidity alone."

About the beast's mental capacity there is some argument. There is none about his temper. A camel is as mean as he is tall.

IF YOU SEE one stuffing across the sand he looks like the White Point sewer outfall on stilts. The reason he wears bells is to warn you not to look.

Step in front of one and you are likely to be baptised with a week-old cud. This is the best that can happen to you around a camel.

There are two kinds of camel — the one-humped dromedary and two-humped Bactrian. The encyclopedia laughingly says the Bactrian "occurs wild in the deserts of eastern Turkestan." Wherever any camel occurs it occurs wild. Male camels are wilder than females. This is because the only girl friend a male camel has is a female camel.

THE IDEA that the Ship of the Desert can go 10 days without water is a myth. An Arabian dromedary can carry up to a thousand pounds 25 miles a day for three days without a drink. Being out with a camel between drinks just seems like 10 days.

The she-camel is the favorite for long journeys because she is only frightfully mean and gives milk a year after her confinement. Fortunately, there is only one baby camel at a time and it doesn't mature until it is 16. However, with bad luck, it will live to be 50.

Camels once were native to North America. Their fossils have been found from Alaska to Nevada. The earliest breed was about the size of a jack-rabbit.

In Nevada they survived until "recent" times, geologically speaking. Happily, when a scientist speaks geologically and says "recent times," he's talking about the Pleistocene or Ice Age.

That, if you know camels, was a close shave for us.

Thoughts

Do you not know that if you yield yourselves to any one as obedient slaves, you are slaves of the one whom you obey, either of sin, which leads to death, or of obedience, which leads to righteousness?—Romans 6:16.

In the long run, we shape our lives, and we shape ourselves. The process never ends until we die. And the choices we make are ultimately our own responsibility. — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

L. A. C. SAYS

Look ahead without forsaking the past

By L. A. COLLINS Sr.

ONE OF THE MOST optimistic estimates of the next 10 years is found in a U.S. News preview of the next decade. Compared with the past it presents a fantastic picture of what is to come. But we certainly are facing problems from the past and present that must be overcome if we are to achieve these predictions under our free enterprise system.

Charts are given estimating a typical family at present having an income of $9000 a year which is projected to up to $15,500 a year by 1979. Two-car households at present total 17 million, expected to be 26 million by 1979. At present we have some 100 million cars, trucks and buses on the road. This is expected to be 35 per cent higher, or 135 million by 1970.

The forecast presents a very attractive picture of the future if we can provide the new highways to carry this 35 per cent increase in vehicles. There is little hope of finding the additional streets in our cities to carry the load. It is a reason why mass rapid transit systems must be provided to take some of this traffic off our streets and highways. Time is short and judging by the past we are not using that time as we should.

IN THE SAME June 23 issue of US. News, I found a chart dealing with the past 10 years. It was headed "People on welfare increasing — costs rising even faster." It shows in 1958 there were 7 million people on welfare compared with 9.7 million in 1968. The cost had risen from $3.4 billion in 1958 to $9.8 billion in 1968. This means during these last 10 years of our greatest prosperity we have added 40 per cent to our welfare cases and 188 per cent to the cost of the programs.

It has brought us to a point where we talk of tax reforms — but not tax reductions. No one seems to know what the reforms will be. But as long as we continue spending at ever increasing rates, greater than increased population, we must face up to the cold fact that taxes will be collected from more people — and in greater amounts from some. But only those in very low income brackets will save a few dollars. Their total payments now are a very small percentage of the total tax collections.

AS THESE projected increased family incomes are achieved it will mean the costs of living will also increase. At present rates of increase there is a great probability that government will at some point enact controls over wages-prices-profits and rents. Should government become so involved it will in effect be a managed economy? It will have an effect on our free enterprise system that will change our whole concept of these factors.

It is constantly being talked about in Washington even though the President rejects the idea. But if increasing wages and prices continue to soar there may be no other alternative. We have seen it happen in the past and recovered from it. But if enacted at a time when the economy is booming it may not be rescinded during the working years of many of those now living.

The charts are exciting. But we would all be wise to give thought to the past as we eagerly look to the future. It is doubtful the estimates of the future will be achieved without some of the setbacks we had in the past. We may be sure we have many problems ahead whatever the family incomes may be in 1979 and what these incomes will buy.

Can post office work like a business?

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By CHARLES SUTTON

ASSISTANT Postmaster General Ronald B. Lee's boast that the post office is 99.999 per cent accurate in delivering the mail has probably caused a few people to wonder whether the postal system is as fast as it is accurate.

There's a modest suspicion abroad that mail delivery may not be as consistently prompt as it should be. But there is little question that the postal system is in serious trouble internally. Either it undergoes a vast and rapid modernization, its critics and supporters alike agree, or it faces large-scale operational breakdowns.

Actually, the post office in recent years hasn't exactly been standing still. It has made some surprisingly innovative changes, and has put some highly sophisticated equipment to work for it.

BUT EVEN with the mechanical and distribution improvements, the changes have been relatively modest in the face of the system's monumental needs.

Nor are the needs confined to mechanization and distribution alone, as Lee indicated in a talk to the Long Beach Mail Users Council. Planning, it seems, has also been woefully neglected.

Until recently, the post office tackled its problems on a piecemeal basis. Former Postmaster General Lawrence O'Brien once compared the department to a fireman constantly putting out small conflagrations.

"The question is," he asked, "can we get out of the role of fireman and take some steps in planning?"

O'Brien supplied his own answer. It was he who put Lee in charge of the department's new bureau of planning, marketing and systems analysis.

LEE IS ONE of those bright young men in government who bring a sharp intellect and a ready wit to their jobs, and who promise to move mountains or collapse. In his recent appearance here, the postal official was asked about the possibility of Long Beach getting a new postal annex.

He said there was a definite possibility. But, significantly, he also said the department was considering the annex in the context of other facilities elsewhere. "We're looking at it on a systems basis," he declared. (In the past — and it still may be the case — political influence would have been an important consideration.)

The fact that systems planning is becoming part of postal thinking indicates the extent to which the post office is kicking over the traces of its past.

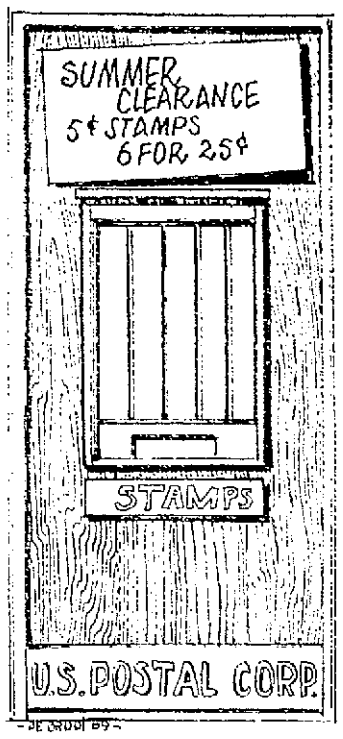

Now the post office must accelerate its pace of change or face the "inevitability" of utter breakdown.

The big question at this juncture is whether the acceleration can take place only after the post office has been torn free of its political moorings and made into a relatively independent public corporation, or whether the reforms can be brought about through changes in the present system.

LEE, ONE OF the first men to recommend the public corporation concept, is inclined to think that unless the post office is given a chance to conduct itself as a modern business — free of any dependence on Congress and insulated from politics — there's little hope for its redemption.

His views parallel those of Frederick R. Kappel, the former board chairman of American Telephone and Telegraph Co. who headed the President's Commission on Postal Organization last year. In backing the corporation plan, Kappel said the post office would improve its fiscal standing through systems improvements and business like management. "It takes a business," he said, "to give good service."

Those who have had unhappy experiences with the telephone company, or some other private utility, might question Kappel's unqualified faith in the virtues of business organization. Obviously, not all businesses are as efficient as the public might expect, and not all can be equated with the public good.

THIS DOESN'T mean that a corporate arrangement might not be better than the present setup. But it does mean, as some critics of the corporation plan argue, that a business-run post office may not be a cure-all.

The critics, contend that the corporation plan is, to some extent, an escape hatch for those in Congress who fear the political consequences of additional postage rate increases. As an editorial in the Federal Times, a weekly newspaper for federal government workers, put it, "The easiest way for (the lawmakers) to get rid of the problem is to pass it on to someone else" — the someone else being a public corporation.

Yet, as the paper pointed out, there's nothing to prevent the corporation from raising rates and reducing service. "The public could complain, but the complaints would have far less effect than they now have when directed at the congressmen." Which is to say that, for all its faults, the present system has the saving grace of being somewhat responsive to public opinion.

BACKERS of the corporation plan would say the present system is also responsive to the lobbying of the postal workers, who, under a business setup, would lose their political pull.

All of which illustrates the ticklish alternatives presented by postal reform. The question simply doesn't lend itself to easy answers — especially in the politically charged atmosphere in which it is being considered.

Yet Congress, in deliberating the fate of the various reform proposals, could do a lot worse than keep in mind the postal system's basic and historic purpose: to serve the public first and the balance sheet second.

If you see a camel scrounging hay keep hoping you're not in the way

By STERLING BEMIS

BASHIR AHMED is a Karachi camel driver who visited the U.S. eight years ago as a guest of Lyndon Johnson, who was then vice president and glad to be noticed.

In return for the howdy, LBJ waved his magic pen. The government shipped a truck to Pakistan as a gift to Ahmed. The camel driver failed to react like the poor Arab in the Arabian Nights who, when granted his wish by the Genie, or Genius, fell to his knees and exclaimed, "Allah be praised!" Instead he said, in flowery Urdu: "What's this jazz about a truck that will get stuck in the desert the first time I make a run for Lahore!"

It is possible he saw no resemblance between LBJ and a Genie, or Genius.

It came to pass the American Embassy in Karachi rented the truck for $176 a month, which qualified Ahmed as the Howard Hughes of the Sind Desert. Recently the embassy returned the truck and cut off the rent. A clerk at the embassy told Ahmed: "Johnson is finished and so are you."

LAST WEEK Ahmed was in the news, complaining that the U.S. had terminated his personal foreign aid program. But before you start a neighborhood Aid to Ahmed collection, please pay attention. Help is wasted on any man who drives a camel. He is beyond help.

The author of this essay has been informing people for years about camels. On request (mainly his own) he is going to share some of this secret lore so you can never say you weren't warned.

Sir F. Palgrave, the Encyclopedia Britannica authority says of the camel: "He is from first to last an undomesticated and savage animal rendered serviceable by stupidity alone."

About the beast's mental capacity there is some argument. There is none about his temper. A camel is as mean as he is tall.

IF YOU SEE one stuffing across the sand he looks like the White Point sewer outfall on stilts. The reason he wears bells is to warn you not to look.

Step in front of one and you are likely to be baptised with a week-old cud. This is the best that can happen to you around a camel.

There are two kinds of camel — the one-humped dromedary and two-humped Bactrian. The encyclopedia laughingly says the Bactrian "occurs wild in the deserts of eastern Turkestan." Wherever any camel occurs it occurs wild. Male camels are wilder than females. This is because the only girl friend a male camel has is a female camel.

THE IDEA that the Ship of the Desert can go 10 days without water is a myth. An Arabian dromedary can carry up to a thousand pounds 25 miles a day for three days without a drink. Being out with a camel between drinks just seems like 10 days.

The she-camel is the favorite for long journeys because she is only frightfully mean and gives milk a year after her confinement. Fortunately, there is only one baby camel at a time and it doesn't mature until it is 16. However, with bad luck, it will live to be 50.

Camels once were native to North America. Their fossils have been found from Alaska to Nevada. The earliest breed was about the size of a jack-rabbit.

In Nevada they survived until "recent" times, geologically speaking. Happily, when a scientist speaks geologically and says "recent times," he's talking about the Pleistocene or Ice Age.

That, if you know camels, was a close shave for us.

Thoughts

Do you not know that if you yield yourselves to any one as obedient slaves, you are slaves of the one whom you obey, either of sin, which leads to death, or of obedience, which leads to righteousness?—Romans 6:16.

In the long run, we shape our lives, and we shape ourselves. The process never ends until we die. And the choices we make are ultimately our own responsibility. — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

A graduate student at California State College at Long Beach says she's considering a lawsuit against the college because a construction company demolished her masters sculpture project.

Her free-form sculpture — 22 feet long, 10 feet high and 9 feet wide — was destroyed to make room for a

"I designed the sculpture so it could be moved," said temporary faculty office building on East Campus Drive. Barbara Moore, of 3216 Colorado St. "I would have moved it if someone had asked me to."

COLLEGE OFFICIALS say a series of mix-ups led to the demise of Mrs. Moore's project, which had been under construction for 1½ years at a "sculpture garden" on an art department lawn.

"The sculpture would still be standing if the dimensions of the new building hadn't been changed because of problems with a sewer line," said Dr. Robert Tyndall, dean of the school of fine arts.

"Then, to top it off, the contractors arrived a half-week early and tried to move it themselves."

"It buckled in half and was ruined."

Mrs. Moore, who expressed anger and bitterness over the destruction of the sculpture, said she had bought the materials for it herself and had been working on it during her spare time and weekends.

It was to be her masters project, she said, and it was half-completed.

Mrs. Moore, who works for the county's Department of Public Social Service in Long Beach, said she had not been notified by college officials that her project had to be moved.

Tyndall said the art department faculty had been trying for some time to get permanent approval for the informal sculpture garden on the lawn — which until last month included about 25 pieces of art work — but the Campus Planning Committee turned it down.

The fine arts school also requested that the temporary faculty office building be placed elsewhere, he said.

The request was also turned down, and students were notified the lawn had to be cleared of sculptures, Tyndall said. It was cleared of all but Miss Moore's and one other by mid-June.

Tyndall said he had earlier paced off the dimensions for the new building, and it appeared Miss Moore's sculpture would be unaffected, but the dimensions of the building were later changed to avoid a sewer line.

"I tried to keep Mrs. Moore informed about construction developments, and apparently she thought we'd assured her her sculpture was safe," he said.

WHEN THE CONTRACTOR showed up a half-week ahead of schedule, he said, the sculpture was demolished before he or the art department faculty knew of it.

"We should have tried harder to assure the sculpture would be safe," Tyndall said. "It was an exciting project."

He noted that the destruction of the project would in no way affect Mrs. Moore's candidacy for a masters degree.

Mrs. Moore refused to elaborate on her threatened suit against the college.

Injured Seaman Lies Alone

Wracked with pain and alone in a foreign country, a Korean national lay in his bed in San Pedro Community Hospital Saturday, unable to communicate with those around him.

Outside — just a few blocks away — the injured man's ship, "Monique" prepared to sail without him.

And the next few weeks for Haing Yoo appear bleak, indeed.

YOO, FIRST electrician for the Monique, is trapped by the language barrier, speaking only his native language and a smattering of Japanese.

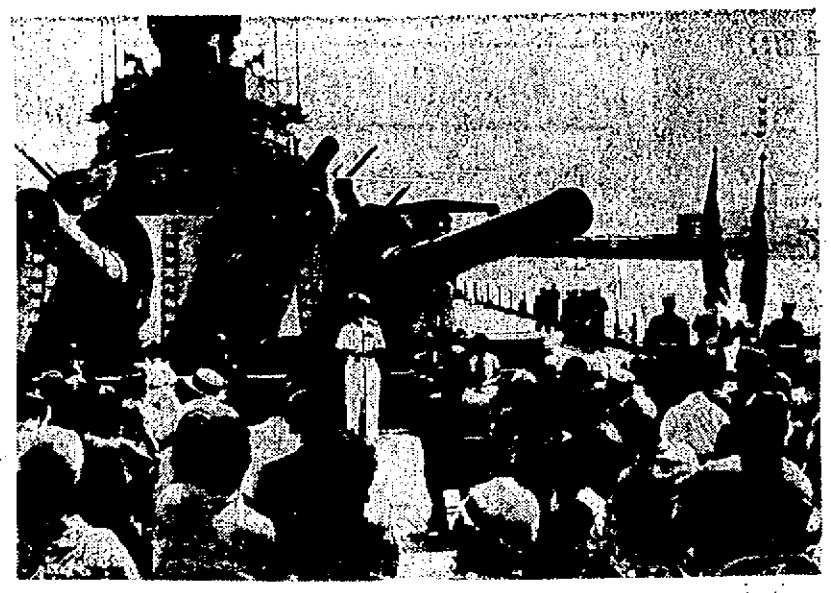

Aboard ship enroute to San Pedro Thursday, Yoo was assisting in dismantling an evaporator when a steel tube, weighing about 1,200 pounds, suddenly fell, crushing his leg.

He was rushed to the hospital when the ship docked and immediately went into surgery.

Because of the severity of Yoo's injuries, a spokesman estimated he will be hospitalized for several weeks.

Unable to wait for his recovery Monique was slated to sail, taking all of his Korean-speaking friends away from him.

OFFICIALS OF the shipping firm that employs Yoo, however, are making arrangements to give him a comparable berth aboard another ship in their fleet when he recovers sufficiently to return to work.

2 Painters Injured in Douglas Fire

Two painters were critically burned in a flash fire at a Douglas Aircraft Division washroom Saturday. Their lives may have been saved by two fast-acting electricians.

Ennis Beresford and Eddie Curtis, employes of Robison Painting Co., Torrance, were in critical condition at Memorial Hospital Long Beach after the 10:30 a.m. fire.

Ray Towne of the aircraft company's public relations office, said Beresford and Curtis were working on the washroom floor in Building 13 when vapors from paint remover apparently ignited.

Beresford ran out of the washroom, his clothes on fire.

Two electricians, Lowell Smith and James Willis, employed by the Kirkwood Electrical Co. in South Gate, smothered the flames on Beresford's body.

Then, Towne said, they helped Curtis out of the building.

Towne said the fire died down almost immediately and posed no threat to neighboring buildings at the large aircraft plant, 3855 Lakewood Blvd.

He said he saw technicians from many nations. Movies were everywhere. Entertainment places and restaurants were packed.

"Cuba is isolated only from the U.S., not from the rest of the world," he explained.

There is "no other" Latin American nation which can match Cuba's achievements, Krisman believes.

"Those countries should invest about 14 per cent of their gross national product but actually reinvest only about six per cent. Cuba claims to reinvest 30 per cent," he said, explaining that "this is one of the reasons why there is a lack of consumer goods."

Asked how he could be sure that Cuba's "claim" of reinvesting 30 per cent of the GNP was valid, Krisman said simply that "I have no more reason to doubt their figures than I do our own."

He met Castro at a reception.

"He is a big man; he has a piercing look, and obviously pays close attention. You're not just 'passing through' to him."

Castro "seems well-loved by his people. There is no formality separating them," he explained.

How to relate the best things he found in Cuba to the American scene?

Krisman does not know, but he is searching for a solution.

Soon, it will be busy time for Krisman. His job is to coordinate academic advising to students, aid them in outlining courses to complete academic requirements, point them to scholarships and fellowships for future studies and be adviser to some of them.

inspired topics must tie directly to the subject.

There are limits, notes Associate Supt. Vernon A. Hinze, for "a student does not have a right to disrupt non-class activities" — commencements, athletic events, student government meetings — by needlessly injecting controversy.

His was an indirect reference to events at Millikan High School's recent graduation ceremonies in which a student speaker departed from a prepared text only to have the microphone switched off.

Some subjects, by definition, are not controversial.

"DEMOCRACY, the American heritage and our established traditions are non-controversial," the guidelines aver. "We believe in them."

By the same token, "communism and fascism are not controversial in America. We do not believe in them."

Controversies arise, it was stated, "from conflicts in the cherished interests, beliefs or affiliations of large groups of our citizens."

Most contentious topics arise in junior college senior and, to a lesser degree, junior high school English and social studies courses, says Hinze. Elementary classes scarcely are affected.

"Problems of American Life" or U.S. history courses legitimately could consider the Vietnam war or growing racial tensions, among other points, he says. The United Nations pro and con fits into the formal of "Contemporary World Problems."

Questions focusing on trade-unionism could arise among economics students and political partisanship in civics.

BECAUSE 20TH CENTURY literature heavily concerns itself with these and other controversies, the English student — especially those in advanced studies — could find involvement in many areas.

The guidelines declare:

"The study of controversial issues is objective and scholarly, with a minimum emphasis on opinion. The teacher approaches controversial issues in the classroom in an impartial and unprejudiced manner and must refrain from using his classroom privileges and prestige to promote a partisan point of view.

"Good teaching of subjects containing controversial issues requires more skill than most other kinds of teaching and, so far as possible, only teachers of superior ability are assigned subjects in which a large body of the material involves controversy."

Two kinds of learning are involved in this process, says Dr. William B. Melchior, director of the district's curriculum-instruction department.

Finding answers to issues is less important than a second aspect.

"TEACHING STUDENTS how to deal with controversy, learning procedures and attitudes toward them is of greater import," Melchior said.

Three of the pupil's rights to classroom consideration of controversial issues are detailed in the statement:

"TO STUDY ANY controversial issue which has political, economic or social significance and concerning which he should begin to have an opinion."

"To study under competent instruction in an atmosphere free from bias and prejudice."

"The right to form and express his own opinions on controversial issues without thereby jeopardizing his relations with his teacher or the school."

Again on record is the Board of Education's official stance that "Free discussion is the heart of the democratic process."

WALLACE

reached no decisions ourselves but he did say he would have this meeting with the regional director on Monday morning."

The regional director of the Office of Economic Opportunity is Joe Maldonado. Wallace's resume indicated he worked as a director of community development for the Los Angeles office of the Economic and Youth Opportunities Agency (EYOA) from June of 1965 until June of 1967, at which time Maldonado directed it. Maldonado would have been previously aware of Wallace's background for that job.

O'Neil said that the meeting of Wallace and Maldonado "will probably crystalize" the Long Beach poverty situation.

"Carl's big concern," O'Neil said, "is the same as the newspaper's. He wants to find out the implications of proposals that were made in the past and what their present status is."

Earlier it was reported the OEO had indicated that substantiation of claims that Wallace's job application and current resume contained fabrications could provide grounds for refusal to approve future programs. There was also a hint that current funding might be halted for the same cause.

OEO Field Representative Maureen Lyon said the San Francisco headquarters "probably wouldn't" take any step as damaging as demanding refunds for programs funded while the questioned resume was being used.

"We don't feel we could go back and penalize a community for something that wasn't their fault," she said.

A graduate student at California State College at Long Beach says she's considering a lawsuit against the college because a construction company demolished her masters sculpture project.

Her free-form sculpture — 22 feet long, 10 feet high and 9 feet wide — was destroyed to make room for a temporary faculty office building on East Campus Drive.

"I designed the sculpture so it could be moved," said Barbara Moore, of 3216 Colorado St. "I would have moved it if someone had asked me to."

COLLEGE OFFICIALS say a series of mix-ups led to the demise of Mrs. Moore's project, which had been under construction for 1½ years at a "sculpture garden" on an art department lawn.

"The sculpture would still be standing if the dimensions of the new building hadn't been changed because of problems with a sewer line," said Dr. Robert Tyndall, dean of the school of fine arts.

"Then, to top it off, the contractors arrived a half-week early and tried to move it themselves."

"It buckled in half and was ruined."

Mrs. Moore, who expressed anger and bitterness over the destruction of the sculpture, said she had bought the materials for it herself and had been working on it during her spare time and weekends.

It was to be her masters project, she said, and it was half-completed.

Mrs. Moore, who works for the county's Department of Public Social Service in Long Beach, said she had not been notified by college officials that her project had to be moved.

Tyndall said the art department faculty had been trying for some time to get permanent approval for the informal sculpture garden on the lawn — which until last month included about 25 pieces of art work — but the Campus Planning Committee turned it down.

The fine arts school also requested that the temporary faculty office building be placed elsewhere, he said.

The request was also turned down, and students were notified the lawn had to be cleared of sculptures, Tyndall said. It was cleared of all but Miss Moore's and one other by mid-June.

Tyndall said he had earlier paced off the dimensions for the new building, and it appeared Miss Moore's sculpture would be unaffected, but the dimensions of the building were later changed to avoid a sewer line.

"I tried to keep Mrs. Moore informed about construction developments, and apparently she thought we'd assured her her sculpture was safe," he said.

WHEN THE CONTRACTOR showed up a half-week ahead of schedule, he said, the sculpture was demolished before he or the art department faculty knew of it.

"We should have tried harder to assure the sculpture would be safe," Tyndall said. "It was an exciting project."

He noted that the destruction of the project would in no way affect Mrs. Moore's candidacy for a masters degree.

Mrs. Moore refused to elaborate on her threatened suit against the college.

Injured Seaman Lies Alone

By BILL GAGNON
Staff Writer

Wracked with pain and alone in a foreign country, a Korean national lay in his bed in San Pedro Community Hospital Saturday, unable to communicate with those around him.

Outside — just a few blocks away — the injured man's ship, "Monique" prepared to sail without him.

And the next few weeks for Haing Yoo appear bleak, indeed.

YOO, FIRST electrician for the Monique, is trapped by the language barrier, speaking only his native language and a smattering of Japanese.

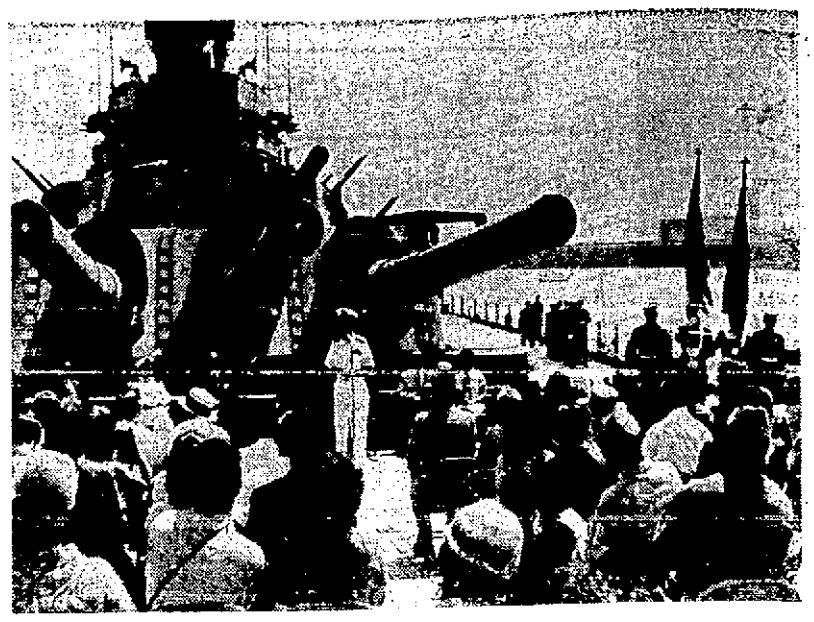

Aboard ship enroute to San Pedro Thursday, Yoo was assisting in dismantling an evaporator when a steel tube, weighing about 1,200 pounds, suddenly fell, crushing his leg.

He was rushed to the hospital when the ship docked and immediately went into surgery.

Because of the severity of Yoo's injuries, a spokesman estimated he will be hospitalized for several weeks.

Unable to wait for his recovery Monique was slated to sail, taking all of his Korean-speaking friends away from him.

OFFICIALS OF the shipping firm that employs Yoo, however, are making arrangements to give him a comparable berth aboard another ship in their fleet when he recovers sufficiently to return to work.

NAVY SKIPPER WELCOMES MARINES

Capt. J. Edward Snyder Jr. welcomes approximately 200 veterans of the 1st Marine Division aboard for memorial services held Saturday morning on the USS New Jersey, world's only active battleship. Capt. Snyder introduced retired USMC Lt. Gen. Edwin Snedeker, who dedicated the services to the nation's veterans and war dead. The 1st Marines conclude their 22 annual reunion and convention in Edgewater Hyatt House today with a farewell brunch.

2 Painters Injured in Douglas Fire

Two painters were critically burned in a flash fire at a Douglas Aircraft Division washroom Saturday. Their lives may have been saved by two fast-acting electricians.

Ennis Beresford and Eddie Curtis, employes of Robison Painting Co., Torrance, were in critical condition at Memorial Hospital Long Beach after the 10:30 a.m. fire.

Ray Towne of the aircraft company's public relations office, said Beresford and Curtis were working on the washroom floor in Building 13 when vapors from paint remover apparently ignited.

Beresford ran out of the washroom, his clothes on fire.

Two electricians, Lowell Smith and James Willis, employed by the Kirkwood Electrical Co. in South Gate, smothered the flames on Beresford's body.

Then, Towne said, they helped Curtis out of the building.

Towne said the fire died down almost immediately and posed no threat to neighboring buildings at the large aircraft plant, 3855 Lakewood Blvd.

cational system, an admirable sanitation system, and crop production which rings cities with open spaces or "greenbelts."

He said he saw technicians from many nations. Movies were everywhere. Entertainment places and restaurants were packed.

"Cuba is isolated only from the U.S., not from the rest of the world," he explained.

There is "no other" Latin American nation which can match Cuba's achievements, Krisman believes.

"Those countries should invest about 14 per cent of their gross national product but actually reinvest only about six per cent. Cuba claims to reinvest 30 per cent," he said, explaining that "this is one of the reasons why there is a lack of consumer goods."

Asked how he could be sure that Cuba's "claim" of reinvesting 30 per cent of the GNP was valid, Krisman said simply that "I have no more reason to doubt their figures than I do our own."

He met Castro at a reception.

"He is a big man; he has a piercing look, and obviously pays close attention. You're not just 'passing through' to him."

Castro "seems well-loved by his people. There is no formality separating them," he explained.

How to relate the best things he found in Cuba to the American scene?

Krisman does not know, but he is searching for a solution.

Soon, it will be busy time for Krisman. His job is to coordinate academic advising to students, aid them in outlining courses to complete academic requirements, point them to scholarships and fellowships for future studies and be adviser to some of them.

SCHOOLS VS. IDEAS

inspired topics must tie directly to the subject.

There are limits, notes Associate Supt. Vernon A. Hinze, for "a student does not have a right to disrupt non-class activities" — commencements, athletic events, student government meetings — by needlessly injecting controversy.

His was an indirect reference to events at Millikan High School's recent graduation ceremonies in which a student speaker departed from a prepared text only to have the microphone switched off.

Some subjects, by definition, are not controversial.

"DEMOCRACY, the American heritage and our established traditions are non-controversial," the guidelines aver. "We believe in them."

By the same token, "communism and fascism are not controversial in America. We do not believe in them."

Controversies arise, it was stated, "from conflicts in the cherished interests, beliefs or affiliations of large groups of our citizens."

Most contentious topics arise in junior college senior and, to a lesser degree, junior high school English and social studies courses, says Hinze. Elementary classes scarcely are affected.

"Problems of American Life" or U.S. history courses legitimately could consider the Vietnam war or growing racial tensions, among other points, he says. The United Nations pro and con fits into the format of "Contemporary World Problems."

Questions focusing on trade-unionism could arise among economics students and political partisanship in civics.

BECAUSE 20TH CENTURY literature heavily concerns itself with these and other controversies, the English student — especially those in advanced studies — could find involvement in many areas.

The guidelines declare:

"The study of controversial issues is objective and scholarly, with a minimum emphasis on opinion. The teacher approaches controversial issues in the classroom in an impartial and unprejudiced manner and must refrain from using his classroom privileges and prestige to promote a partisan point of view.

"Good teaching of subjects containing controversial issues requires more skill than most other kinds of teaching and, so far as possible, only teachers of superior ability are assigned subjects in which a large body of the material involves controversy."

Two kinds of learning are involved in this process, says Dr. William B. Melchior, director of the district's curriculum-instruction department.

Finding answers to issues is less important than a second aspect.

"TEACHING STUDENTS how to deal with controversy, learning procedures and attitudes toward them is of greater import," Melchior said.

Three of the pupil's rights to classroom consideration of controversial issues are detailed in the statement:

"TO STUDY ANY controversial issue which has political, economic or social significance and concerning which he should begin to have an opinion."

"To study under competent instruction in an atmosphere free from bias and prejudice."

"The right to form and express his own opinions on controversial issues without thereby jeopardizing his relations with his teacher or the school."

Again on record is the Board of Education's official stance that "Free discussion is the heart of the democratic process."

reached no decisions ourselves but he did say he would have this meeting with the regional director on Monday morning."

The regional director of the Office of Economic Opportunity is Joe Maldonado. Wallace's resume indicated he worked as a director of community development for the Los Angeles office of the Economic and Youth Opportunities Agency (EYOA) from June of 1965 until June of 1967, at which time Maldonado directed it. Maldonado would have been previously aware of Wallace's background for that job.

O'Neil said that the meeting of Wallace and Maldonado "will probably crystalize" the Long Beach poverty situation.

"Carl's big concern," O'Neil said, "is the same as the newspaper's. He wants to find out the implications of proposals that were made in the past and what their present status is."

Earlier it was reported the OEO had indicated that substantiation of claims that Wallace's job application and current resume contained fabrications could provide grounds for refusal to approve future programs. There was also a hint that current funding might be halted for the same cause.

OEO Field Representative Maureen Lyon said the San Francisco headquarters "probably wouldn't" take any step as damaging as demanding refunds for programs funded while the questioned resume was being used.

"We don't feel we could go back and penalize a community for something that wasn't their fault," she said.

Boaters Advised to Check Signals

Boaters who have been using the Coast Guard's distress frequency "2182 khz" for radio checks should no longer do so, it was announced Saturday.

Eleventh District communications specialists say boaters using the frequency are jamming the band, creating a potential hazard because a "Mayday" call for help might not be received over the clogged frequency.

St. Jacques Shares His Good Fortune

NEW YORK — He sat down gingerly in the midtown restaurant and shifted his jacket around with a jerk of his shoulders. The weight inside the jacket seemed to burden him. He was a good-looking young black man with a smile.

"Can you be arrested for carrying a concealed holster?"

Raymond St. Jacques grinned. He's been wearing it playing a black detective with Godfrey Cambridge in "Cotton Comes to Harlem."

Running through Harlem one day pointing their firearms at kids, both of them were near extermination by a real detective off duty, when St. Jacques screamed, "Cool it, man, it's a movie."

He is one of the most interesting blacks in show business. "Though I'm a bachelor, I'm adopting two black children, 6 and 7, through the Los Angeles Bureau of Adoption," he told us.

"I WOULD like to consider marriage but right now I am single. I want to share my good fortune with two little black youngsters. They tell me I can be a 'father' by the end of the year. I can hardly wait."

He's from Connecticut, where he was known as James Arthur Johnson — but he worked here at Bloomingdale's as a salesman, and was subsequently a dishwasher, stock boy, library typist and model — and today he has a chauffeur who picks him up around 6:45 a.m. after he runs a mile around Central Park Lake. The chauffeur takes him to the film set.

Sixteen when he came here, he got a room at 116th St. where one night he discovered a stranger in his bed — the landlady had double-rented it to a man who snored.

Next stop: houseboy job, Scarsdale. Woman employer, in 40s, used to embrace him, call him "My baby," till her husband beat her up. Exit.

HE BROKE through as the first Negro in "Rawhide" and his first film was "Black Like Me," followed by "The Pawnbroker."

Photographing derelicts is his hobby. "I learn so much about human frailties. Some have been professors. Some have deliberately turned their backs on the world. We've probably lost some great men and women who just decided to quit society.

"I saw one very sad case — a man I knew. My car stopped on 15th St. A familiar face. 'Bill!' I said. I couldn't believe it. He said 'Oh, please don't look at me that way.' He was hung up on junk.'

Sometimes he asks them to accept $5 or $10 to pose. "Stop it, man, no, no. Wow, no. You're stripping them of their dignity. They are my teachers," Raymond St. Jacques says.

THE WEEKEND WIND-UP: Prince Philip attended a London screening of "Alfred the Great," and told David Hemmings, "You made quite a swinger out of the old boy, didn't you?" . . . Jack Nicholson, the hot new actor in "Easy Rider," is being set to star in Mike Nichols' next. . . . Yaphet Kotto, who'll replace James Earl Jones in "Great White Hope," said at Hapsburg House he's getting ready by running five miles a day . . . Tom Shepard of Columbia Records produced Richard Tucker's "Hatikavah" album, followed it with Richard Kiley's Christmas disk . . . Singer Ann Hilton returned to the Persian Rm. with new act and new wardrobe.

This is how long "Hello, Dolly!" has been running: dancer Beverly Baker's gotten married and had two children since opening night . . . Jim Nabors signed singer Julie Budd, 15, for three of his TV shows . . . The Vic Jarmels (of the Gleason show) named the baby Sue . . .

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "To the modern girl a job is only a bridge of sighs between school and marriage." — Fanny Hurst.

EARL'S PEARLS: Joan Rivers reports she served her husband a surprise dinner: "It was a surprise to me too — the label fell off the can."

Eydie Gorme will be wearing, at her Forest Hills concert with Steve Lawrence, a yellow jump suit decorated with feathers (designed by Stavropolous). "What do you sing in that," Steve asked, "—'Up, Up and Away'?" That's earl, brother.

Producer Jay Weston says he's searching for the "sexiest-looking 14-year-old girl in the world" for the film of Rona Jaffe's "The Fame Game" . . . The house electrician at "Oh! Calcutta!" is a gal, Kathy Zosloff, 24; she presents visiting celebrities with hippie beads that she strings.

Larry Grossman, son-in-law of the late Dorothy Kilgallen, is composing the music for the B'way show, "Minnie's Boys" (about the Marx Brothers) . . . Duke Ellington'll tour 25 countries with his band after his Rainbow Grill stint . . . Prince Ranier ordered a $15,000 air-conditioned six-bed car-trailer . . . Robert Brown of "Here Comes the Brides" will campaign for his brother Harold, who's running for office in Long Island.

Avco-Embassy's been having trouble getting mail and parcels out of Russia, where it's filming "Sunflower"; when the first package came through it had the company's expense accounts.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Henny Youngman said at Christo's he attended a ceremony for a retiring cab driver: "It was touching — they gave him a gold-plated Off Duty sign."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A true gentleman is a guy who let a girl get on the Up escalator first — even before the days of the miniskirt.

Fine 'Arsenic' Performance on LBCC Repertory Stage

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

There is an endearing, enduring quality in the saga of two charmingly-scatterbrained mass murders from Brooklyn, now in full revival on the Long Beach City College summer repertory stage.

I refer, but naturally, to "Arsenic and Old Lace," a charmer then when Broadway-new in 1941, and now a while in the spirited hands of City's youngsters.

Like many another revival these days, "Arsenic" is done high-camp under J. L. White's direction. Unlike some, it lacks-so far as I could tell a fragile preciousness too often apparent in this kind of mounting.

Strengthening a feeling of having slipped backward through a time warp are such points as an accurately, beautifully crafted set detailing turn-of-the-century Americana to perfection.

Apparently deeply influenced by a 1944 movie version still rounding the late-late, some few actors found it fun to slip into interesting imitations of celluloid greats from yesteryear. Perhaps the most interesting of these impressions came from a young chap doing Dr. Einstein—Dr. Herman Einstein, that is almost precisely as once characterized by the late Peter Lorre.

Creating their own styles were a pair of talented girls, Evelyn Finer and Sandra Schneider, who almost flawlessly created two ll'l ol' lady-murderers maybe four times their own ages.

Other good acting was apparent although there was something of a slow start. On occasion, I found it difficult to hear all the lines. All probably corrected by this time.

While "Arsenic" is far from dodo extinct, probably it's playing somewhere at any given time, it does represent a vanishing stage species. No longer do playwrights plot out plays with intricately interwoven plot, sub-plot, sub-sub and so forth.

St. Jacques Shares His Good Fortune

NEW YORK — He sat down gingerly in the mid-town restaurant and shifted his jacket around with a jerk of his shoulders. The weight inside the jacket seemed to burden him. He was a good-looking young black man with a smile.

"Can you be arrested for carrying a concealed holster?"

Raymond St. Jacques grinned. He's been wearing it playing a black detective with Godfrey Cambridge in "Cotton Comes to Harlem."

Running through Harlem one day pointing their firearms at kids, both of them were near extermination by a real detective off duty, when St. Jacques screamed, "Cool it, man, it's a movie."

He is one of the most interesting blacks in show business. "Though I'm a bachelor, I'm adopting two black children, 6 and 7, through the Los Angeles Bureau of Adoption," he told us.

"I WOULD like to consider marriage but right now I am single. I want to share my good fortune with two little black youngsters. They tell me I can be a 'father' by the end of the year. I can hardly wait."

He's from Connecticut, where he was known as James Arthur Johnson — but he worked here at Bloomingdale's as a salesman, and was subsequently a dishwasher, stock boy, library typist and model — and today he has a chauffeur who picks him up around 6:45 a.m. after he runs a mile around Central Park Lake. The chauffeur takes him to the film set.

Sixteen when he came here, he got a room at 116th St. where one night he discovered a stranger in his bed — the landlady had double-rented it to a man who snored.

Next stop: houseboy job, Scarsdale. Woman employer, in 40s, used to embrace him, call him "My baby," till her husband beat her up. Exit.

HE BROKE through as the first Negro in "Rawhide" and his first film was "Black Like Me," followed by "The Pawnbroker."

Photographing derelicts is his hobby. "I learn so much about human frailties. Some have been professors. Some have deliberately turned their backs on the world. We've probably lost some great men and women who just decided to quit society.

"I saw one very sad case — a man I knew. My car stopped on 15th St. A familiar face. 'Bill!' I said. I couldn't believe it. He said 'Oh, please don't look at me that way.' He was hung up on junk.'

Sometimes he asks them to accept $5 or $10 to pose. "Stop it, man, no, no. Wow, no. You're stripping them of their dignity. They are my teachers," Raymond St. Jacques says.

THE WEEKEND WIND-UP: Prince Philip attended a London screening of "Alfred the Great," and told David Hemmings, "You made quite a swinger out of the old boy, didn't you?" . . . Jack Nicholson, the hot new actor in "Easy Rider," is being set to star in Mike Nichols' next . . . Yaphet Kotto, who'll replace James Earl Jones in "Great White Hope," said at Hapsburg House he's getting ready by running five miles a day . . . Tom Shepard of Columbia Records produced Richard Tucker's "Hatikavah" album, followed it with Richard Kiley's Christmas disk . . . Singer Ann Hilton returned to the Persian Rm. with new act and new wardrobe.

This is how long "Hello, Dolly!" has been running: d a n c e r Beverly Baker's gotten married and had two children since opening night . . . Jim Nabors signed singer Julie Budd, 15, for three of his TV shows . . . The Vic Jarmels (of the Gleason show) named the baby Sue . . .

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "To the modern girl a job is only a bridge of sighs between school and marriage." — Fanny Hurst.

EARL'S PEARLS: Joan Rivers reports she served her husband a surprise dinner: "It was a surprise to me too — the label fell off the can."

Eydie Gorme will be wearing, at her Forest Hills concert with Steve Lawrence, a yellow jump suit decorated with feathers (designed by Stavropolous). "What do you sing in that," Steve asked, "—'Up, Up and Away'?" That's earl, brother.

Producer Jay Weston says he's searching for the "sexiest-looking 14-year-old girl in the world" for the film of Rona Jaffe's "The Fame Game" . . . The house electrician at "Oh! Calcutta!" is a gal, Kathy Zosloff, 24; she presents visiting celebrities with hippie beads that she strings.

Larry Grossman, son-in-law of the late Dorothy Kilgallen, is composing the music for the B'way show, "Minnie's Boys" (about the Marx Brothers) . . . Duke Ellington'll tour 25 countries with his band after his Rainbow Grill stint . . . Prince Ranier ordered a $15,000 air-conditioned six-bed car-trailer . . . Robert Brown of "Here Comes the Brides" will campaign for his brother Harold, who's running for office in Long Island.

Avco-Embassy's been having trouble getting mail and parcels out of Russia, where it's filming "Sunflower"; when the first package came through it had the company's expense accounts.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Henny Youngman said at Christo's he attended a ceremony for a retiring cab driver: "It was touching — they gave him a gold-plated Off Duty sign."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A true gentleman is a guy who let a girl get on the Up escalator first — even before the days of the mini-skirt.

Fine 'Arsenic' Performance on LBCC Repertory Stage

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

There is an endearing, enduring quality in the saga of two charmingly-scatterbrained mass murders from Brooklyn, now in full revival on the Long Beach City College summer repertory stage.

I refer, but naturally, to "Arsenic and Old Lace," a charmer then when Broadway-new in 1941, and now a while in the spirited hands of City's youngsters.

Like many another revival these days, "Arsenic" is done high-camp under J. L. White's direction. Unlike some, it lacks-so far as I could tell a fragile preciousness too often apparent in this kind of mounting.

Strengthening a feeling of having slipped backward through a time warp are such points as an accurately, beautifully crafted set detailing turn-of-the-century Americana to perfection.

Apparently deeply influenced by a 1944 movie version still rounding the late-late, some few actors found it fun to slip into interesting imitations of celluloid greats from yesteryear. Perhaps the most interesting of these impressions came from a young chap doing Dr. Einstein—Dr. Herman Einstein, that is almost precisely as once characterized by the late Peter Lorre.

Creating their own styles were a pair of talented girls, Evelyn Finer and Sandra Schneider, who almost flawlessly created two li'l ol' lady-murderers maybe four times their own ages.

Other good acting was apparent although there was something of a slow start. On occasion, I found it difficult to hear all the lines. All probably corrected by this time.

While "Arsenic" is far from dodo extinct, probably it's playing somewhere at any given time, it does represent a vanishing stage species. No longer do playwrights plot out plays with intricately interwoven plot, sub-plot, sub-sub and so forth.

STAR OF PACIFIC HEADS SEAWARD

The Star is Baldheaded

The three-masted schooner, Star of the Pacific, largest sailing yacht on the Pacific Coast, is all the flattering things poets write about sailing vessels despite the fact the Star is baldheaded!

Only a few of the more knowledgeable sailors in the Long Beach Marina where the Star docks, recognizes she is baldheaded. They could care less for it detracts not an iota from her graceful lines or beauty.

Baldheaded is sea-talk meaning she has no top masts, stick-like extensions secured to the three masts and protruding upward resembling a bayonet attached to an infantryman's rifle.

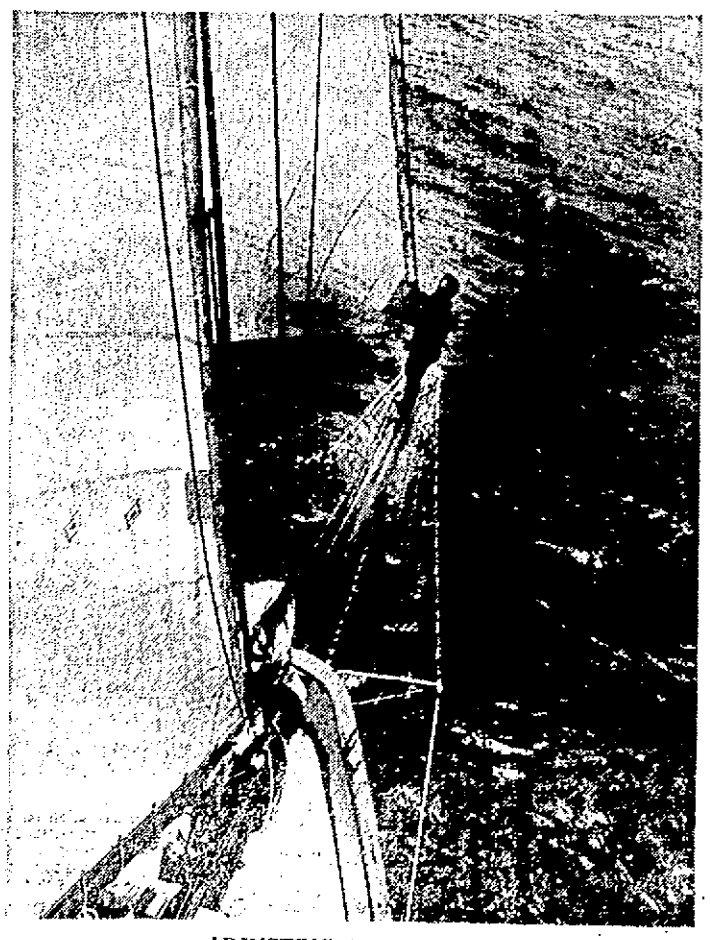

Since acquired a year ago by the Louis Zukors of Long Beach the 138-foot, Marconi-rigged schooner has become a familiar site among boaters and those who frequent the shoreline.

Louis and his wife Edna bought the yacht to realize a life-long dream — to sail aboard their own boat to the far away romantic places; the Caribbean, Hawaii, Tahiti, the Mediterranean or where ever the winds blow them.

Short voyages to Catalina or to islands off the coast of Baja California serve as training cruises for the Zukor's two sons, David, 21, and Michael, 18, who will crew the boat when her six sails catch the breeze and the helmsman points the tapered bowsprit toward those dreamed of places beyond the sea's ever retreating horizon.

ROBERTA, FREDDIE MERGED TALENTS

Southland's Miss Linn Never Really Left Iowa

By EARL WILSON
I, P-T Broadway Columnist

NEW YORK — Although singer Roberta Linn was born in Gravity, Iowa, and raised in Huntington Park, Calif., she never really left Iowa.

"There are so many of us in Huntington Park that we call it Little Iowa," she explained.

Her mother is Madge Dubin, 10711 Madge Av., Downey.

"WHEN OUR family moved here, they found so many familiar faces. My grandmother would meet all her old friends from the midwest.

"I remember going to Long Beach for Iowa picnics. The highlight was a real Iowa dinner — chicken and dumplings."

Roberta was still a teenager when she was chosen by Lawrence Welk as his first television Champagne Lady. Freddie also was a star in his own right. Freddie Bell and the Bell Boys were discovered by Columbia Pictures, for whom they made such films as "Rock Around the Clock" and "Rumble on the Docks." He was first to record "Hound Dog."

They married eight years ago. Two years later they merged talents to form a single act.

"IT TOOK US three years to get used to each other," he said.

"That's a long honeymoon," I remarked.

"She'd be stepping on my toes," Freddie explained, "and I'd be stepping on hers."

Their act is together enough now to land them a date at the Copacabana where they're currently starring. They'd been appearing in Vegas steadily before this New York debut.

This is one show business marriage that just has to work. They need each other — for their act!

STAR OF PACIFIC HEADS SEAWARD

The Star is Baldheaded

The three-masted schooner, Star of the Pacific, largest sailing yacht on the Pacific Coast, is all the flattering things poets write about sailing vessels despite the fact the Star is baldheaded!

Only a few of the more knowledgeable sailors in the Long Beach Marina where the Star docks, recognizes she is baldheaded. They could care less for it detracts not an iota from her graceful lines or beauty.

Baldheaded is sea-talk meaning she has no top masts, stick-like extensions secured to the three masts and protruding upward resembling a bayonet attached to an infantryman's rifle.

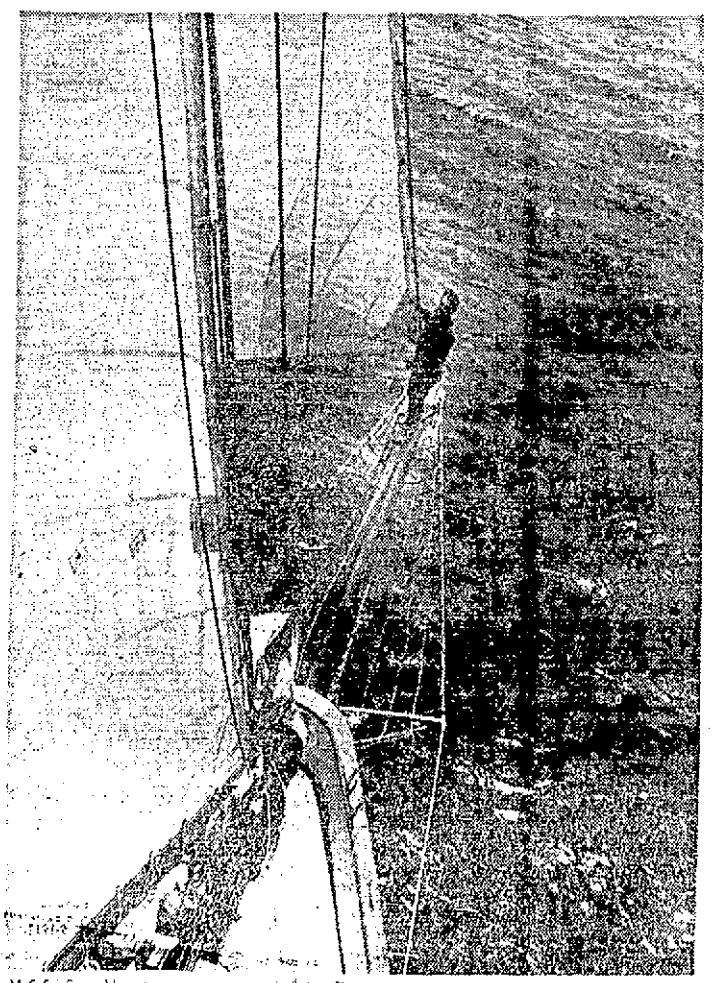

Since acquired a year ago by the Louis Zukors of Long Beach the 136-foot, Marconi-rigged schooner has become a familiar site among boaters and those who frequent the shoreline.

Louis and his wife Edna bought the yacht to realize a life-long dream — to sail aboard their own boat to the far away romantic places; the Caribbean, Hawaii, Tahiti, the Mediterranean or where ever the winds blow them.

Short voyages to Catalina or to islands off the coast of Baja California serve as training cruises for the Zukor's two sons, David, 21, and Michael, 18, who will crew the boat when her six sails catch the breeze and the helmsman points the tapered bowsprit toward those dreamed of places beyond the sea's ever retreating horizon.

ROBERT BRAHAM MAKES TRICKY ADDITION TO MODEL OF GALLEON
Court Clerk Has Used Model Building to Ease Ulcer Problems

SWEDISH GALLEON IN LAKEWOOD

Rebuilding of a Ghost Ship

By VINT MADER
Staff Writer

A legendary ghost ship that was resurrected from the bed of Stockholm Harbor 10 years ago is also undergoing a further reincarnation in a Lakewood den.

The vessel was the geat galleon Wasa, the intended pride of Sweden's 17-enctury sinkingh herself 108 feet tothe bottom after accomplishing just 7,000 horizontal Navy; she went straight into history hy feet on her maiden voyage.

The Lakewood version of Wasa is a delicate 30½ inches long and the dame measure from keelson to main topmast, the patient project of Robert A. Braham, chief court clerk of Southeast Superior Court, Norwalk.

BRAHAM BEGAN almost four years ago on his model of the illfated galleon, which in Stockholm has been raised, restored to glory and secured safe from the "deep six" ina glass and concrete structure as a Swedish National museum.

Braham launched his undertaking with lots of airplane modeling experience, but only one piror boat, a sleek working model of a cabin cruiser powered by a miniature outboard engine.

However, he sat himself two basic standards. He insisted on doing a model with nonsolid hull, and he did not attempt the dubious possibility of making a sailing model of the unseaworthy Vasa.

One reason for the project was medical advice. He was stricken with chronic miseries of ulcerative colitis, a painful intestinal disorder, and his physician told him to find a light hobby to keep his evenings busy.

Bob stayed at the post he thensheld as clerk to Los Angeles Superior Judge Ray Bennett, but looks back thankfully tothe help of the judge and the rest of the court staff.

"I was so sick, Icouldn't pull my own weight," he says. "In fact my physical weight dropped fast all the way from 240 pounds to 165. They 'carried' me in the job for months."

THE MODEL that helped unburden his evening hours came to light ina downtown Los Angeles hobby shop in the first week of January, 1965.

He found the plans and materials he wanted — a Wasa design to be constructed from authentic elements of keel, frames and planking.

Now that he has reached the stage of most severe patience vtesting — trying to thread the intricate rigging for which nobody seems ever to have found the true sail plans — he recalls the building of the hull as a pain-reliever that waw by comparison a contsant pleasure.

This despite the fact the hull alone was about nine months' work from the tapping of tiny plankingn nails to making and mounting gilded ornamentation and painting, paiting, painling.

Throughout, Wasa in miniature has presented problems that imitate the original.

THE 1,400-TON warship foundered when she heeled before the first strong squall of wind that struck her and seas poured in the ports of her lower gun deck that had been left carelessly open. Whether the prime cause was solely a fatal design instability or partly poor ballasting was never clear.

She was located in the 1950s by Anders Franzen, a history-minded Swedish admiralty engineer, in amazingly well-preserved condition, and raised through his organizing efforts.

The model kits — made in Denmark, rather than Sweden — was far short in quanityt of the little nails. Bob improvised with tiny spikes used by model railroaders, but their heads were a shade too big, so he had to file each down.

The comraderie of the modelers' world also brought him tips from other enthusiasts and helps like catalogs of new supply houses.

He has also improvised tools, adapting bits of wire, a nut pick and rubber bands, in addition to basic devices like needlenosed pliers and modeling knives.

In plans alone, he has not a total of three, all differing in many details.

"Well, it leaves me lots of freedom to figure my own way in and out of trouble," he muses.

kut, always, he strives for the anhhentic. He secured help to interpret the Danish versions of the ancient Swedish light browns, rèddish browns and dark browns.

§ CANTANKEROUS galleon to the end, historic project Wasa has also been buffeted dangerously by the seas of modern California life.

One dark day Braham's wife, Ruth, dusted diligently with a vacuum nozzle in the shipyard-den. Nozzle knocked fully rigged bowsprite out of its mountings.

"Those threads must have acted like spring wires," says Braham. "It tangled up in itself so much, I never could unstring it. So I had to cut all of it away and rerig entirely."

Shipyard labors were also halted for months when Bob accepted promotion to head the Southeast District clerk offuce, his evenings being totally preempted as he struggled with the new office and many record-keeping innovations that are being tested there.

"But now I'm getting my nervous fingers back into all that rigging. I'm shotting for completion in January," he forecasts. "However, I don't dare let myself get hurried at this point, or the little Wasa might meet as bad an end as the big one."

Watts Will Have Probation Float

A float created by children from Los Padrinos Juvenile Hall in Downey will be part of the County Probation Department's participation in the Fourth Annual Watts Summer Festival, which begins Monday.

The department will also be represented by a float depicting the VISTO (Volunteers in Service to Offenders) program, paintings, a drill team and an information booth.

The Watts Festival, a non-profit, charitable event, was first held on the anniversary of the August 1965 riots to symbolize the rebirth of Watts.

Its intent is to promote and perpetuate cultural and recreation events in the South Central Los Angeles area in a festival-like manner, while also making it possible for area residents to exhibit their creative abilities.

Massachusetts Senator Edward Brooke and California Senator Alan Cranston were among those sending statements of support and encouragement to festival officials this week.

Telegrams and letters praising the event were also sent by NAACP chief Roy Wilkins and Congressman Charles H. Wilson, whose 31st district encompasses approximately 150,000 black residents.

Brooks and Cranston offered to serve as sponsors.

Wilson's telegram, addressed to the festival headquarters, states:

The festival is also being honored by busloads of visitors from many parts of the state.

AWARD FOR SERVICE TO AGING
John G. Sonneborn Jr. (l.), a Pacific Telephone Co. executive and past president of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce, accepts Los Angeles County's Award of Honor plaque from Supervisor Ernest E. Debs as John T. Walker (r.), director of senior citizens affairs for county, looks on. Award was for Sonneborn's service as past president of county's Committee on Affairs of the Aging, and for other civic contributions.

Homes Exempt for $137 Million in Orange Co.

Homeowners' exemptions of $750 for qualified residential properties in Orange County totaled $136,994,240 in assessed valuation for this fiscal year, Andrew J. Hinshaw, county tax assessor, said Saturday.

Exemptions of 15 per cent on business inventories totalled $26,373,023 in assessed valuation county-wide, he said.

Hinshaw said both exemptions are funded by the state and don't affect the tax rates and budgets of local taxing jurisdictions.

Road and Track Magazine (May 1968) says:

They Will Meet 'After 61 Years'

An excited, happy Long Beach woman boards a plane today for Winnipeg, Canada — and a reunion with a brother she has not seen since childhood.

"I never thought it would happen to me," bubbled Mrs. Stella Harris, of Apt. 12, American Gold Star Homes.

Mrs. Harris, 75, last saw her brother, Michael Thomas, now 62, when he was 11 months old back in their native Poland.

That was in 1906, when she was 12 years old. She left Poland with her father to go to Winnipeg. Her brother and mother remained in Poland.

In 1924, Mrs. Harris said, she arranged for her mother to come to Canada. There they lived until 1952, when Mrs. Harris' daughter moved to Las Vegas, and so did Mrs. Harris. Nine years ago, Mrs. Harris moved to the Southland.

Over the years, there was little word of the brother.

"I thought he had been killed in the war," said Mrs. Harris.

A short time ago, her mother, now 95, mentioned in a letter that she was expecting Michael. Mrs. Harris couldn't stand the suspense. She telephoned her mother two weeks ago.

"I got hold of somebody on the phone," she said, happily remembering the call. She said she told the person she wanted to speak to her step-brother. "Then he said, 'Do you know who you're talking to?'" Mrs. Harris said. "'You're talking to your brother!'"

Said Mrs. Harris recalling the conversation: "I couldn't believe it . . ."

GUARD TAKES KILLER SUSPECT TO COURT

Coed-Slaying Link Sought in 7 Cases

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — A handsome student athlete charged with the sex-torture murder of the seventh young woman slain in this academic pocket within the past two years was appearing in police lineups Saturday in the continuing search for killers of the other six victims.

Police were refusing to make any statements about the case following the brief announcement that John Norman Collins, 22, an Eastern Michigan University senior "who seemed to like motorcycles more than he liked girls," had been charged with slaying of Karen Sue Beineman, 18, Grand Rapids, Mich., an EMU freshman.

Collins has been identified by two witnesses as the man on the motorcycle with whom Miss Beineman was last seen alive, it was learned Saturday.

SEVERAL lineups which included Collins and other inmates of the Washtenaw County jail were held Friday night and early Saturday.

Police would not say whether the persons viewing the lineups were possible witnesses in Miss Beineman's slaying, or in the other six killings.

"We still have six other murders that have to be solved and we're not going to quit until we have," Sheriff Douglas J. Harvey said.

"We never rule out anyone arrested until a full investigation has been made," Police Chief Walter Krasny of Ann Arbor said.

However, Krasny admitted, "I had my best night's sleep in months last night. I hope we can wrap up the entire series of slayings soon."

The nude body of Miss Beineman, battered beyond recognition, was found July 26, face down in a gully near Ann Arbor. She had vanished three days earlier after shopping for a wig.

COLLINS, a husky six footer who was an English major and hoped to be an elementary school teacher, was arrested Thursday night and charged Friday with killing Miss Beineman.

2 Justices in Illinois to Resign

AURORA, Ill. (AP) — Lambert Ochsenschlager, attorney for justices Roy J. Solfisburg Jr. and Ray J. Klingbiel, said Saturday both men will resign from the Illinois Supreme Court.

He made the statement by telephone to the Aurora Beacon News.

An investigating commission had called for the resignation of two justices Thursday on grounds that they had committed acts of impropriety. A bit earlier, a typewritten statement bearing the signature Roy J. Solfisburg Jr. had been delivered to some newsrooms in Chicago.

Justices Solfisburg and Klingbiel acquired stock in the Civic Center Bank & Trust Co. at a time when a case involving an organizer of the bank, Theodore Isaacs, was before the court.

The Solfisburg statement said: "No decision of mine and no decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois during my service was tainted with impropriety."

Birth Control Nearing Total Acceptance in U.S.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. (UPI) — A group of scientists, medical men and population experts say American women appear to be approaching total acceptance of birth control regardless of religious, racial or economic status.

Furthermore, they said, the trend toward family planning appears to be moving around the world.

These were the conclusions of the men who made a study and published their findings in the book "Fertility and Family Planning" published by the University of Michigan Press. The study was edited by three U. of M. experts, Dr. S. J. Behrman, Dr. Leslie Corsan Jr. and Dr. Ronald Freedman.

THE WRITERS included sociologists and population experts Charles Westoff of Princeton, Norman Ryder of Wisconsin, Simon Kuznets of Harvard, Harrison Brown of Cal Tech, and Bernard Berelson of the Population Council.

Westoff and Ryder said, "The norm of fertility control has become universal in contemporary America." They dated as between 1960 and 1965 a change in behavior and attitude, especially among Catholic and non-white persons, and added that in general, American women appear to be approaching a total acceptance of some form of birth control, regardless of religious preference or devoutness, race, education, income, husband's occupation, or area of residence.

They predicted that the trend toward acceptance would continue, but at a slower pace as the percentage of those to whom birth control is unacceptable diminished.

Miniskirts Blamed

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—A provincial assemblyman blames a rise in traffic accidents here on a rise in hemlines. Lee Wen-Chen says there's been a sharp increase in mishaps in the slow lanes since miniskirts appeared on the street earlier this year. He said they're also causing more morals offenses.

Knifers Slay Man, Rape Fiancee

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Hunters Point man was stabbed to death, his father beaten and his fiance raped in a savage assault by four youths, police said Saturday.

Police reported two other homicide deaths overnight, raising to 94 San Francisco's total for the year to date. The total in all 1968 was 91.

One of the other victims was found in his apartment. Police said he died six days ago of a beating. The other, a merchant seaman, died of injuries suffered a barroom brawl 10 days ago.

Inspectors said four youths jumped George Carter, 63, and his son Darel, 33, as they passed in front of Carter's apartment Friday night.

Police said the youths beat the father and son to the ground, stomped on them and stabbed them repeatedly.

Darel Carter, a Southern Pacific employe, was stabbed in the chest and groin and died at the scene.

His father George, with a stab wound in his back, was forced up the stairs to his apartment.

Police said the youths ripped wedding and engagement rings from Mrs. Carter's fingers.

They said one youth seized Darel Carter's fiance, dragged her into a bedroom and raped her.

Before the four youths fled they took $90 from Mrs. Carter's purse and $25 form her dead son's pockets, police said.

18,000 Vote to Strike United Air Lines

REDWOOD CITY (AP) — A 97 per cent vote favoring strike action against United Air Lines was reported Saturday by the International Association of Machinists.

The IAM's District 41 represents 18,000 UAL employes, most of them mechanics.

George J. Robinson, District 141 president, said the nearly complete system-wide tally included major UAL terminals at San Francisco, New York, Chicago, Washington, Denver, Philadelphia, Detroit, and Seattle.

He said the vote result, however, does not mean an immediate walkout.

Under law, the National Mediation Board is required to offer to arbitrate the deadlocked contract dispute.

No strike can be called until 30 days after the board proposes arbitration, if both sides effect it.

Robinson said that since a tentative agreement was rejected last May, United has not improved its wage offer in five weeks of renewed bargaining extending until late July.

He said union members rejected last May 12 a United Air Lines offer increasing wages by 29.25 per cent over three-years.

The union's contract expired last Dec. 31.

IAM's system-wide headquarters for UAL workers is located here.

Gunshot Causes Some Discomfort

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—Frederick Bibbs, 27, of Anchorage, was cleaning a pistol Saturday when the gun discharged, the bullet striking him in the stomach.

As he was being carried into a hospital, his sobbing wife at his side after having called an ambulance, the bullet dropped to the floor.

Examination showed that one of the large studs of his pants had stopped the bullet. He left the hospital with only a bruised stomach.

That question will be answered partially today at 2 p.m. in Mottell's Garden Room when the sponsoring Independent Business Men's Association's preliminary judging takes place.

Red Cross Needs Volunteer Drivers

A call for help is out for volunteer drivers to serve the Long Beach Red Cross chapter.

Red Cross Transportation Service volunteers drive air conditioned station wagons, furnished by Red Cross. They transport service people to hospitals, deliver training films and other materials to instructors of first aid and other programs, and deliver blood from the chapter to any one of 24 hospitals in the area supplied with blood by Red Cross.

"If you have one day a week, a valid driver's license and are in good health, we need you, desperately," said Jeri Baker, volunteer Transportation chairman. "Just last week I delivered blood to the Navy Hospital for a woman already in surgery," she continued. "They were so happy to see me, it gave me a good feeling to know that I helped out by getting blood to a person who depended on it for life."

"One of my faithful drivers is ill, another is working on a temporary job, others take time off for any one of a number of reasons. We are all volunteers who serve in transportation," Mrs. Baker said.

Interested persons should call Mrs. Jeri Baker at the Red Cross chapter, weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Homeowners Fight to Block Hospital

Irate residents of east Westminster have banded together to fight against a 112-bed psychiatric hospital, proposed for Ward Street and Bolsa Avenue.

Sal Guzzetta, 15192 Essex Circle, was elected president of the newly form Westminster-Garden Grove Homeowners' Association. Carl Lewis of Garden Grove was elected vice chairman and Mrs. Carol Hart, secretary-treasurer.

Plans are also being made for a "Mothers' March" on the Westminster City Hall prior to the city council's Aug. 12 meeting. Guzzetta said the organization has filed an appeal on the council decision granting a conditional use permit for the hospital and the matter will be heard Aug. 12.

"If we don't get any action from the council," Guzzetta said, "we plan to take the matter to court."

The residents object to the hospital on the grounds that it will depress property values in the area and maintain that the security arrangements are inadequate.

Dodgers Keep Losing, Waiting for Parker

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer.

ST. LOUIS — It's getting so that whenever manager Walter Alston or any of his lieutenants discuss the whys and hows of the Dodgers, the subject invariably gets around to Wes Parker.

Wes is back home in sunny Southern California, on the mend from his appendicitis operation and because of it, Alston and the Dodgers aren't exactly in stitches these days.

"Without Wes we're just not scoring runs," Alston was saying, "and even when we do get some runs we're giving away too many.

"We're just not putting anything together."

It was that way Saturday night as the Dodgers dropped their fourth game in a row — matching their longest skid of the season — a 7-6 tussle to high-flying St. Louis.

"It's not that Wes does it all," the manager said before the game, the sixth win in a row for the Cardinals.

DODGER OF DAY

WILLIE DAVIS doubled, singled and drove in three runs in Dodgers' 7-6 loss to St. Louis.

"Not at all," Alston went on, "But you take any club and remove its best hitter just like that and it'll have some trouble."

Since Parker went under the knife a week ago Wednesday the Dodgers have won but three of 10 games.

They're still hugging first place Atlanta in the Western Division race that has five clubs locked together within a 2½-game minispread.

It's not only Parker's bat the Dodgers miss, it's his super glove and maneuverability as well. Parker, the day after the operation, told his teammates to stick close and he'll be back for the stretch.

They're sticking close, all right, but not quite the way Wes had in mind.

In Saturday's dipper the Dodgers booted three plays which contributed heavily as Don Sutton failed for the fourth time in a row to post his 13th victory of the year.

It was a horrendous three-run sixth inning that made the difference, as things turned out, since the Dodgers came alive with a five-run splurge in the seventh.

Willie Davis, who hadn't driven in a run in two weeks and only one in the last five weeks, doubled in two runs in the big seventh.

The giveaway in the sixth was too much to overcome, however.

Julian Javier crashed his eighth home run but that was followed by a couple of infield hits, not to mention throwing errors by Manny Mota and Bill Sudakis which wound up costing the Dodgers two runs and, eventually, the game.

"We haven't played well at all in the last two weeks," Alston continued as he analyzed the Dodgers' woes. "We've been in most every game but even

Senators Outlast Angels

Game Ends in 10th With Bases Loaded

Ken McMullen's pinch hit sacrifice fly in the 10th inning Saturday night scored Jim French from third with the tie-breaking run to carry the Washington Senators to an 8-7 victory over the Angels.

By MIKE DUDA

The Angels scored once in the bottom of the seventh to tie the Washington Senators 7-7 in a seesaw battle that went into extra innings Saturday night at Anaheim Stadium.

The Senators wasted no time jumping all over Tom Murphy.

After Del Unser and Lee Maye led off the first with back-to-back singles, Sandy Alomar dropped a throw from Jim Fregosi on a force allowing Washington to load the bases with no one out. Mike Epstein's double play ball brought Unser across with the unearned run.

In the second the Nats scored four times, that prompted manager Lefty Phillips to pull Murphy in favor of Clyde Wright.

Washington combined five hits, a wild pitch and a walk for the runs.

Turnabout was fair play in the bottom of the second as the Angels sent starter Barry Moore to the showers.

The Angels scored three times on four hits, including a double by Jim Spencer for a run, two walks and a sacrifice fly by Jim Hicks, pinch-hitting for Wright.

The Senators added another unearned tally in the fourth inning when Unser scored on a passed ball by Bob Rodgers. Unser had walked off Ed Fisher, the third Angel pitcher.

Jack Hannum of the Senators fared about as well as his fellow hurlers. After shutting off the Halos for two innings in relief of Moore Hannum saw three run lead blow up in his face.

In the fifth the Angels tied the contest at 6-6 with a three run outburst on two hits and an error. Jim McGlothlin, the fourth Angel to try the mound, drove in one run.

The Angels scored once in the bottom of the seventh to tie the Washington

PETE TO SEE REPORT ON OTTO-JOHN

NEW YORK (AP) — A spokesman for pro football Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Saturday the commissioner is waiting for a report from Mel Hein regarding the feud which flared Friday night during the All-Star football game in Chicago between Johnny Sample and Otto Graham.

Hein is supervisor of officials for the American Football League.

Sample is the defensive captain of the New York Jets, who beat the College All-Stars in Friday night's game 26-24.

The resumption of the long time feud between Sample and Graham, who coached the All-Stars, occurred in the game's closing moments after a pass play in which Gene Washington, wide receiver from Stanford, incurred a welt under his right eye.

"Semple clothes-lined him," charged Graham, refering to a tactic of hitting a player high on the body or head with the arm extended. "There should have been a penalty.

"I shoved him on the helmet," Sample said, "I pushed him and I shoved him, that's all."

Sample said he had been needling Graham earlier in the game.

"I kept telling him," Semple said, "that he's no coach, that he didn't know how to coach an offense."

After the Washington-Semple incident, Graham's irritation exploded, and the All-Stars coach stormed onto the field. Graham swatted Sample, and Sample lowered his helmet and butted Graham across the nose, inflicting a bloody nick.

Graham returned to the sideline, and a 15-yard bench penalty was levied.

Later, Graham said, "Sample's not worth talking about. Let's forget it."

The feuding between Sample and Graham started in 1953 when Semple played for the All-Stars and Graham coached them.

Rozelle has jurisdiction over the All-Star game. He could fine Graham and fine or suspend Sample or both.

NFL ATONES BEFORE SRO CROWD

Colts Smash Chargers

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — The NFL, and Baltimore Colts in particular, suffered seven torturous months living down the Super Bowl defeat. But the Colts helped atone for that prestige shocker by defiating the San Diego Chargers, 26-6, Saturday night in a rousing renewal of the NFL-AFL rivalry.

Supported by a defense tougher than any safe Willie Sutton ever cracked, the Colts limited Sid Gillman's crew to two field goals while erupting for 19 points in the second period to the dismay of a SRO crowd of 52,171 — second highest in Charger history.

Overshadowing the game itself was the question of whether John Unitas has fully recovered from an elbow injury that put him out of action most of last season.

The famed No. 19 came out of the bullpen with 11 minutes left in the half and the Colts leading, 7-3. Although he didn't throw any touchdown passes, the 36-year-old Unitas missed on only one of eight attempts as the Colts, who entered the game as seven-point favorites, hiked their advantage to 13 points by intermission.

Unitas took the rest of the night off as Jeff Beaver from North Carolina and a member of the Colts' taxi squad last year directed the attack the third period.

Earl Morrall, last year's NFL Player of the Year, returned to action in the final quarter and pitched a four-yard TD pass to Preston Pearson with 5:44 remaining. Coach Don Shula let Beaver mop up the last series.

After a scoreless first quarter, thanks to Lou Michaels' muff of a 17-yard field goal, the Colts clicked for six points when Tom Matte punched two yards

Dodgers Keep Losing, Waiting for Parker

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer.

ST. LOUIS — It's getting so that whenever manager Walter Alston or any of his lieutenants discuss the whys and hows of the Dodgers, the subject invariably gets around to Wes Parker.

Wes is back home in sunny Southern California, on the mend from his appendicitis operation and because of it, Alston and the Dodgers aren't exactly in stitches these days.

"Without Wes we're just not scoring runs," Alston was saying, "and even when we do get some runs we're giving away too many.

"We're just not putting anything together."

It was that way Saturday night as the Dodgers dropped their fourth game in a row — matching their longest skid of the season — a 7-6 tussle to high-flying St. Louis.

"It's not that Wes does it all," the manager said before the game, the sixth win in a row for the Cardinals.

DODGER OF DAY

WILLIE DAVIS doubled, singled and drove in three runs in Dodgers' 7-6 loss to St. Louis.

"Not at all," Alston went on, "But you take any club and remove its best hitter just like that and it'll have some trouble."

Since Parker went under the knife a week ago Wednesday the Dodgers have won but three of 10 games.

They're still hugging first place Atlanta in the Western Division race that has five clubs locked together within a 2½-game minispread.

It's not only Parker's bat the Dodgers miss, it's his super glove and maneuverability as well. Parker, the day after the operation, told his teammates to stick close and he'll be back for the stretch.

They're sticking close, all right, but not quite the way Wes had in mind.

In Saturday's dipper the Dodgers booted three plays which contributed heavily as Don Sutton failed for the fourth time in a row to post his 13th victory of the year.

It was a horrendous three-run sixth inning that made the difference, as things turned out, since the Dodgers came alive with a five-run splurge in the seventh.

Willie Davis, who hadn't driven in a run in two weeks and only one in the last five weeks, doubled in two runs in the big seventh.

The giveaway in the sixth was too much to overcome, however.

Julian Javier crashed his eighth home run but that was followed by a couple of infield hits, not to mention throwing errors by Manny Mota and Bill Sudakis which wound up costing the Dodgers two runs and, eventually, the game.

"We haven't played well at all in the last two weeks," Alston continued as he analyzed the Dodgers' woes. "We've been in most every game but even

Senators Outlast Angels

Game Ends in 10th With Bases Loaded

Ken McMullen's pinch hit sacrifice fly in the 10th inning Saturday night scored Jim French from third with the tie-breaking run to carry the Washington Senators to an 8-7 victory over the Angels.

By MIKE DUDA

The Angels scored once in the bottom of the seventh to tie the Washington Senators 7-7 in a seesaw battle that went into extra innings Saturday night at Anaheim Stadium.

The Senators wasted no time jumping all over Tom Murphy.

After Del Unser and Lee Maye led off the first with back-to-back singles, Sandy Alomar dropped a throw from Jim Fregosi on a force allowing Washington to load the bases with no one out. Mike Epstein's double play ball brought Unser across with the unearned run.

In the second the Nats scored four times, that prompted manager Lefty Phillips to pull Murphy in favor of Clyde Wright.

Washington combined five hits, a wild pitch and a walk for the runs.

Turnabout was fair play in the bottom of the second as the Angels sent starter Barry Moore to the showers.

The Angels scored three times on four hits, including a double by Jim Spencer for a run, two walks and a sacrifice fly by Jim Hicks, pinch-hitting for Wright.

The Senators added another unearned tally in the fourth inning when Unser scored on a passed ball by Bob Rodgers. Unser had walked off Ed Fisher, the third Angel pitcher.

Jack Hannum of the Senators fared about as well as his fellow hurlers. After shutting off the Halos for two innings in relief of Moore Hannum saw three run lead blow up in his face.

In the fifth the Angels tied the contest at 6-6 with a three run outburst on two hits and an error. Jim McGlothlin, the fourth Angel to try the mound, drove in one run.

PETE TO SEE REPORT ON OTTO-JOHN

NEW YORK (AP) — A spokesman for pro football Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Saturday the commissioner is waiting for a report from Mel Hein regarding the feud which flared Friday night during the All-Star football game in Chicago between Johnny Sample and Otto Graham.

Hein is supervisor of officials for the American Football League.

Sample is the defensive captain of the New York Jets, who beat the College All-Stars in Friday night's game 26-24.

The resumption of the long time feud between Sample and Graham, who coached the All-Stars, occurred in the game's closing moments after a pass play in which Gene Washington, wide receiver from Stanford, incurred a welt under his right eye.

"Semple clothes-lined him," charged Graham, refering to a tactic of hitting a player high on the body or head with the arm extended. "There should have been a penalty.

"I shoved him on the helmet," Sample said, "I pushed him and I shoved him, that's all."

Sample said he had been needling Graham earlier in the game.

"I kept telling him," Semple said, "that he's no coach, that he didn't know how to coach an offense."

After the Washington-Semple incident, Graham's irritation exploded, and the All-Stars coach stormed onto the field. Graham swatted Sample, and Sample lowered his helmet and butted Graham across the nose, inflicting a bloody nick.

Graham returned to the sideline, and a 15-yard bench penalty was levied.

Later, Graham said, "Sample's not worth talking about. Let's forget it."

The feuding between Sample and Graham started in 1958 when Semple played for the All-Stars and Graham coached them.

Rozelle has jurisdiction over the All-Star game. He could fine Graham and fine or suspend Sample or both.

NFL ATONES BEFORE SRO CROWD

Colts Smash Chargers

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — The NFL, and Baltimore Colts in particular, suffered seven tortuous months living down the Super Bowl defeat. But the Colts helped atone for that prestige shocker by deflating the San Diego Chargers, 26-6, Saturday night in a rousing renewal of the NFL-AFL rivalry.

Supported by a defense tougher than any safe Willie Sutton ever cracked, the Colts limited Sid Gillman's crew to two field goals while erupting for 19 points in the second period to the dismay of a SRO crowd of 52,171 — second highest in Charger history.

Overshadowing the game itself was the question of whether John Unitas has fully recovered from an elbow injury that put him out of action most of last season.

The famed No. 19 came out of the bullpen with 11 minutes left in the half and the Colts leading, 7-3. Although he didn't throw any touchdown passes, the 36-year-old Unitas missed on only one of eight attempts as the Colts, who entered the game as seven-point favorites, hiked their advantage to 13 points by intermission.

Unitas took the rest of the night off as Jeff Beaver from North Carolina and a member of the Colts' taxi squad last year directed the attack the third period.

Earl Morrall, last year's NFL Player of the Year, returned to action in the final quarter and pitched a four-yard TD pass to Preston Pearson with 5:44 remaining. Coach Don Shula let Beaver mop up the last series.

As Doctor or Manager, Phillips Doing Good Job

LEFTY PHILLIPS
Doing The Job

HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

In the event you hadn't noticed, with the heat and all, the Angels have made a remarkable recovery since Harold (Lefty) Phillips took over as manager on May 27.

Why, during the past week they even escaped the American League's Western Division basement apartment, a low rent district cold-water flat that everybody figured they'd retain through September.

With due respect to Bill Rigney, the man who had been the Angels' leader since the club's birth in 1961 and a person whom we still admire, the Halo Hats have made startling progress under Phillips' rule.

A comparison of some records easily will bear out that testimony. After Lefty's first 61 games as major domo, this is what the books report:

Under Rigney		Under Phillips
11-28 (.282)	Overall record	29-32 (.475)
3-16 (.158)	Road record	11-17 (.393)
0-12 (.000)	Vs. lefthanders	10-9 (.526)
.212	Team batting	.236
4.10	Staff ERA	3.20
5-11	One-run decisions	10-8

Entering the month of August, the Angels' record for the previous month was 15-13, surpassed by only four other A.L. clubs. And only four N.L. teams had better July records than the Seraphs.

Obviously, this club which was last in just about everything before July has taken a trip. What drugs it might have utilized is a matter of conjecture, but the doctor who administered them is Prof. Phillips.

WHAT PRESCRIPTION did Dr. Phillips prescribe?

"It wasn't much," said Lefty, a 50-year-old cigar chewer whose biggest thrill in life previously had been sitting in hotel lobbies watching the people pass by. "I just figured I'd get a lineup I liked and keep it that way every game. The platoon system is too complicated and not for me."

Unlike Casey Stengel, who enjoyed manipulating men, Phillips wants his BEST people every game, no matter whom the opposing pitcher.

Lefty has kept a four-man pitching rotation, whereas Rigney used five starters. Andy Messersmith was 0-5 when Phillips took over, since then has won 10 and lost two. Only three complete games were pitched under Rig (in 39 contests). There have been 11 complete games under Lefty in 61 games.

THOSE OF YOU WHO might have been spending the past few weeks in the mountains or basking on the beach should read the next sentence at least twice. Except for right field, where Bill Voss and Bubba Morton are platooned, Lefty has used seven men steadily for the last six weeks. Occasionally, he switches catchers, Tom Egan for Joe Azcue, but not often. Egan's hitting a less-than-modest .111.

THE ANGELS, as currently constructed, definitely are a team to be watched within the coming years. The reason: Jim Fregosi is the oldest every-day starter at age 27, with catcher Egan in the lineup.

Let's go down the list:

First base — Jim Spencer, a rookie, celebrated his 22nd birthday Wednesday. When the message board proclaimed the fact, Spencer promptly responded with a hit.

Second base — Sandy Alomar, 25, is playing only his second full season in the majors.

Shortstop — "Captain" Fregosi, a four-time all-star and the only player still with the Angels since their inception.

Third base — Leo Rodriguez, 21, playing his first full season and who's probably the best defensive hot corner man in the league today.

Leftfield — Rick Reichardt, 26, who still has potential he hasn't yet found.

Center — Jay Johnstone, 23, in his first full season, leads the club in RBI, although he batted in the difficult No. 2 spot most of the year.

Right — Bill Voss, 23. Under Rigney he batted .152 and was taken out of the lineup whenever he didn't get a hit. Under Phillips, he's batting .268 and gaining the confidence he's always needed.

Catcher — Azcue is 29. Egan, 23, still is considered to have great potential and has been hampered by frequent service duty just when it appeared he might become a regular.

BUT PITCHING is the thing . . . and the Seraphs have it, in youthful spades.

Messersmith, 23, probably is equal to any righthander in league. His ERA in last 12 games is a brilliant 1.51.

Tom Murphy, 23, like Messersmith, also is in his first full major season. His only problem has been an occasional wild streak.

Jim McGlothlin, 25, has been a tough-luck pitcher. He hasn't had many runs and lately, probably through a period of discouragement, has been getting behind on hitters. He's still considered a 30-karat diamond.

Ken Tatum, 25, with a current 0.95 ERA, may be the best of all. Since Lefty brought him up from Hawaii May 28, Tatum has been one of the league's best relievers and undoubtedly will become a starter next season.

That's the Angel picture. No penthouse this year, but if the young lions progress as hoped, maybe the whole suite of rooms within two years.

Flying Astros Dump Expos on Blefary, Edwards Bats

MONTREAL (AP) — Curt Blefary tagged a two-run triple in the first inning and John Edwards cracked three hits and scored twice, helping the streaking Houston Astros to a 5-3 victory over Montreal Saturday.

Blefary tripled off the fence in right centerfield, driving in Joe Morgan and Jim Wynn, who drew walks.

The Astros, who won their seventh in a row, got another run in the third on singles by Norm Miller and Morgan and an error by Coco Laboy.

Houston went ahead 4-2 in the sixth inning when Edwards singled, stole second and came home on Miller's single. Edwards, scored again in the eighth when he doubled, went to third on Jesus Alou's grounder and came home on Jim Ray's squeeze on bunt.

The Expos got one run off Ray (7-2) in the first when Ty Cline singled, stole second and came home on Rusty Staub's single. Ron Fairly added another run in the third with his third home run of the season. Staub homered in the ninth.

A's Defeat Bosox, 5-4

OAKLAND (AP) — Reggie Jackson, whose 41st home run tied the game in the ninth inning, scored on Dick Green's bases-loaded single in the 11th Saturday, giving the Oakland Athletics a 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Jackson, who tagged left-hander Sparky Lyle for the tying homer to move five games ahead of Roger Maris' 1961 pace, drew a walk from Bill Lee with one out in the 11th.

Sal Bando's single and Ramon Webster's two-out infield hit filled the bases before Green stroked the winning single to left.

Senators, 7-7, in a seesaw battle that saw eight pitchers in seven innings.

Bob Rodgers singled with one out to score Billy Cowan, pinch-running for Bubba Morton, with the tying run.

Both clubs had used four pitchers each after seven innings. The Angels were on their fifth hurler as Hoyt Wilhelm came into the game at the top of the eighth.

It was an expensive night for pitchers, yielding, among the eight of them, 14 runs, 23 hits, and seven walks. The Nats had also committed two errors, the Halos one miscue.

Peters Upsets Tigers, Lolich With Shutout

DETROIT (AP) — Luis Aparicio knocked in three runs with a homer and two singles while Gary Peters homered and pitched a six-hit shutout as the Chicago White Sox trimmed the Detroit Tigers, 5-0, Saturday.

Aparicio's homer, only his second of the year, came off starter and loser Mickey Lolich, (14-4) and gave the White Sox a 1-0 edge in the first inning.

The veteran shortstop then knocked in a run in the third on a single after Walt Williams doubled. In the seventh, Aparicio singled in the third Chicago run after a walk to Don Pavletich and a single by Williams.

Peters (7-11) hit a leadoff homer in the ninth. The shutout was his third of the year and second over Detroit. It was Peter's first victory in nearly a month and only the second in the last 12 games for the White Sox.

Lefty Beats Cincinnati

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Grant Jackson became the third lefthander to beat Cincinnati this season when the Philadelphia Phillies scored three runs in the eighth inning to beat the Reds, 5-3, Saturday night.

Jackson, who was lifted when John Bench singled to lead off the ninth, was the 19th lefthander to start against Cinciantati this season but only the third to beat them. Billy Wilson relieved Jackson and gave up a run-scoring single to pinch-hitter Jimmy Stewart before retiring the side to preserve Jackson's win.

RUNDOWN CHASE DECISIVE

Powell Powers Baltimore

MINNEAPOLIS - ST. PAUL (AP) — Boog Powell's two-out, two-run homer in the seventh inning — after Paul Blair escaped a pickoff rundown — powered the Baltimore Orioles to a 6-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday in a game between American League division leaders.

Blair looped a one-out single to left in the seventh, then was picked off first by Minnesota reliever Al Worthington. Five Twins handled the ball in the ensuing rundown, but Blair made it back to first safely.

After Frank Robinson fouled out for what should have been the third out, Powell slammed a 381-foot homer to right, putting the East Division leading Orioles ahead, 6-4.

Powell's 29th homer offset a bases-empty blast by Harmon Killebrew in the bottom of the seventh and took Baltimore shortstop Mark Belanger off the hook for three errors in the fifth inning.

Belanger booted two grounders and threw wild on a third as the Twins took a 4-3 lead in the fifth with three unearned runs off winner Mike Cuellar (13-9).

Frank Quilici poked a pinch single to start the inning and Cesar Tovar's double play grounder trickled through Belanger for an error. Rod Carew sacrificed, and Quilici scored when Belanger muffed Killebrew's bouncer.

Tony Oliva forced Killebrew at second but Belanger's relay sailed past first for a third error as Tovar raced home with the tying run. Allison capped the rally with a run-scoring single.

Clay Dalrymple tied the game in the sixth with his second homer of the season before a crowd of 36,152.

LEFTY PHILLIPS
Doing The Job

As Doctor or Manager, Phillips Doing Good Job

In the event you hadn't noticed, with the heat and all, the Angels have made a remarkable recovery since Harold (Lefty) Phillips took over as manager on May 27.

Why, during the past week they even escaped the American League's Western Division basement apartment, a low rent district cold-water flat that everybody figured they'd retain through September.

With due respect to Bill Rigney, the man who had been the Angels' leader since the club's birth in 1961 and a person whom we still admire, the Halo Hats have made startling progress under Phillips' rule.

A comparison of some records easily will bear out that testimony. After Lefty's first 61 games as major domo, this is what the books report:

Entering the month of August, the Angels' record for the previous month was 15-13, surpassed by only four other A.L. clubs. And only four N.L. teams had better July records than the Seraphs.

Obviously, this club which was last in just about everything before July has taken a trip. What drugs it might have utilized is a matter of conjecture, but the doctor who administered them is Prof. Phillips.

WHAT PRESCRIPTION did Dr. Phillips prescribe?

"It wasn't much," said Lefty, a 50-year-old cigar chewer whose biggest thrill in life previously had been sitting in hotel lobbies watching the people pass by. "I just figured I'd get a lineup I liked and keep it that way every game. The platoon system is too complicated and not for me."

Unlike Casey Stengel, who enjoyed manipulating men, Phillips wants his BEST people every game, no matter whom the opposing pitcher.

Lefty has kept a four-man pitching rotation, whereas Rigney used five starters. Andy Messersmith was 0-5 when Phillips took over, since then has won 10 and lost two. Only three complete games were pitched under Rig (in 39 contests). There have been 11 complete games under Lefty in 61 games.

THOSE OF YOU WHO might have been spending the past few weeks in the mountains or basking on the beach should read the next sentence at least twice. Except for right field, where Bill Voss and Bubba Morton are platooned, Lefty has used seven men steadily for the last six weeks. Occasionally, he switches catchers, Tom Egan for Joe Azcue, but not often. Egan's hitting a less-than-modest .111.

THE ANGELS, as currently constructed, definitely are a team to be watched within the coming years. The reason: Jim Fregosi is the oldest every-day starter at age 27, with catcher Egan in the lineup.

Let's go down the list:

First base — Jim Spencer, a rookie, celebrated his 22nd birthday Wednesday. When the message board proclaimed the fact, Spencer promptly responded with a hit.

Second base — Sandy Alomar, 25, is playing only his second full season in the majors.

Shortstop — "Captain" Fregosi, a four-time all-star and the only player still with the Angels since their inception.

Third base — Leo Rodriguez, 21, playing his first full season and who's probably the best defensive hot corner man in the league today.

Leftfield — Rick Reichardt, 26, who still has potential he hasn't yet found.

Center — Jay Johnstone, 23, in his first full season, leads the club in RBI, although he batted in the difficult No. 2 spot most of the year.

Right — Bill Voss, 23. Under Rigney he batted .152 and was taken out of the lineup whenever he didn't get a hit. Under Phillips, he's batting .260 and gaining the confidence he's always needed.

Catcher — Azcue is 29. Egan, 23, still is considered to have great potential and has been hampered by frequent service duty just when it appeared he might become a regular.

BUT PITCHING is the thing . . . and the Seraphs have it, in youthful spades.

Messersmith, 23, probably is equal to any righthander in league. His ERA in last 12 games is a brilliant 1.51.

Tom Murphy, 23, like Messersmith, also is in his first full major season. His only problem has been an occasional wild streak.

Jim McGlothlin, 25, has been a tough-luck pitcher. He hasn't had many runs and lately, probably through a period of discouragement, has been getting behind on hitters. He's still considered a 30-karat diamond.

Ken Tatum, 25, with a current 0.95 ERA, may be the best of all. Since Lefty brought him up from Hawaii May 28, Tatum has been one of the league's best relievers and undoubtedly will become a starter next season.

That's the Angel picture. No penthouse this year, but if the young lions progress as hoped, maybe the whole suite of rooms within two years.

Flying Astros Dump Expos on Blefary, Edwards Bats

MONTREAL (AP) — Curt Blefary tagged a two-run triple in the first inning and John Edwards cracked three hits and scored twice, helping the streaking Houston Astros to a 5-3 victory over Montreal Saturday.

Blefary tripled off the fence in right centerfield, driving in Joe Morgan and Jim Wynn, who drew walks.

The Astros, who won their seventh in a row, got another run in the third on singles by Norm Miller and Morgan and an error by Coco Laboy.

Houston went ahead 4-2 in the sixth inning when Edwards singled, stole second and came home on Miller's single. Edwards, scored again in the eighth when he doubled, went to third on Jesus Alou's grounder and came home on Jim Ray's squeeze on bunt.

The Expos got one run off Ray (7-2) in the first when Ty Cline singled, stole second and came home on Rusty Staub's single. Ron Fairly added another run in the third with his third home run of the season. Staub homered in the ninth.

A's Defeat Bosox, 5-4

OAKLAND (AP) — Reggie Jackson, whose 41st home run tied the game in the ninth inning, scored on Dick Green's bases-loaded single in the 11th Saturday, giving the Oakland Athletics a 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Jackson, who tagged left-hander Sparky Lyle for the tying homer to move five games ahead of Roger Maris' 1961 pace, drew a walk from Bill Lee with one out in the 11th.

Sal Bando's single and Ramon Webster's two-out infield hit filled the bases before Green stroked the winning single to left.

ANGELS...

Senators, 7-7, in a seesaw battle that saw eight pitchers in seven innings.

Bob Rodgers singled with one out to score Billy Cowan, pinch-running for Bubba Morton, with the tying run.

Both clubs had used four pitchers each after seven innings. The Angels were on their fifth hurler as Hoyt Wilhelm came into the game at the top of the eighth.

It was an expensive night for pitchers, yielding, among the eight of them, 14 runs, 23 hits, and seven walks. The Nats had also committed two errors, the Halos one miscue.

ANGEL ANGELS: Catcher Bob Rodgers, recalled from Hawaii for the weekend, was in the starting lineup Saturday night . . . Joe Azcue was injured Friday night in a collision at the plate and Tom Egan is serving Uncle Sam for the weekend . . . X-rays on Azcue's left ankle were negative . . . Today is "Be A Manager Day" at the Big A . . . The first 10,000 kids through the turnstiles will receive the "Be A Manager" game . . . The probable pitchers for today's game will be Andy Messersmith (10-7) for the Angels and Joe Coleman (8-8) for the Senators. The 1 p.m. contest completes a 17 game homestand.

The Angels and Dodgers will stage an old timers game Aug. 24 at Anaheim Stadium. Starting for the Dodgers will be Sandy Koufax . . . Other top names include Jack Robinson, Johnny Podres, Albie Pearson and former PCL greats Jigger Statz, Lou Novikoff and Bob Scheffing.

RUNDOWN CHASE DECISIVE

Powell Powers Baltimore

MINNEAPOLIS - ST. PAUL (AP) — Boog Powell's two-out, two-run homer in the seventh inning — after Paul Blair escaped a pickoff rundown — powered the Baltimore Orioles to a 6-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday in a game between American League division leaders.

Blair looped a one-out single to left in the seventh, then was picked off first by Minnesota reliever Al Worthington. Five Twins handled the ball in the ensuing rundown, but Blair made it back to first safely.

After Frank Robinson fouled out for what should have been the third out, Powell slammed a 381-foot homer to right, putting the East Division leading Orioles ahead, 6-4.

Powell's 29th homer offset a bases-empty blast by Harmon Killebrew in the bottom of the seventh and took Baltimore shortstop Mark Belanger off the hook for three errors in the fifth inning.

Belanger booted two grounders and threw wild on a third as the Twins took a 4-3 lead in the fifth with three unearned runs off winner Mike Cuellar (13-9).

Frank Quilici poked a pinch single to start the inning and Cesar Tovar's double play grounder trickled through Belanger for an error. Rod Carew sacrificed, and Quilici scored when Belanger muffed Killebrew's bouncer.

Tony Oliva forced Killebrew at second but Belanger's relay sailed past first for a third error as Tovar raced home with the tying run. Allison capped the rally with a run-scoring single.

Clay Dalrymple tied the game in the sixth with his second homer of the season before a crowd of 36,152.

Peters Upsets Tigers, Lolich With Shutout

DETROIT (AP) — Luis Aparicio knocked in three runs with a homer and two singles while Gary Peters homered and pitched a six-hit shutout as the Chicago White Sox trimmed the Detroit Tigers, 5-0, Saturday.

Aparicio's homer, only his second of the year, came off starter and loser Mickey Lolich, (14-4) and gave the White Sox a 1-0 edge in the first inning.

The veteran shortstop then knocked in a run in the third on a single after Walt Williams doubled. In the seventh, Aparicio singled in the third Chicago run, after a walk to Don Pavletich and a single by Williams.

Peters (7-11) hit a leadoff homer in the ninth. The shutout was his third of the year and second over Detroit. It was Peter's first victory in nearly a month and only the second in the last 12 games for the White Sox.

Lefty Beats Cincinnati

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Grant Jackson became the third lefthander to beat Cincinnati this season when the Philadelphia Phillies scored three runs in the eighth inning to beat the Reds, 5-3, Saturday night.

Jackson, who was lifted when John Bench singled to lead off the ninth, was the 19th lefthander to start against Cincinnati this season but only the third to beat them. Billy Wilson relieved Jackson and gave up a run-scoring single to pinch-hitter Jimmy Stewart before retiring the side to preserve Jackson's win.

Veale Completes Game, Beats Giants, Marichal

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Bob Veale completed his first game since the second day of the season as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the San Francisco Giants and Juan Marichal, 7-3, Saturday night.

Veale, who failed to go the distance in 21 consecutive starts, struck out nine and walked five in notching his sixth victory against 11 setbacks.

Manny Sanguillen drove in three runs in the fifth with a bases-loaded triple after Carl Taylor singled, Robert Clements doubled and Rich Hebner was intentionally walked. The hit knocked out Marichal, who suffered his seventh loss against 13 victories.

'HEY ROOK' 200 POUNDS TOUGH

Battle Makes Hit With Champs

DON ANDERSON
Special Correspondent

CHICAGO — Rookies in professional athletics take a lot of guff before they join the "in" crowd in their respective sports.

But there is one rookie in the camp of the New York Jets that so far has avoided special "treatment" from his teammates, has hit it off well with the guy whose job he is after and has earned words of high praise from his coach.

Mike Battle, former Long Beach City College star and more recently an all-America at USC, is getting a chance to crack the Super Bowl champions' defensive unit and he's making the most of it.

"Things are going well. I think I can make it," Battle said Friday night before taking the field for his first professional game with the Jets against the College All-Stars at Soldiers' Field.

In his debut, Mike was limited to one kick-off runback but he drew hearty cheers from the 74,208 fans in attendance when he almost broke for a lengthy return. As it was, he took the ball five yards deep in the end zone and got it out to the 27, a 32-yard return.

"Boy, there sure a lot of good players in the pros. The competition for jobs are so keen that it causes real mental strain. Mental mistakes with the Jets are the most serious mistakes you can make," Battle related.

"Football here is a business. When you get a chance to make it, you had better not blow it," he added.

"The veterans have been great. Oh, they call me 'Hey Rook' but that's about all. Bill Baird is a seven-year veteran at free safety and he has been a tremendous help to me," Battle said.

Coach Weeb Ewbank, the only man in football to coach championship teams in both the NFL and AFL, was generous in his praise of his rookie free safety candidate.

"Mike is doing just fine. He is a willing worker who weighs about 180 but is 200 pounds tough. He's a hitter. Just a hard nosed kid," Ewbank told the inquiring reporters.

Battle will get a good crack at making the squad as a punt and kickoff specialist. He led the nation in punt return yardage during the 1967 season at USC.

ALL STAR NOTES—Joe Namath insists that "I did the wrong thing for me personally in agreeing to sell" his Bachelors III nightclub . . . Gary Magner, former Trojan defensive tackle, has been hit by the injury link. Gary missed all of last season with the Jets after undergoing knee surgery. He was "coming along fine" according to Ewbank until setback with a hyper-extension injury last week which sidelined him again. He did not make the trip to Chicago with the Jets.

Most prominent bumper stickers: "The Pack Will Be Back," referring to the Green Bay Packers, winners of the last three All-Star games . . . Jim Seymour and Terry Hanratty of Notre Dame and Ron Sayers (Gale's little brother) got the biggest pre-game ovations Friday night while Namath was greeted with a mixture of boos and cer-style all-star kicker missed a field goal from the 33-yard line Friday night. Roy Gerela, the Canadian born soccer and his teams lost by two points. Earlier in the week he had connected on a 62-yarder in practice.

ARTHUR DALEY

Youthful Sluggers Dominate Links

HARRISON, N.Y. — The youth rebellion has now reached into the realm of golf and the defiant challenge to the Establishment has so shaken the links aristocracy that it may never be the same again. All year long unknowns have kept bouncing up from nowhere to win tournaments. More often than not the winners have been total strangers getting their first exposure to big headlines and big money.

For the better part of the past decade such Establishment figures as Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Billy Casper, Gary Player and a few other name performers dominated the action. They do so no longer. There are too many youthful eager beavers of astonishing talents clawing their way to the top. By their example they even have inspired some of the older have-nots to join in their mutiny.

So lucrative has golf become as a profession that the divot digging sport has attracted an unparalleled number of slick stylists, young and hungry and without fear.

Many are now here at the Westchester Country Club, shooting boldly for the $50,000 first prize at the Westchester Classic, the world's richest golf tournament. It was with singularly deft turn of phrase that Palmer described the situation.

"IT'S THE QUALITY of the quantity," he said.

In the first 13 tournaments this season, there were 13 different winners. Of 34 tournaments, there have been 30 different winners. Are you beginning to get the idea?

"There's so much money at stake now," said Arnie, "that golf is attracting a higher caliber of player. We're even luring the most versatile athletes away from baseball, football and other sports because golf is a gem without age limits. What's more, senior golf is increasing in magnitude and importance, broadening the horizon even more. At the age of 57 Sam Snead is still going strong. A man can make good money and have a comfortable living without even winning."

Arnie paused and that infectious Palmer grin lit up his features as a wayward thought popped into his mind.

"Good money without winning?" he repeated. "I don't know how much satisfaction you get from it, though. I would get none. It's been a long dry spell for me because I haven't won a tournament since last September. Gosh, that's almost a year."

In a way Arnie proved his point last season. He won only twice but earned $114,000 to lift his lifetime earnings over the million dollar mark. If victories become more widely spaced, would he ever be tempted to call it a career?

"I DON'T THINK I ever could quit," he said earnestly. "I love the game too much. I intend to continue as long as I am able. The probability is that I wouldn't compete as often but would devote more time to my other interests."

Arnie has hotter irons and more outside fires than anyone else in the sport. That's why he's a multi-millionaire. In fact, some critics have insisted that the distractions of his other interests have placed such an insuperable burden on him that it has affected his game. He had denied it although the record supports the theory that he was at his best as a hungry young tiger and that he is now a well-fed member of the establishment.

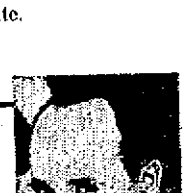

"Sam Snead plays in comparative few tournaments nowadays," said Arnie, resuming his train of thought. "But he plays golf every day — except when he goes hunting or fishing. Jack Nicklaus and Billy Casper relax by fishing. Not me, though. Fishing bores me. I can't just sit there, waiting for something to happen.

"But I've started to do some hunting of recent years and that I like. It has action. You don't have to wait for them to come to you as you do in fishing. You go after them."

Arnie reached out to borrow a cigarette. He stared at it with the skeptical look of a man in the American Cancer Society television commercial.

"I quit smokingfor two years," he said, "and some day I'm going to quit for good. If I had any sense, I'd do it right now."

He had no sense. He lit the cigarette.

Vikings Rout Dolphins With 24-Point Burst

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Quarterback Joe Kapp threw for one touchdown and set up two others as he sparked the Minnesota Vikings to a 24-point second period outburst en route to a 45-10 exhibition pro football victory over the Miami Dolphins Saturday night.

Miami, of the American League, jumped to a 10-0 lead over its National League rivals before the Vikings got their offense rolling. The Dolphins, plagued by poor punting and an erratic attack, scored on an intercepted pass and a field goal.

Kapp, who completed 11 of 20 passes in the first half for 163 yards, hit Bob Grim with a 13-yard scoring toss and later used passes to set up five-yard scoring runs by Bill Brown and Dave Osborn.

Kapp turned the quarterbacking chores over to Gary Cuozzo and Bob Lee in the second half and each accounted for a touchdown. Cuozzo scored from the one-yard line in the third quarter and Lee threw 25 yards to Volly Murphy with four seconds left for the final tally. In between, Earl Denny scored from the one for still another Viking touchdown.

Fred Cox booted a 35-yard field goal for Minnesota.

Miami jumped out in front with a 38-yard field goal by Karl Kremser in the first period. Less than a minute later, Freddie Woodson intercepted a Kapp pass on the Minnesota 25 and streaked in for the touchdown.

Except for that brief flurry, however, the Dolphins could not generate any serious scoring threat.

RAMS-SAINTS SCORELESS

Ankle Injury Fells Jordan

Jeff Jordan, one of the bright lights in the Ram backfield the early weeks of training camp, suffered a badly sprained right ankle during Saturday's scoreless scrimmage with New Orleans and the extent of the injury will not be known until Monday.

The former fullback for the University of Washington has been plagued with injuries in two previous tryouts with the Rams and was expected to start in the team's exhibition season opener against Dallas Friday night.

Mike Dennis and Willie Ellison led both squads in rushing with 29 and 28 yards respectively.

With each team running 12 offensive plays in sequence, Ram quarterback Karl Sweetan completed four of nine passes for 76 with wide receiver Wendell Tucker pulled in one toss for 58 yards.

Bill Kilmer and Edd Hargett alternated for the Saints. Kilmer hit on four of nine for 69 yards while the Texas A&M rookie completed four of seven for 46 yards.

The Ram defensive unit came up with three interceptions, by Willie Daniel, Dick Absher and Perry Parks. The Ram offense had no passes intercepted.

Dallas' offense whipped the defense, 34-29 in the club's final scrimmage. Craig Morton hit on nine of 18 passes for 173 yards and touchdowns of 44 and 31 yards to Bob Hayes and Craig Baynham.

Roger Staubach was five-for-nine for 122 yards and scoring tosses of 67 and 30 yards to Lance Rentzel and Obert Logan.

Lombardi's Redskin Debut Wet Success

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A heavy downpour marred the setting for Vince Lombardi's return to pro football Saturday night but his Washington Redskins still made it a successful debut by sloshing their way to a 13-7 victory over the Chicago Bears.

The rain that started at the opening kickoff quickly made the field a quagmire but Lombardi's Redskins turned a pair of pass interceptions into touchdowns to make him a winner in the first exhibition game with his new club.

Sam Huff, who came out of retirement when Lombardi took over at Washington, got the Redskins started with an interception that set up a second period score. After the Bears tied the contest 7-7 in the third period, Bobby Mitchell slipped loose to take a 17-yard touchdown pass from Sonny Jurgensen.

In a game played before 45,988 rain soaked fans, Huff grabbed a Jack Concannon pass on Chicago's 34 and sloshed his way to the seven-yard-line.

Two plays later, Washington rookie Larry Brown bucked over for the score.

on the first play of the second period to cap a 67-yard drive. The surge was highlighted by Earl Morrall completions of 24 yards to Jimmy Orr and 32 and 17-yard pitches to Willie Richardson.

Dennis Partee put the Chargers on the scoreboard with a 17-yard fielder with 3:30 elapsed.

After Preston Pearson carried the kickoff back 81 yards to the S.D. 15 exit Morrall, enter Unitas. Unitas needed only four plays before handing off to Matte for the final yard.

The visitors hiked their advantage to 16-3 when Hohn Hadl was chased out of the end zone by defensive tackle Fred Miller for a safety.

Unitas kept the pot boiling by completing three passes in a row to maneuver Michaels into field goal range again and the big left-footed kicker made good a 17-yarder after earlier blowing an attempt from the 14.

With only four seconds left in the half, Partee countered with a 35-yarder

For his quarter's work, Unitas completed 7 of 8 for 86 yards, including a perfect 48-yard strike to Ray Perkins, indicating his elbow is sound again. Morrall was 3 of 6 for 73 yards with one interception.

Hadl connected on 7 of 14 for 83 yards while directing the Charger attack the entire half.

Oilers Hold Bills to 23 Yards Afoot

HOUSTON (UPI) — Pete Beathard and Don Trull threw touchdown passes Saturday night to lead the Houston Oilers to a 14-7 win over the Buffalo Bills, sorely missing O. J. Simpson, in the exhibition opener for both clubs before 37,250 in the Astrodome.

Buffalo, unable to sign Heisman Trophy winner Simpson so far, showed a need for him by gaining only 23 yards on the ground, minus 2 in the second half. The Bills, down 10-0 in the second quarter, scored on a 14-yard pass from Jack Kemp to Lloyd Pate after the first of linebacker Marty Schottenheimer's two interceptions.

Trull hit Glenn Bass with a seven-yard scorer for the Oilers' first score. Hoyle Granger punched over from the one in the third quarter for a Houston score set up by linebacker George Webster's 25-yard interception return with a Kay Stepehenson pass.

Beathard put the Oilers on the scoreboard again in the fourth quarter with a three-yard scoring toss to Mack Haik. Carl Gentile added three PATS and a 23-yard field goal in the first quarter.

A spokesman for the Bills said Simpson was not in Houston to view the game.

Late Fumble Paves Way to Kansas City Victory

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Gene Trosch recovered a fumble and Jackie Lee threw a scoring pass to Robert Holmes to give Kansas City a 23-17 victory over Oakland Saturday night in the first exhibition game of the season for the two American Football League clubs.

The 21-yard pass was set up when Eldridge Dickey, filling in for the injured Daryl Lamonica, fumbled early in the fourth period.

Oakland had gone ahead 17-13 in the third period on a field goal by the 41-year-old George Blanda and a 44-yard scamper by linebacker Bill Budness after he intercepted a pass.

After a scoreless first period, Jan Stenerud kicked field goals of 38 and 16 yards to give Kansas City a 6-0 margin.

Dickey then ran over from the 20 and Blanda converted to give Oakland a 7-6 lead before Jack Gehrke took a 28-yard pass from Len Dawson to send the Chiefs to a 13-7 halftime advantage.

Lamonica had gone out early in the second period after he was struck on the head by an opponents' helmet. An Oakland spokesman said Lamonica appeared okay.

After Kansas City went ahead in the final period, Stenerud increased the margin with a 23-yard field goal.

Dickey led the Raiders to the three with less than a minute to go but then was thrown back to the 17 and the drive failed.

'HEY ROOK' 200 POUNDS TOUGH

Battle Makes Hit With Champs

DON ANDERSON
Special Correspondent

CHICAGO — Rookies in professional athletics take a lot of guff before they join the "in" crowd in their respective sports.

But there is one rookie in the camp of the New York Jets that so far has avoided special "treatment" from his teammates, has hit it off well with the guy whose job he is after and has earned words of high praise from his coach.

Mike Battle, former Long Beach City College star and more recently an all-America at USC, is getting a chance to crack the Super Bowl champions' defensive unit and he's making the most of it.

"Things are going well. I think I can make it," Battle said Friday night before taking the field for his first professional game with the Jets against the College All-Stars at Soldiers' Field.

In his debut, Mike was limited to one kick-off runback but he drew hearty cheers from the 74,208 fans in attendance when he almost broke for a lengthy return. As it was, he took the ball five yards deep in the end zone and got it out to the 27, a 32-yard return.

"Boy, there sure a lot of good players in the pros. The competition for jobs are so keen that it causes real mental strain. Mental mistakes with the Jets are the most serious mistakes you can make," Battle related.

"Football here is a business. When you get a chance to make it, you had better not blow it," he added.

"The veterans have been great. Oh, they call me 'Hey Rook' but that's about all. Bill Baird is a seven-year veteran at free safety and he has been a tremendous help to me," Battle said.

Coach Weeb Ewbank, the only man in football to coach championship teams in both the NFL and AFL, was generous in his praise of his rookie free safety candidate.

"Mike is doing just fine. He is a willing worker who weighs about 180 but is 200 pounds tough. He's a hitter. Just a hard nosed kid," Ewbank told the inquiring reporters.

Battle will get a good crack at making the squad as a punt and kickoff specialist. He led the nation in punt return yardage during the 1967 season at USC.

ALL STAR NOTES—Joe Namath insists that "I did the wrong thing for me personally in agreeing to sell" his Bachelors III nightclub . . . Gary Mecner, former Trojan defensive tackle, has been hit by the injury jinx. Gary missed all of last season with the Jets after undergoing knee surgery. He was "coming along fine" according to Ewbank until setback with a hyper-extension injury last week which sidelined him again. He did not make the trip to Chicago with the Jets.

Most prominent bumper stickers: "The Pack Will Be Back," referring to the Green Bay Packers, winners of the last three All-Star games . . . Jim Seymour and Terry Hanratty of Notre Dame and Ron Sayers (Gale's little brother) got the biggest pre-game ovations Friday night while Namath was greeted with a mixture of boos and cer-style all-star kicker, missed a field goal from the 33-yard line Friday night.

Roy Gerela, the Canadian born soccer pro his team lost by two points. Earlier in the week he had connected on a 62-yarder in practice.

ARTHUR DALEY

Youthful Sluggers Dominate Links

HARRISON, N.Y. — The youth rebellion has now reached into the realm of golf and the defiant challenge to the Establishment has so shaken the links aristocracy that it may never be the same again. All year long unknowns have kept bouncing up from nowhere to win tournaments. More often than not the winners have been total strangers getting their first exposure to big headlines and big money.

For the better part of the past decade such Establishment figures as Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus; Billy Casper, Gary Player and a few other name performers dominated the action. They do so no longer. There are too many youthful cager beavers of astonishing talents clawing their way to the top. By their example they even have inspired some of the older have-nots to join in their mutiny.

So lucrative has golf become as a profession that the divot digging sport has attracted an unparalleled number of slick stylists, young and hungry and without fear.

Many are now here at the Westchester Country Club, shooting boldly for the $50,000 first prize at the Westchester Classic, the world's richest golf tournament. It was with singularly deft turn of phrase that Palmer described the situation.

"IT'S THE QUALITY of the quantity," he said.

In the first 13 tournaments this season, there were 13 different winners. Of 34 tournaments, there have been 30 different winners. Are you beginning to get the idea?

"There's so much money at stake now," said Arnie, "that golf is attracting a higher caliber of player. We're even luring the most versatile athletes away from baseball, football and other sports because golf is a gem without age limits. What's more, senior golf is increasing in magnitude and importance, broadening the horizon even more. At the age of 57 Sam Snead is still going strong. A man can make good money and have a comfortable living without even winning."

Arnie paused and that infectious Palmer grin lit up his features as a wayward thought popped into his mind.

"Good money without winning?" he repeated. "I don't know how much satisfaction you get from it, though. I would get none. It's been a long dry spell for me because I haven't won a tournament since last September. Gosh, that's almost a year."

In a way Arnie proved his point last season. He won only twice but earned $114,000 to lift his lifetime earnings over the million dollar mark. If victories become more widely spaced, would he ever be tempted to call it a career?

"I DON'T THINK I ever could quit," he said earnestly. "I love the game too much. I intend to continue as long as I am able. The probability is that I wouldn't compete as often but would devote more time to my other interests."

Arnie has hotter irons and more outside fires than anyone else in the sport. That's why he's a multi-millionaire. In fact, some critics have insisted that the distractions of his other interests have placed such an insuperable burden on him that it has affected his game. He had denied it although the record supports the theory that he was at his best as a hungry young tiger and that he is now a well-fed member of the establishment.

"Sam Snead plays in comparative few tournaments nowadays," said Arnie, resuming his train of thought. "But he plays golf every day — except when he goes hunting or fishing. Jack Nicklaus and Billy Casper relax by fishing. Not me, though. Fishing bores me. I can't just sit there, waiting for something to happen.

"But I've started to do some hunting of recent years and that I like. It has action. You don't have to wait for them to come to you as you do in fishing. You go after them."

Arnie reached out to borrow a cigarette. He stared at it with the skeptical look of a man in the American Cancer Society television commercial.

"I quit smokingfor two years," he said, "and some day I'm going to quit for good. If I had any sense, I'd do it right now."

He had no sense. He lit the cigarette.

Vikings Rout Dolphins With 24-Point Burst

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Quarterback Joe Kapp threw for one touchdown and set up two others as he sparked the Minnesota Vikings to a 24-point second period outburst en route to a 45-10 exhibition pro football victory over the Miami Dolphins Saturday night.

Miami, of the American League, jumped to a 10-0 lead over its National League rivals before the Vikings got their offense rolling. The Dolphins, plagued by poor punting and an erratic attack, scored on an intercepted pass and a field goal.

Kapp, who completed 11 of 20 passes in the first half for 163 yards, hit Bob Grim with a 13-yard scoring toss and later used passes to set up five-yard scoring runs by Bill Brown and Dave Osborn.

Kapp turned the quarterbacking chores over to Gary Cuozzo and Bob Lee in the second half and each accounted for a touchdown. Cuozzo scored from the one-yard line in the third quarter and Lee threw 25 yards to Volly Murphy with four seconds left for the final tally. In between, Earl Denny scored from the one for still another Viking touchdown.

Fred Cox booted a 35-yard field goal for Minnesota.

Miami jumped out in front with a 38-yard field goal by Karl Kremser in the first period. Less than a minute later, Freddie Woodson intercepted a Kapp pass on the Minnesota 25 and streaked in for the touchdown.

Except for that brief flurry, however, the Dolphins could not generate any serious scoring threat.

Ankle Injury Fells Jordan

Jeff Jordan, one of the bright lights in the Ram backfield the early weeks of training camp, suffered a badly sprained right ankle during Saturday's scoreless scrimmage with New Orleans and the extent of the injury will not be known until Monday.

The former fullback for the University of Washington has been plagued with injuries in two previous tryouts with the Rams and was expected to start in the team's exhibition season opener against Dallas Friday night.

Mike Dennis and Willie Ellison led both squads in rushing with 29 and 28 yards respectively.

With each team running 12 offensive plays in sequence, Ram quarterback Karl Sweetan completed four of nine passes for 76 with wide receiver Wendell Tucker pulled in one toss for 58 yards.

Bill Kilmer and Edd Hargett alternated for the Saints. Kilmer hit on four of nine for 69 yards while the Texas A&M rookie completed four of seven for 46 yards.

The Ram defensive unit came up with three interceptions, by Willie Daniel, Dick Absher and Perry Parks. The Ram offense had no passes intercepted.

Dallas' offense whipped the defense, 34-29 in the club's final scrimmage. Craig Morton hit on nine of 18 passes for 173 yards and touchdowns of 44 and 31 yards to Bob Hayes and Craig Baynham.

Roger Staubach was five-for-nine for 122 yards and scoring tosses of 67 and 30 yards to Lance Rentzel and Obert Logan.

Lombardi's Redskin Debut Wet Success

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A heavy downpour marred the setting for Vince Lombardi's return to pro football Saturday night but his Washington Redskins still made it a successful debut by sloshing their way to a 13-7 victory over the Chicago Bears.

The rain that started at the opening kickoff quickly made the field a quagmire but Lombardi's Redskins turned a pair of pass interceptions into touchdowns to make him a winner in the first exhibition game with his new club.

Sam Huff, who came out of retirement when Lombardi took over at Washington, got the Redskins started with an interception that set up a second period score. After the Bears tied the contest 7-7 in the third period, Bobby Mitchell slipped loose to take a 17-yard touchdown pass from Sonny Jurgensen.

In a game played before 45,988 rain soaked fans, Huff grabbed a Jack Concannon pass on Chicago's 34 and sloshed his way to the seven-yard-line.

Two plays later, Washington rookie Larry Brown bucked over for the score.

Dennis Partee put the Chargers on the scoreboard with a 17-yard fielder with 3:30 elapsed.

After Preston Pearson carried the kickoff back 81 yards to the S.D. 15 exit Morrall, enter Unitas. Unitas needed only four plays before handing off to Matte for the final yard.

The visitors hiked their advantage to 16-3 when John Hadl was chased out of the end zone by defensive tackle Fred Miller for a safety.

Unitas kept the pot boiling by completing three passes in a row to maneuver Michaels into field goal range again and the big left-footed kicker made good a 17-yarder after earlier blowing an attempt from the 14.

With only four seconds left in the half, Partee countered with a 35-yarder.

For his quarter's work, Unitas completed 7 of 8 for 86 yards, including a perfect 48-yard strike to Ray Perkins, indicating his elbow is sound again. Morrall was 3 of 6 for 73 yards with one interception.

Hadl connected on 7 of 14 for 83 yards while directing the Charger attack the entire half.

Iowa State Pair Free After Credit Card Thievery

DES MOINES,(UPI) — Two Iowa State football players, accused of trying to buy a dress with a credit card they said they found, have been set free, provided they keep out of trouble the next two years.

Des Moines Municipal judge Luther T. Glanton Jr., said the two were charged with receiving stolen goods by false impersonation. They were arrested after trying to buy a $50 dress July 22 with a stolen credit card at a Des Moines store.

Sammy Davis, 21 Chicago, and Harvey Johnson, 20, told him they found the credit card, Glanton said, and were using it to buy the dress for Johnson's mother.

Oilers Hold Bills to 23 Yards Afoot

HOUSTON (UPI) — Pete Beathard and Don Trull threw touchdown passes Saturday night to lead the Houston Oilers to a 14-7 win over the Buffalo Bills, sorely missing O. J. Simpson, in the exhibition opener for both clubs before 37,250 in the Astrodome.

Buffalo, unable to sign Heisman Trophy winner Simpson so far, showed a need for him by gaining only 23 yards on the ground, minus 2 in the second half. The Bills, down 10-0 in the second quarter, scored on a 14-yard pass from Jack Kemp to Lloyd Pate after the first of linebacker Marty Schottenheimer's two interceptions.

Trull hit Glenn Bass with a seven-yard scorer for the Oilers' first score. Hoyle Granger punched over from the one in the third quarter for a Houston score set up by linebacker George Webster's 25-yard interception return with a Kay Stepehenson pass.

Beathard put the Oilers on the scoreboard again in the fourth quarter with a three-yard scoring toss to Mack Haik. Carl Gentile added three PATS and a 23-yard field goal in the first quarter.

A spokesman for the Bills said Simpson was not in Houston to view the game.

Late Fumble Paves Way to Kansas City Victory

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Gene Trosch recovered a fumble and Jackie Lee threw a scoring pass to Robert Holmes to give Kansas City a 23-17 victory over Oakland Saturday night in the first exhibition game of the season for the two American Football League clubs.

The 21-yard pass was set up when Eldridge Dickey, filling in for the injured Daryl Lamonica, fumbled early in the fourth period.

Oakland had gone ahead 17-13 in the third period on a field goal by the 41-year-old George Blanda and a 44-yard scamper by linebacker Bill Budness after he intercepted a pass.

After a scoreless first period, Jan Stenerud kicked field goals of 38 and 16 yards to give Kansas City a 6-0 margin.

Dickey then ran over from the 20 and Blanda converted to give Oakland a 7-6 lead before Jack Gehrke took a 28-yard pass from Len Dawson to send the Chiefs to a 13-7 halftime advantage.

Lamonica had gone out early in the second period after he was struck on the head by an opponents' helmet. An Oakland spokesman said Lamonica appeared okay.

After Kansas City went ahead in the final period, Stenerud increased the margin with a 23-yard field goal.

Dickey led the Raiders to the three with less than a minute to go but then was thrown back to the 17 and the drive failed.

Failure Not Hurting Tour 'Optimist'

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Failure isn't likely to spoil Tom Shaw.

The exuberant blond, one of the golf tour's young upstarts and one of its biggest optimists, has failed to qualify for the final 36 holes in 11 tournaments in 17 starts since his surprise first victory at the Doral Open last winter.

"I've missed so many cuts I've lost track," he said during a break in the current $250,000 Westchester Classic.

TOM SHAW
Has His Problems

"After you've won, there's more self-imposed pressure to do well. More people are aware of your bad scores than they were before.

"I've been playing so badly I get discouraged sometimes and just put my clubs away for a couple of days. But I feel things run in cycles. I was in the same kind of a slump last year and pulled out of it in the fall. Like a dash man, you can't do the 100 in 9.1 seconds every time you go out. But I'm going to win another tournament before this year is out. I just know it."

And you believe Shaw means it.

"My main problem is I want to play all the time. I don't like to miss a tournament. I don't like to take the time to go all the way home to Portland, Ore., to get my game straightened out when I have a problem."

Shaw, a 26-year-old cross between Mickey Rooney and Huckleberry Finn, said he has one goal every time he plays: to break 70. "It can be hard, though, because I'm a slow starter. I'm likely to shoot 75 the first day which kind of puts me behind the eight ball."

Tom finally took some time off 10 days ago after he missed the cut at the American Golf Classic and flew to Portland to see his home pro.

"I found I was leaving the club face open after I hit the ball," he said. "Basically, I'm a hooker and that's why I couldn't draw the ball. I was also having trouble with putting, and the more I missed, the more scared I'd get."

Shaw has the most disappointing record of any of the tour's early first time winners. Jim Colbert is next, missing nine cuts in 18 starts since he won at Pensacola Fla., in March. Others among this year's 10 first-time winners have done better. Young Bunky Henry, the former Georgia Tech place-kicker, has missed the cut in only one tournament in 12 starts since he won the National Airlines Open in Miami.

Shaw credits his family — wife Joy, a former airline stewardess, and son, Jerry, 3½, for much of his optimism.

"They both love to travel and they give me something to do when I'm not playing," he said.

"I decided I wanted to play by myself for the first three months of this year, but then I missed them so much they came back. My wife said, fine, as long as you promise I can stay."

The Shaws, who also travel with a 15-pound West Highland terrier named MacDivot, are expecting a second child in December.

"We're going to have a lot of 'em," he said.

Shaw plays out of Golf, Ill., and he and his family stays with his parents in Portland during the off-season.

"We're a tour family," he said. "We don't have a home."

Threesome in Tie for Women's Lead

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Gloria Wilcox, Judy Rankin and Sandra Spuzich turned in three-over-par 143s Saturday to tie for the second-round lead in the $20,000 Buckeye Savings Invitational golf tournament at the Royal Oak Country Club.

All three lady pros complained of erratic putting as they toured the 6,445-yard course while dusty winds caused first-round leaders' scores to soar.

Miss Wilcox, 24, a former U.S. Olympic javelin champion, shot four birdies but also had five three-putt greens in her round of 35-36—71. A native of Santa Catalina Island, Calif., Gloria is in her second year on the LPGA tour and said this was her best round to date.

"My tee shots and iron shots were fine," she said, "but my putting was very inconsistent."

Close behind the leading trio was the tourney's first-round leader, Sharon Miller, who blew up as she shot a 39-38 — 77 for a 36-hole total of 144

Greene Close to Making First Win Rich One

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — Brash Bert Greene, refusing to buckle under pressure, displayed a deadly putting touch Saturday which gave him a four-under-par 68 and a four-stroke lead at the end of the third round of the $250,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

Greene, member of a golfing family from Cochran, Ga., had previous rounds of 67 and 69 and stood at 12-under-par 204 at the end of 54 holes.

The confident 25-year-old, bidding for his first tour title, turned back the challenge of a dozen pursuers with uncanny accuracy on the greens. It was his third consecutive sub-par round and the son of a Georgia golf pro did it with the same calmness which marked his previous rounds.

"I'd just step and meet the ball," said Greene, leading a major tournament after three rounds for the first time in his career.

"I didn't do anything different," he added.

The Georgian, who finished tied for last place in the Westchester a year ago, opened a four-stroke bulge over veteran Tommy Bolt, South African Harold Henning, Frank Beard, Lee Trevino and Dan Sikes, all at 208.

Bunched at 209 were Bruce Crampton, Bert Yancey, Tommy Aaron and former Westchester assistant pro Al Mengert.

Greene, wearing a yellow shirt, green slacks and matching green socks, capped his brilliant round with a eight-foot birdie put on the 18th hole.

"I may wear this combination forever," the happy golfer commented in the clubhouse following his round. Asked what he was going to do Saturday night, he replied, "have a good dinner and try to get some sleep.

"There's a big round tomorrow."

The young southerner, playing his best golf in three years on the tour, broke away from the pack on the toughened 6,677-yard Westchester Country Club layout with back-to-back birds at the ninth and 10th holes and a 20-foot birdie putt from the fringe on the 386-yard, par-four 13th hole.

On two other occasions, he knocked in a six-footer on the 15th hole and a 10-footer on No. 16 after chipping from the high grass to the right. He also sank a 14-footer for par-five on the fifth.

Beard and Trevino climbed into contention with five-under par 67s, Henning had a 68, Bolt a 71 and Sikes a 70.

The colorful Bolt had another scrambling round which included an eagle-two on the fourth hole and a double-bogey seven on the fifth.

Doug Sanders, Ray Floyd, Gary Player and Dave Marr all had 68s to remain in the running while all-time money winner Arnold Palmer posted a 70 for a 215 total — 11 strokes off the pace.

HARRISON, N. J. (AP) — Young Bert Greene is doing everything his father taught him — and then some.

"He's doing just a little more," Herb Greene, a 60-year-old retired Georgia golf pro, said Saturday after his 25-year-old son had increased his lead to four strokes going into today's final round of the $250,000 Westchester Classic.

The tournament, the richest in golf, carries a $50,000 first prize and if Bert Greene is able to hold on and win it's guaranteed to drastically change his life.

From a nobody who has played well but never won a tournament on the crowded PGA tour, Greene would quickly become a somebody. He would qualify for the Tournament of Champions and would be exempt for at least a year from having to qualify for weekly tournaments.

Bert said he's not going to think about winning until he has a two-shot lead going into the final green today, but his parents are not surprised at his performance.

"I figured he'd be right in there," said the elder Greene. "We just hope he wins. Just one stroke in front would be enough."

Failure Not Hurting Tour 'Optimist'

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Failure isn't likely to spoil Tom Shaw.

The exuberant blond, one of the golf tour's young upstarts and one of its biggest optimists, has failed to qualify for the final 36 holes in 11 tournaments in 17 starts since his surprise first victory at the Doral Open last winter.

"I've missed so many cuts I've lost track," he said during a break in the current $250,000 Westchester Classic.

TOM SHAW

"After you've won, there's more self-imposed pressure to do well. More people are aware of your bad scores than they were before.

"I've been playing so badly I get discouraged sometimes and just put my clubs away for a couple of days. But I feel things run in cycles. I was in the same kind of a slump last year and pulled out of it in the fall. Like a dash man, you can't do the 100 in 9.1 seconds every time you go out. Ocean Resources Change Approved

Ray Arnett, a dedicated fish and wild life worker who took over the job as director of the California Department of Fish and Game when Walter Shannon retired to enjoy the kind of life he was directing, namely fishing and hunting, has taken a great step forward that should please all ocean fishermen.

Arnett announced this weekend that Gov. Ronald Reagan had approved his plan to reorganize the DFG's marine resources operations, which now will embrace a separate marine region to regulate and manage ocean resources from the Mexican border to the Oregon line.

It is a streamlining of ocean fishing management that puts all in that category in one region. Previously, direction of marine resources was divided among three of the existing five land regions. Now all operations will be combined into one distinct unit at Terminal Island, which anybody must admit is the best thing that has happened to ocean fishing for years.

There will be no change immediately in patrol and research branches of the Marine Resources Operations and no immediate change in personnel, outside of top management. There will be a definite coordination between the DFG's Sacramento headquarters and the operations at the island.

PHIL M. ROEDEL, FORMER MANAGER of MRO at Terminal Island and a veteran career DFG man since 1936, becomes chief of staff of the MRO at Sacramento, with his MRO chief, John Radovich, serving under him at Sacramento. Roedel is 55, Radovich is 48. Radovich has been with the department since 1949 and a great part of his work has been centered at Terminal Island.

Terminal Island, however, gets a brand-new manager, Doyle E. Gates, 41, who has been assistant MRO chief at Sacramento. He will move to Terminal Island to devote his entire time to management and regulation of the complex marine region.

Gates will have a 53-man patrol force, with one air along California's 1,000-mile coastline and most harbors along California's 1,100 mile coastline and most harbors and estuaries.

At first glance, one might think that this reorganization is solely for the purpose of enforcing existing laws, seeing that all fishermen have licenses and having wardens acting like policemen. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

The ocean resources form a complex situation, and that great Pacific, already our greatest recreational area, is destined to become more and more of the same as the population grows and the inland recreational areas, already filled to overflowing, become almost intolerable.

THIS WRITER KEEPS HOPING EACH week that better news will be available for the eager-beaver albacore fishermen, but for some strange reason, those longfins are remaining mostly in the area 80 miles south of San Diego, with occasional jig fish caught farther north.

To say that it is a mixed-up albacore year is putting it mildly. Mind you, the albies are not mixed up; they know very well what they are doing. They are feeding well or they wouldn't be staying in that same general area. But, in doing that, they are keeping the fishermen so mixed up and so mad that, emotionally at least, some anglers are about ready to break up their outfits.

The fish, as I have pointed out previously, are out of reach of the Long Beach-based boats. Even San Diego skippers have to scratch for enough passengers to justify long runs for their tremendous fleet of party and charter boats.

Two of the Border City's most famous skippers, Bill Poole of the Polaris III and Bruce Barnes of the Qualifier, came in Thursday with possibly the best reports of the day and the week. They had an average of two albies per passenger, and the fish averaged from 28 to 35 pounds, BUT those skippers had to go almost 70 miles south to get the fish. The runs for the boats were almost around the clock.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS—The National Rifle Assn. of America announces that three Long Beach shooters, Middleton Tompkins, Allen E. Easy and Theodore R. Easy will take part in the 1969 National High-Power Rifle Championships to be held at Camp Perry, Ohio, Aug. 18-25. Tompkins is no stranger to Camp Perry or to any other range, and it would be most surprising if he didn't return with more medals and trophies.

As the temperature of Southern California lakes rises, don't be surprised to see more dead fish floating, such as I mentioned a few days ago in a story about Henshaw. Another angler reports that he saw the same condition existing at Hemet Lake, and that's one of our higher ones. Catfish that had moved into the shallow water to spawn just didn't have enough oxygen in the water and died.

This is really an oddity about catfish. Some people have caught catfish, put them on stringers, taken them home and even refrigerated them overnight without cleaning. When taken out the next day and placed in fresh water, the catfish started swimming.

This incident occurred a few years ago and it about scared the wits out of a Long Beach housewife, who called me at the time and I found it to be true. However, I would suggest that nobody pick up floating fish. The flesh might be edible, but I wouldn't want to try it. I'd rather go for hamburger.

Stewart Aiming for German GP

Combined News Services

Jacky Ickx of Belgium beat Jackie Stewart of Scotland by three-tenths of a second Saturday over a 14.2-mile track and won the pole position for today's German automobile Grand Prix at Adenau, Germany.

The German Grand Prix is the seventh of the 11-race world series.

The 25-year-old Ickx led eight others through the eight-minute barrier. He gunned his Brabham-Ford around the circuit in the Eifel mountains in 7:42.1 minutes for an average speed of 110.5 miles an hour.

Stewart, 30, who has won five of the six races on the grand circuit competition this year, drove the car of teammate Jean-Pierre Beltoise because the Matra-Ford he crashed two weeks ago during trials for the British Grand Prix still is out of commission.

A victory by Stewart, who won last year in driving rain and then fog, would virtually assure him of the driver's title. Bruce McLaren would have to win the remaining four races with Stewart not winning any points.

Heavy rains spoiled the track at Nazareth, Pa., National Speedway Saturday, forcing cancelation of the USAC stock car championship.

Top drivers, including A. J. Fory, Roger McCluskey and Al Unser, were on hand for the 100-mile event, which had been postponed because of a wet track Friday night.

Forty drivers will start the Dixie 500 stock car race today in Atlanta, worth $100,310.

Lanky Richard Petty, who already holds just about every record the National Assn. for Stock Car Auto Racing has to offer, will go for his 100th victory in a career that started in 1959.

Whittier Miss Wins Amateur Golf Tourney

MIDLAND, Tex. — Jane Bastenchury of Whittier, won the woman's Trans-Mississippi Amateur golf tournament Saturday on the first hole of a sudden death playoff against Martha Wilkinson of Anaheim.

The two Californians finished 36 holes of match play in a tie for the lead. Miss Bastenchury then nabbed the four-day tourney title by one stroke on the 37th hole.

Miss Wilkinson had taken a three-hole lead with only six holes to go when Miss Bastenchury charged into a tie.

Miss Bastenchury defeated defending champion Mrs. Michael Scala Friday as Miss Wilkinson was edging Cynthia Hill of South Haven, Mich., by a 5-4 margin.

This year's champion also nabbed the tourney in 1967. Miss Wilkinson was also runner up last year.

Smith advanced to the final Saturday by upsetting top-seeded Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., 6-1, 3-6, 6-1. Graebner won in straight sets over Bob Lutz of Los Angeles, 6-3, 7-5.

The semifinal round was shortened from best-of-five to best-of-three sets because of the threat of more rain.

First place money is $4,000 and a new car. The runner-up gets $2,000. This is the first year in the 43-year history of the tournament that prize money is being offered.

The top-seeded woman in singles play also was defeated.

Mary Ann Eisel Curtis of St. Louis was upset by Betty Ann Grubb of Santa Monica, Calif., 6-4, 4-6, 6-4. Miss Grubb will take on Kristy Pigeon of Danville, Calif., in the women's final. Miss Pigeon beat Australian Kerry Harris 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Rain stopped a dramatic Davis Cup interzone semifinal Saturday night with Britain on the verge of victory over Brazil.

With the teams tied at two matches each, Mark Cox of Britain led Jose Edison Mandarino, 6-3, 18-16, 3-6. Officials announced the match would be completed today.

Brazil started the day leading 2-1. But the match swung in favor of Britain when Graham Stillwell upset Tom Koch, the Brazilian ace 7-5, 6-4, 6-4.

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Eric Van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif., and Richard Stockton of Garden City, N.J., the two top seeds in the junior division, will meet Sunday for the championship in the national junior and boys tennis championships.

The two, who are good friends and teamed to win the junior doubles championship Saturday, were the top two seeds in the junior division. John Whitinger of Neenah, Wis., and James Hagey of La Jolla, Calif., will play for the boys division championship.

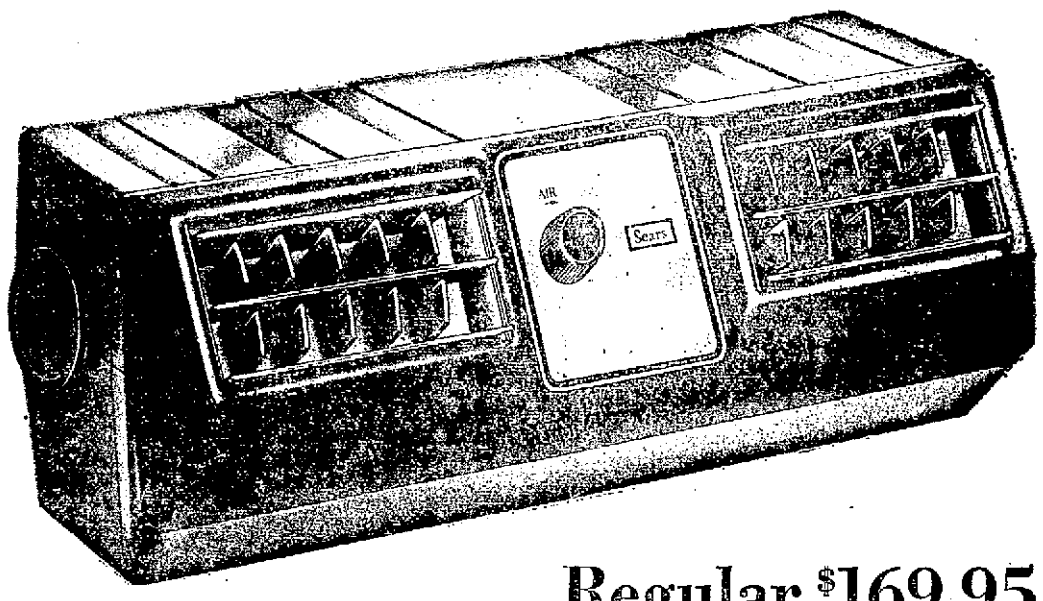

BUCHAREST — Ion Tiriac and Ilie Nastase sent Romania into the Interzone Davis Cup finals Saturday with a 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 doubles tennis victory over Premjit Lall and Jaidip Mukerjee of India.

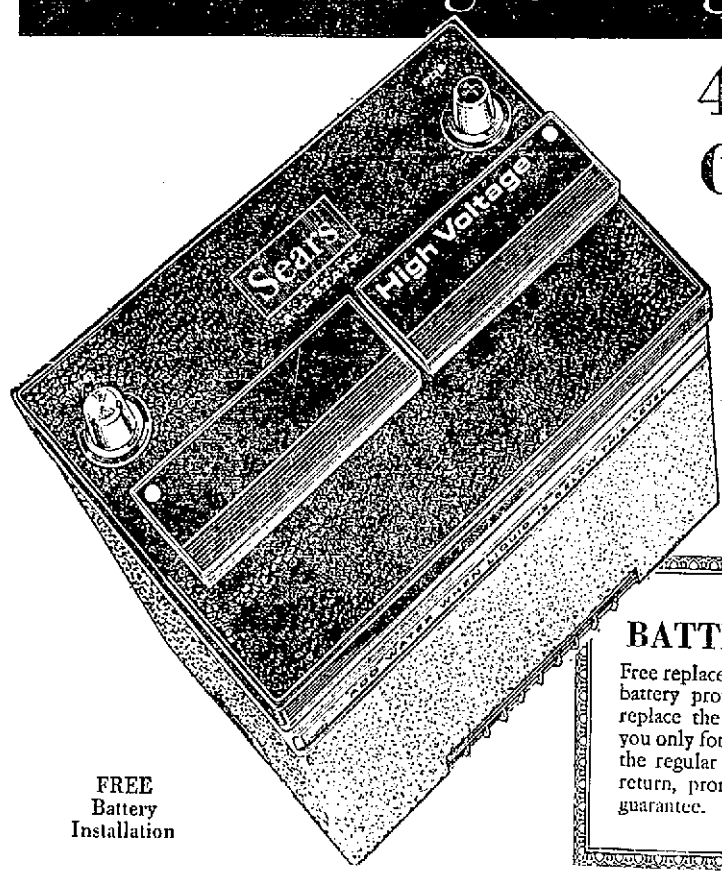

The victory gave Romania an unbeatable 3-0 lead in the best-of-five competition.

EASTBOURNE, England — Australians Mrs. Margaret Court and Judy Tegart beat British sisters Mrs. Christine Janes and Nell Truman 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 for the doubles title Saturday in the Hurlman Women's tennis tournament.

The men's doubles and the mixed doubles finals were washed out and officially halved.

14,870 Watch Witch Chic Romp Home at Alamitos

By DAVE DANIEL

Witch Chic led from wire-to-wire in easily capturing the featured $3,000 Beverly Hills Purse at Los Alamitos race course Saturday night before 14,870 fans.

Jockey John Watson piloted Witch Chic to his second win in a row as the classy gelding galloped the 400 yards in a swift 20.2 seconds, one of the fastest times of the year, to win by a length and a half.

As second favorite, Witch Chic returned $6.60, while favored Quincy A Go Go was second and longshot Lighting Ridge third.

The Rory Calhoun purse, named for the cowboy movie hero, was taken by Dave Morris aboard Prissy Lula, the 6-5 favorite that took her third victory in a row and returned $4.40.

Early comers to the track were treated well when Nolton Pattio, everyone's favorite longshot rider, galloped home a winner with Tiny Light in the first race to the tune of $86.

Pattio, who is getting fewer rides this season than in year's past due to the larger number of jockeys in attendance, also rode the year's biggest winner July 5 when he won with Request Jane for a $137.20 payoff, the sixth highest in the history of the Orange County track.

Clearly, he makes the most of the rides he does get.

Favored Jodies Dandy Bar, with Bruce Brinkley up, won the second race for a $3.80 payoff and a $222 daily double.

Favorites continued to hold the hot hand for there on as Deck Bell, ridden by popular Terry Lipham, returned only $5.40 in the third race while Foxy Don paid $6.20 in winning the fourth.

Josephine June won her second race in a row in the fifth as John Watson booted

WESTBURY, N.Y. (UPI) — Nevele Pride won the biggest purse of his career at Roosevelt Raceway Saturday night as he became the third trotter ever to sweep the Founders Plate in the $89,670 Realization Trot before 37,000 onlookers.

Nevele Pride picked up the $44,335 first prize in the eighth realization and the $50,000 bonus that goes to the winner of the Founder's Plate. Moreover, his clocking for the mile and a six-teenth of 2:07 2/5 set a world record for the distance. This erased Perfect Freight's 2:08 3/5 created in 1966.

her home for a $3.40 payoff.

It was the third win in three weeks for the Rocket Bar filly.

Charley Smith, 11-time riding champion and third in this year's standings, rode his 26th winner of the meeting with second-favored Rocket Van Susan in the 549-yard sixth race for

Del Mar Finish Crowded

Take Win Away from Triple Tux

DEL MAR — In a wild and wooly finish, Kissin' George was declared winner of the $22,200 San Diego handicap Saturday when the stewards disqualified the original victor, longshot Triple Tux.

Triple Tux, sent postward at 15-1, reached the wire a nose in front of Kissin' George, but only after swerving badly just past the sixteenth pole and impeding Fiddle Isle.

Fiddle, Isle, who was the 2-1 choice in the mile and one-sixteenth was stopped cold and eventually wound up fourth.

After viewing the films, the stewards reported that Triple Tux was also bumped Kissin' George when he swerved.

Rivet was making a wrong move along the inside when the traffic problems began. Rivet's jockey, Merlin Volzke, claimed foul against Triple Tux and his rider, Denis Tierney.

In the revised order of finish, Kissin' George was elevated into the winner's spot, worth $11,825, Rivet was placed second, Fiddle Isle third and Triple Tux fourth.

Kissin' George, who was piloted by Bill Mahorney, returned $7.40, $5.20 and $3.60 as his scored the first victory of his career at more than seven furlongs. Rivet paid $5.40 and $3.60 and Fiddle Isle $3.

Quicken Tree, topweighted at 127 pounds, failed to seriously threaten after falling far back in the early stages and finished fifth.

Kissin' George, famed as one of the nation's finest sprinters, was quickest from the gate, hustling to the front under Mahorney. He was hotly pursued by Triple Tux with the rest of the field strung out behind.

Hattab Stretch Winner

Late Scratch Pulls Out Arts and Letters

Combined News Services

Al Hattab took advantage of the absence of Belmont winner Arts and Letters, who was scratched earlier in the day, to score a two-length victory over Dot Ed's Bluesky Saturday in the $100,000-added Monmouth Invitational at Monmouth Park.

Al Hattab, a 3-year-old roan colt by the Axe II who won the Patriot Stakes in his last start, charged past Dot Ed's Bluesky at the top of the stretch and, under the steady urging of Ray Broussard, kept his rival safe in the closing drive for the wire.

It was Al Hattab's third consecutive victory and seventh in 14 races this season and hiked his 1969 earnings to over $250,000. He covered the 1⅛ mile in 1:50 1/5.

Al Hattab paid $3.40, $2.80 and $2.20 and carried highweight of 126 pounds in 1:50 1/5. Dot Ed's Bluesky returned $10.40 and $4.80, and the show payoff on Hydrologist, who was a neck back of the place horse, was $4.40.

Arts and Letters, assigned topweight of 128 pounds for the Invitational, was scratched at 9 a.m. by trainer Elliott Burch.

The Belmont Stakes winner was on the grounds and ready to run, but only if the track was fast. A heavy rain during the night prompted Burch to declare Arts and Letters, although by post time for the Invitational the track had dried out and was rated fast.

Tampa Trouble, a 25-1 shot, won the $113,000 Benjamin F. Lindheimer Handicap by 2½ lengths at Arlington Park.

Argentine-bred Figonero, the even-money choice with the crowd of 27,131, finished fourth after fading in the stretch.

Figonero was seeking his fourth successive victory after making his United States debut by winning three races and $140,300 within a span of 15 days at Hollywood Park several weeks ago.

Verbatim led virtually every step of the way as the 4-year-old colt from the Elmendorf Farm raced to an easy five-length victory in the $50,000-added Whitney Stakes at Saratoga.

DOWN TO EARTH

Sutton Struggling for 13th Victory

so we haven't deserved to win too many.

"Like I said, we haven't put anything together. We score eight runs one night and lose, then hold the other club to one or two runs the next and still lose."

Young Mike Torrez turned away the Dodgers repeatedly until he was finally bounced in the big seventh inning, the O'Malleys's biggest round of the current trip.

Sutton got his 12th win July 14 at Houston and since then has been anything but Mr. Lucky.

A fly lost in the sun cost him one game, a couple of infield squirters hampered him in another and then there was Saturday's game. Two high-bouncers wound up going for doubles and there was another assortment of infield bloopers that all added to Sutton's 11th reverse. Once he was 10-5 but now is just a game over the .500 plateau, at 12-11.

Alston was hoping for a big inning like that, hoping it might pull the club out of its little skid.

That's why he called a rare clubhouse meeting prior to Saturday's game. It lasted 20 minutes.

"We're not going over the St. Louis hitters," Alston pointed out when asked about the clubhouse session. "After all, there's no one on this club we don't know how to pitch to.

"I was just trying to get some spark going. Maybe it helped . . . even though the 'spark' came a little late."

DODGER DOINGS: Latest retirement rumor—Willie Davis. The Dodgers' fleet centerfielder has hinted he might toss it in after this season and devote more time to numerous non-baseball interests.

Sandy Koufax is the latest name added to the star-studded list of former Dodgers and Angels who'll take part in the southland's first Old-Timers game Sunday, Aug. 24 at Anaheim Stadium, prior to the Angels-Tigers game . . . Don Newcombe and Jackie Robinson are just two of the other big name Dodgers who'll play. . .

Art Davis: Willie took part in a baseball training film Saturday afternoon at Busch Memorial Stadium, a flick produced by Lou Brock's film company. And Willie told the kids (via film) all about — get this now — hunting, which has been his bugaboo over the years. . .

Walter Alston's grandson, Robin Ogle, took part in the Dodgers' pre-game drills. . .

Willie Crawford was a last-minute scratch from the Dodgers' starting lineup. Willie has been suffering dizzy spells the last week and after checking with Willie G. following batting practice Alston decided to play Manny Mota instead. . .

14,870 Watch Witch Chic Romp Home at Alamitos

By DAVE DANIEL

Witch Chic led from wire-to-wire in easily capturing the featured $3,000 Beverly Hills Purse at Los Alamitos race course Saturday night before 14,870 fans.

Jockey John Watson piloted Witch Chic to his second win in a row as the classy gelding galloped the 400 yards in a swift 20.2 seconds, one of the fastest times of the year, to win by a length and a half.

As second favorite, Witch Chic returned $6.60, while favored Quincy A Go Go was second and longshot Lighting Ridge third.

The Rory Calhoun purse, named for the cowboy movie hero, was taken by Dave Morris aboard Prissy Lula, the 6-5 favorite that took her third victory in a row and returned $4.40.

Early comers to the track were treated well when Nolton Pattio, everyone's favorite longshot rider, galloped home a winner with Tiny Light in the first race to the tune of $86.

Pattio, who is getting fewer rides this season than in year's past due to the larger number of jockeys in attendance, also rode the year's biggest winner July 5 when he won with Request Jane for a $137.20 payoff, the sixth highest in the history of the Orange County track.

Clearly, he makes the most of the rides he does get.

Favored Jodies Dandy Bar, with Bruce Brinkley up, won the second race for a $3.80 payoff and a $222 daily double.

Favorites continued to hold the hot hand for there on as Deck Bell, ridden by popular Terry Lipham, returned only $5.40 in the third race while Foxy Don paid $6.20 in winning the fourth.

Josephine June won her second race in a row in the fifth as John Watson booted her home for a $3.40 payoff.

It was the third win in three weeks for the Rocket Bar filly.

Charley Smith, 11-time riding champion and third in this year's standings, rode his 26th winner of the meeting with second-favored Rocket Van Susan in the 549-yard sixth race for

Biggest Purse Ever for Neville Pride

WESTBURY, N.Y. (UPI) — Nevele Pride won the biggest purse of his career at Roosevelt Raceway Saturday night as he became the third trotter ever to sweep the Founders Plate in the $86,670 Realization Trot before 37,000 onlookers.

Nevele Pride picked up the $44,335 first prize in the eighth realization and the $50,000 bonus that goes to the winner of the Founder's Plate. Moreover, his clocking for the mile and a six-teenth of 2:07 2/5 set a world record for the distance. This erased Perfect Freight's 2:08 3/5 created in 1966.

Hattab Stretch Winner

Late Scratch Pulls Out Arts and Letters

Combined News Services

Al Hattab took advantage of the absence of Belmont winner Arts and Letters, who was scratched earlier in the day, to score a two-length victory over Dot Ed's Bluesky Saturday in the $100,000-added Monmouth Invitational at Monmouth Park.

Al Hattab, a 3-year-old roan colt by the Axe II who won the Patriot Stakes in his last start, charged past Dot Ed's Bluesky at the top of the stretch and, under the steady urging of Ray Broussard, kept his rival safe in the closing drive for the wire.

It was Al Hattab's third consecutive victory and seventh in 14 races this season and hiked his 1969 earnings to over $250,000. He covered the 1⅛ mile in 1:50 1/5.

Al Hattab paid $3.40, $2.80 and $2.20 and carried highweight of 126 pounds in 1:50 1/5. Dot Ed's Bluesky returned $10.40 and $4.80, and the show payoff on Hydrologist, who was a neck back of the place horse, was $4.40.

Arts and Letters, assigned topweight of 126 pounds for the Invitational, was scratched at 9 a.m. by trainer Elliott Burch.

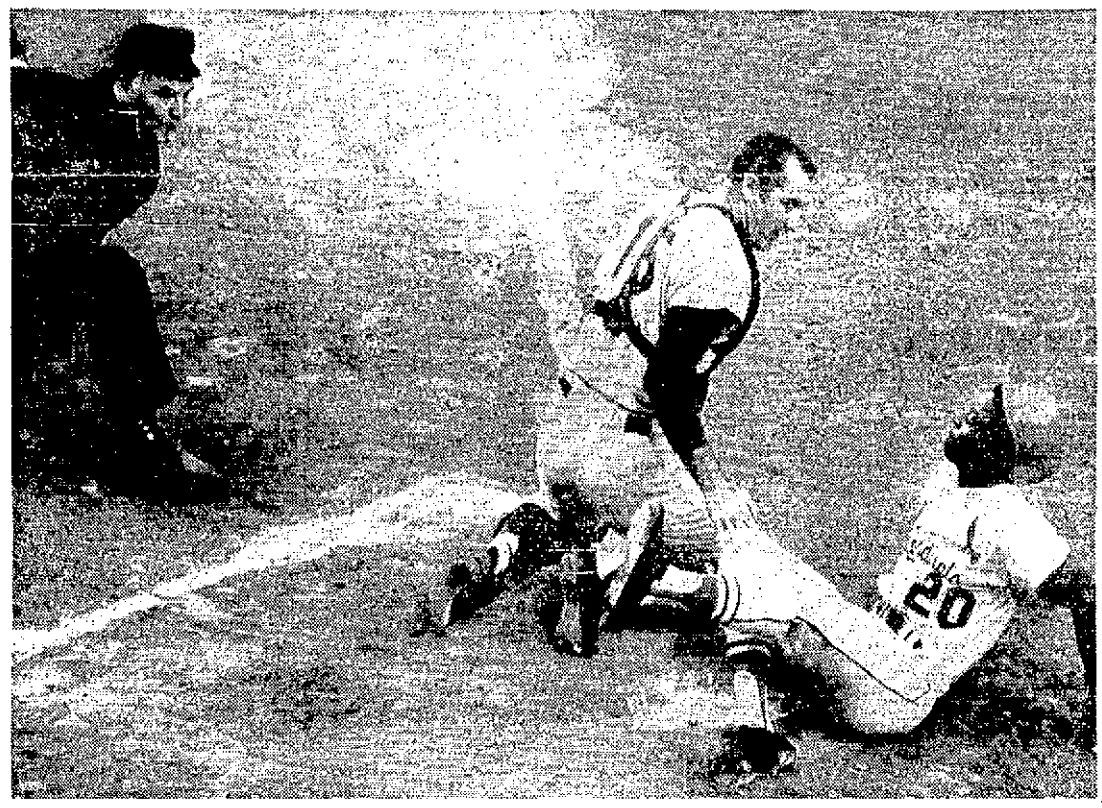

The Belmont Stakes winner was on the gounds and ready to run, but only if the track was fast. A heavy rain during the night prompted Burch to declare Arts and Letters, although by post time for the Invitational the track had dried out and was rated fast.

Tampa Trouble, a 25-1 shot, won the $113,000 Benjamin F. Lindheimer Handicap by 2½ lengths at Arlington Park.

Argentine-bred Figonero, the even-money choice with the crowd of 27,131, finished fourth after fading in the stretch.

Figonero was seeking his fourth successive victory after making his United States debut by winning three races and $140,300 within a span of 15 days at Hollywood Park several weeks ago.

Verbatim led virtually every step of the way as the 4-year-old colt from the Elmendorf Farm raced to an easy five-length victory in the $50,000-added Whitney Stakes at Saratoga.

DOWN TO EARTH

Sutton Struggling for 13th Victory

so we haven't deserved to win too many.

"Like I said, we haven't put anything together. We score eight runs one night and lose, then hold the other club to one or two runs the next and still lose."

Young Mike Torrez turned away the Dodgers repeatedly until he was finally bounced in the big seventh inning, the O'Malleys's biggest round of the current trip.

Sutton got his 12th win July 14 at Houston and since then has been anything but Mr. Lucky.

A fly lost in the sun cost him one game, a couple of infield squirters hampered him in another and then there was Saturday's game. Two high-bouncers wound up going for doubles and there was another assortment of infield bloopers that all added to Sutton's 11th reverse. Once he was 10-5 but now is just a game over the .500 plateau, at 12-11.

Alston was hoping for a big inning like that, hoping it might pull the club out of its little skid.

That's why he called a rare clubhouse meeting prior to Saturday's game. It lasted 20 minutes.

"We're not going over the St. Louis hitters," Alston pointed out when asked about the clubhouse session. "After all, there's no one on this club we don't know how to pitch to.

"I was just trying to get some spark going. Maybe it helped . . . even though the 'spark' came a little late."

DODGER DOINGS: Latest retirement rumor—Willie Davis. The Dodgers' fleet centerfielder has hinted he might toss it in after this season and devote more time to numerous non-baseball interests.

Sandy Koufax is the latest name added to the star-studded list of former Dodgers and Angels who'll take part in the southland's first Old-Timers game Sunday, Aug. 24 at Anaheim Stadium, prior to the Angels-Tigers game . . . Don Newcombe and Jackie Robinson are just two of the other big name Dodgers who'll play. . .

Ad Davis: Willie took part in a baseball training film Saturday afternoon at Busch Memorial Stadium, a flick produced by Lou Brock's film company. And Willie told the kids (via film) all about — get this now — bunting, which has been his bugaboo over the years. . .

Walter Alston's grandson, Robin Ogle, took part in the Dodgers' pre-game drills. . .

Willie Crawford was a last-minute scratch from the Dodgers' starting lineup. Willie has been suffering dizzy spells the last week and after checking with Willie C. following batting practice Alston decided to play Manny Mota instead. . .

Del Mar Finish Crowded

Take Win Away from Triple Tux

DEL MAR — In a wild and wooly finish, Kissin' George was declared winner of the $22,200 San Diego handicap Saturday when the stewards disqualified the original victor, longshot Triple Tux.

Triple Tux, sent postward at 15-1, reached the wire a nose in front of Kissin' George, but only after swerving badly just past the sixteenth pole and impeding Fiddle Isle.

Fiddle, Isle, who was the 2-1 choice in the mile and one-sixteenth was slopped cold and eventually wound up fourth.

After viewing the films, the stewards reported that Triple Tux was also bumped Kissin' George when he swerved.

Rivet was making a wrong move along the inside when the traffic problems began. Rivet's jockey, Merlin Volzke, claimed foul against Triple Tux and his rider, Denis Tierney.

In the revised order of finish, Kissin' George was elevated into the winner's spot, worth $11,825, Rivet was placed second, Fiddle Isle third and Triple Tux fourth.

Kissin' George, who was piloted by Bill Mahorney, returned $7.40, $5.20 and $3.80 as his scored the first victory of his career at more than seven furlongs. Rivet paid $5.40 and $3.60 and Fiddle Isle $3.

Quicken Tree, topweighted at 127 pounds, failed to seriously threaten after falling far back in the early stages and finished fifth.

Kissin' George, famed as one of the nation's finest sprinters, was quickest from the gate, hustling to the front under Mahorney. He was hotly pursued by Triple Tux with the rest of the field strung out behind.

Lombardi's Big Task—Improving 'Skin Pass Rush

By BUD GOODE

Mix 40 push-ups with 50 squats and five minutes of wind sprints and you have Vince Lombardi's ideal of a holiday.

Lombardi has a reputation as one of the NFL's greatest coaches. But he inherited a Washington Redskin team whose defense had more holes in it than old lace.

How far up the ladder must Lombardi bring his defensive squad to make the Redskins competitive? And how far to make them a winner?

According to Computer Corner, one of the important defensive statistics in pro football is the number of times your defense clobbers the opposing quarterback.

When the passer is tackled, the series of downs stands to be lost, and the team is forced to punt. The Jets-Colts Super Bowl game is a good example. The Colts' Earl Morrall was dumped three times in the first quarter — and the handwriting was on the ball.

How did the Washington Redskins line perform last year in getting to the quarterback? Computer Corner poured the 1968 season statistics into our Univac sports analyzer with these results:

COASTAL DIVISION	Pct.	CENTURY DIVISION	Pct.
Rams	13.9	St. Louis	11.0
Baltimore	10.4	New Orleans	9.3
San Francisco	8.4	Pittsburgh	6.4
Atlanta	7.5	Cleveland	6.0
CAPITAL DIVISION	Pct.	CENTRAL DIVISION	Pct.
Dallas	12.0	Minnesota	14.0
Philadelphia	6.4	Detroit	10.7
New York	5.9	Chicago	9.1
Washington	5.9	Green Bay	8.6

Last year the Redskins' defensive line was the weakest in the league, with the Giants, at getting to the opposing quarterback.

If coach Lombardi is setting goals for his defense, it must improve 50 per cent to reach the league average. To top the 12-14 per cent standard of the Rams, Dallas and Minnesota, the Redskins must double the number of times they dump the opposing passer.

That's a big order to fill in one year, even for a coach of Lombardi's stature.

Black Driver Goes It Alone

DANVILLE, Va. (AP) — Race driver Wendell Oliver Scott says his job is no different from that of any other hardworking man.

"All I'm trying to do is make a decent living. Sometimes it is hard to make ends meet, but I'm no different from most other people who're doing what they like to do."

Scott, who will be 48 years old on Aug. 29, is the only Negro professional driver on the nation's oval tracks. He's in his 16th year of competition and says he wouldn't trade a minute of it.

"It is hard work, but my mother and my white family worked hard. So I'm used to it. I don't figure anybody owes me a living for nothing. That's the trouble with so many people today — blacks and whites — they want all they can get without working for it."

Scott grins broadly and his thin mustache quivers and his blue eyes sparkle when he tells his favorite story about how he got into auto racing.

"The promoter in my area figured he ought to be getting more Negroes into the grandstands. So he started looking around for a Negro driver. There weren't any, so he went to the county police.

"The police told him he ought to talk to that 'darkie' they'd been chasing over the back roads hauling liquor. The promoter looked me up, and that's how I became a race driver.

"There were plenty of whites around in 1951 who didn't want to run against me, and most of the promoters took my entry only because they thought there might be trouble if they didn't. Sorta like I might show up with some black friends and blow the place up."

"I think I have as many true friends in racing as any other driver. Oh, we don't pal around and I never expected we would. That's because I have to do my own work at the track and I don't have time. But we get along well in the garage area and the white drivers and mechanics help me when they can."

Scott says the Holman and Moody firm of Charlotte, which is the factory outlet for Ford stock racing cars and parts, "has been particularly good to me. They have given me parts when my budget was low, and sold them to me at reduced rates other times to help me keep going.

In NASCAR's elite Grand National division, Scott's success has been somewhat better than most of the independents who own their cars.

Prior to 1969 he had driven 46,377.6 miles of Grand National competition in 357 races. He had won $100,993 in eight years. His best year was in 1968 when his purse money totaled $17,020. To this he added about $4,000 in "deal money" (money paid by the promoter to get his entry) and picked up another $4,000 from the NASCAR championship point fund at the end of the season.

This year he has started in 31 races and won $14,752. With many of the big events still on the schedule, he could have his best financial year ever.

Scott has two sons, Wendell Jr. and Frankie, who want to be race drivers. They presently are members of his pit crew, but Scott says he can't afford to build race cars for them.

"I owed about $10,000 several years ago," he says. "Another good year or two and I'll come out of it. Then maybe the boys can take over and I'll take me a little rest."

MR. CLEA HARRISON, owner of Ricketts Motors shown with General Contractor, Russell Best.

NEWS RELEASE . . .

Ricketts Motors is celebrating fifteen years of continued growth in Long Beach with the announcement today of a major expansion to be completed during the next few weeks.

In an interview with Mr. Clea Harrison, Owner of Ricketts Motors, it was learned that among the most important features of the now in progress expansion, is a complete, ultra-modern, electronic diagnostic center.

Harrison stated that, ". . . in this busy age, we know that our customers have far better things to do with their time than sitting in our customer lounge waiting for service or repairs to be completed on their car. For this reason, we've selected only the most up-to-date space-age equipment available." He went on to emphasize that every feature of the Ricketts expansion is designed to increase their service to their customers. He stated that, ". . . they (the people of the Long Beach area) have been awfully good to Ricketts Motors these past fifteen years, and many of our customers have been with us this entire time. Consequently, we feel it to be only proper that we do everything in our power to show our appreciation, and that's the reason for the accent on customer service, comfort, and convenience."

Through the use of the new electronic center (which will have a total value of $50,000), it will be possible to immediately simulate practically every road and driving condition, resulting in a complete, accurate "health" profile of a "patient" Volkswagen in not more than ten minutes. It will mean that many service and repair functions can be completed in only a fraction of the time previously required.

Along with the new diagnostic center, a complete "face-lifting" of many areas of the general parts and service departments is also scheduled, and will include a new, well lighted customer parking area, a triple the present size parts department, and a spacious, pleasantly furnished customer lounge.

In order to accommodate all these new features, it has been necessary for Ricketts Motors to radically expand its size as well, and a drive past the dealership will now show them occupying twice the previous space along Long Beach Boulevard, and extending the entire block along Tenth Street from Long Beach Blvd. to Locust Avenue.

WHY OUR 40th YEAR

Continues To Be . . .

Our Greatest Year

Great achievements require careful planning and skill. At Rex L. Hodges we maintain a staff of expert professional specialists highly skilled and experienced in all phases of real estate. We were first in the industry to employ the space-age computers in our never ending endeavors to take those "giant steps forward" — to keep ahead of all competition. And we have the exclusive advantage of a 40-year heritage of dependability and that all important ingredient called "integrity" . . .

THAT'S WHY WE HAVE ALWAYS SAID:
"Ask Your Attorney or Banker About Us"

SALES ARE UP 32% OVER LAST YEAR

You bet, 40 years of financial relationships and resources makes a difference in today's tight money market. Ask these Hodges customers: (Whose housing problems have been solved within the past 3 months)

OF THE WEEK

Mr. Holmes was born in a farm in northern Indiana. His parents sold the farm and moved to Southern California in 1914. He attended Pasadena City Schools and graduated from High School there in 1930. Attended City College and University of Southern California extension classes and completed his education at Washington State University in 1937, receiving his Bachelor of Arts Degree in Economics.

Mr. Holmes worked in retail sales until 1940, then worked for the U.S. Department of Defense until 1943, at which time he entered the U.S. Navy until 1946.

He arrived in Long Beach in 1947 and managed a retail home appliance firm until 1953. He secured his Real Estate Salesman's license in 1953 and Real Estate Broker's license in 1955. Since that time until 1962, Mr. Homes conducted general real estate brokerage business, but he now specializes in the sale of mobile home parks and motels.

Mr. Holmes says: "I have been priviledgad to serve the Long Beach Board of Realtors as follows:

Chairman of Public Relations Committee, 1958. During this year I was priviledged to work with the Independent, Press-Telegram in originating and designing the Realtor of the Week column as it stands today. Glad I finally made it. (the column, that is).

Chairman of Multiple Listing committee, 1959.
On Board of Directors, 1960 (3rd. VP), 1961 (2nd. VP), 1962 (1st. VP).
Realtor of the Year, 1958."

Mr. Holmes has participated in a number of community activities. He served on the Board of Directors, Los Altos YMCA from 1963 until 1963. He is an active member of East Long Beach Lions Club and served as president there from 1961 until 1962. He is also an active member of Elks Lodge 888.

He and his wonderful wife, May, reside at 2278 Radnor, Long Beach, with their tow sons, Richard 22 and Robert 21 and their daughter Carolyn, 18. Mr. Holmes thinks Long Beach is a great place to live!

REALTOR

OF THE WEEK

Mr. Holmes was born in a farm in northern Indiana. His parents sold the farm and moved to Southern California in 1914. He attended Pasadena City Schools and graduated from High School there in 1930. Attended City College and University of Southern California extension classes and completed his education at Washington State University in 1937, receiving his Bachelor of Arts Degree in Economics.

Mr. Holmes worked in retail sales until 1940, then worked for the U.S. Department of Defense until 1943, at which time he entered the U.S. Navy until 1946.

He arrived in Long Beach in 1947 and managed a retail home appliance firm until 1953. He secured his Real Estate Salesman's license in 1953 and Real Estate Broker's license in 1955. Since that time until 1962, Mr. Homes conducted general real estate brokerage business, but he now specializes in the sale of mobile home parks and motels.

Mr. Holmes says: "I have been priviledged to serve the Long Beach Board of Realtors as follows:

Chairman of Public Relations Committee, 1958. During this year I was priviledged to work with the Independent, Press-Telegram in originating and designing the Realtor of the Week column as it stands today. Glad I finally made it. (the column, that is).

Chairman of Multiple Listing committee, 1959.

On Board of Directors, 1960 (3rd. VP), 1961 (2nd. VP), 1962 (1st. VP).

Realtor of the Year, 1958."

Mr. Holmes has participated in a number of community activities. He served on the Board of Directors, Los Altos YMCA from 1963 until 1963. He is an active member of East Long Beach Lions Club and served as president there from 1961 until 1962. He is also an active member of Elks Lodge 888.

He and his wonderful wife, May, reside at 2278 Radnor, Long Beach, with their tow sons, Richard 22 and Robert 21 and their daughter Carolyn, 18. Mr. Holmes thinks Long Beach is a great place to live!

MODEL MADE FOR NASA

Moon House for Two Envisioned

Special to the Progress Section

When man first lives on the moon, it could be in an inflated structure erected by oxygen.

Stowed in a canister attached to its lunar transport vehicle, the moon house would be unpacked after landing, and inflated by compressed oxygen brought from earth.

A full-scale research model of such a moon house has been fabricated for NASA's Langley Research Center, Hampton, Va., by Goodyear Aerospace Corporation (GAC) of Akron.

Use of newly-developed materials for the shelter are being studied by GAC under a nine-month contract to NASA-Langley. Under the contract, GAC is to advance materials technology to the point that mission hardware can be built for use on the moon in the 1973-75 period.

INSIDE the moon house, living would be almost earth-like.

The structure would contain electrical power generating and temperature control equipment, hydrogen and oxygen tanks, voice and telemetry links, two bunks, and other equipment to provide a "life-giving" environment.

Supplies to support two men for eight days and the interior support equipment would be transported in canisters similar to that containing the moon house during the journey to the lunar surface.

For shorter stays on the moon the shelter possibly may be supported by systems tied to, and already proven in, the Lunar Module operation.

A CONSTANT temperature of 75 degrees would be maintained in the lunar shelter, even though the moon's temperature may range from minus 300 degrees to plus 250 degrees Fahrenheit.

Sitting at a console, one astronaut could maintain communications with his teammate exploring the lunar surface, with the orbiting command module, and with mission control back on earth.

Although four years old, the moon house concept still is a shelter contender for "when" and "if" man lives on the moon, Goodyear Aerospace said.

Such a shelter is not currently needed in the Apollo program because lengthy lunar stays are not planned.

THE structures research model, now on display at NASA-Langley, is contructed of high-strength stainless steel filaments in a composite with other flexible materials.

Overall measurements are 13 feet long and 7 feet in diameter.

Entrance is through a shelter-airlock "access door" which helps assure a constant temperature and life supporting environment within.

A prime advantage of the inflatable STEM (for Stay Time Extension Module) concept, according to Goodyear Aerospace, is that it could be transported to the lunar surface as a small package and then be inflated to provide a habitable shelter.

Its outer wall makes it highly resistant to meteoroids, thermal radiation and temperature extremes likely to be faced in the hostile environment of the moon.

Computers Pick Ship's Courses

Special to the Progress Section

There was a time when sea captains looked at the sky, held a moistened finger to the air, then charted a course and set sail.

They took their chances against the unknown weather and seas.

No so anymore. Today's professional skippers rely on the most up-to-date weather data and many now depend on a computer to aid them in keeping abreast of the weather and plotting their courses.

To help merchant ships across the oceans through areas of best weather, Pacific Weather Analysis Corporation uses a computing system which keeps track of the rapidly changing ocean weather and as many as 300 moving ships at a time.

By studying ocean weather maps and the location of each ship, meteorologists at Pacific Weather Analysis can advise captains of the most favorable courses to steer.

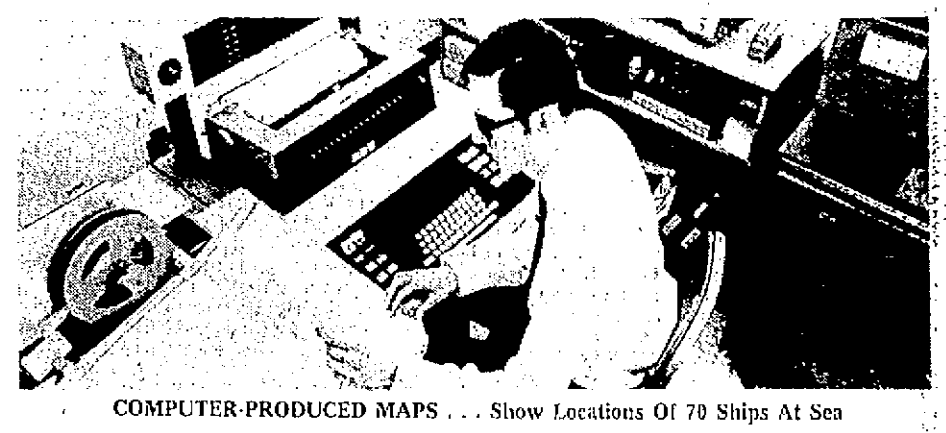

Each ship receives advice periodically by radio.

"BY RECOMMENDING initial courses and en route course changes that offer the best winds and seas, we can reduce a vessel's ocean crossing time by 12 to 24 hours," said Bill Dupin, Pacific Weather Analysis vice president.

"As we study the weather ahead of the ship, we can develop very minor course changes that will help the captain avoid adverse conditions and ensure the safety of his ship cargo, and crew."

Frequently, a course change of just a couple of degrees will significantly affect a ship's total voyage and arrival time, he added.

Captains also rely on information provided by Pacific Weather Analysis to determine how best to stow and lash down their cargoes in preparing for the weather ahead.

'Temporary' Employe Rounds Out 39 Years

PALA HOUSE . . . Longtime Landmark

In July, 1930, young Cliff Cailland, San Pedro-born and Long Beach-raised, went to work on Signal Hill as a two-week summer replacement clerk in the oil business.

After 30 years he's still there.

Despite a half-dozen status changes, Cailland, now 59 and office manager of the Macmillan Ring Free Oil Refinery, still is listed on the company rolls as a temporary employe.

"It has become a standing joke," says modest executive whose own office is on the second floor of a once-elaborate, three-story home on top of the "Hill."

This is The Pala House, built in 1914 by a retired sea captain who also constructed a 20-foot "widow's walk" just adjoining Cailland's present office.

From here, at a 360-foot elevation, one has a view of more than 40 miles of Pacific coastline, the City of Long Beach and its new status symbol, the Queen Mary, nestled below.

PALA House was purchased from the Pala family years ago by Shell Oil, but for the last seven has been leased by Macmillan for offices.

Cailland's other office is in the Macmillan Ring-Free Refinery, a quarter-mile down the hill.

Built in 1923, this was the first refinery on Signal Hill. Though many additions and improvements have been made, many original building features remain.

Still going strong, the refinery also rates landmark status harking to the boisterous 1920s and early 1930s, when "The Hill" was a veritable forest of tall wooden derricks — some so close together that the legs overlapped.

Cailland has packed in a lot of oil industry savvy into 39 years, despite that "temporary status."

Posts have included production clerk, yield clerk, then six years heading the payroll department in Macmillan's Los Angeles office.

This was followed by post-War II work computing Government asphalt bids for huge construction (and reconstruction) airfield and road projects in the South Pacific and Japan.

CAILLAND is a past president, Long Beach Chapter, and is completing a two-year term as assistant area director of the Administrative Management Society, an international organization.

He has been nominated to its national committee.

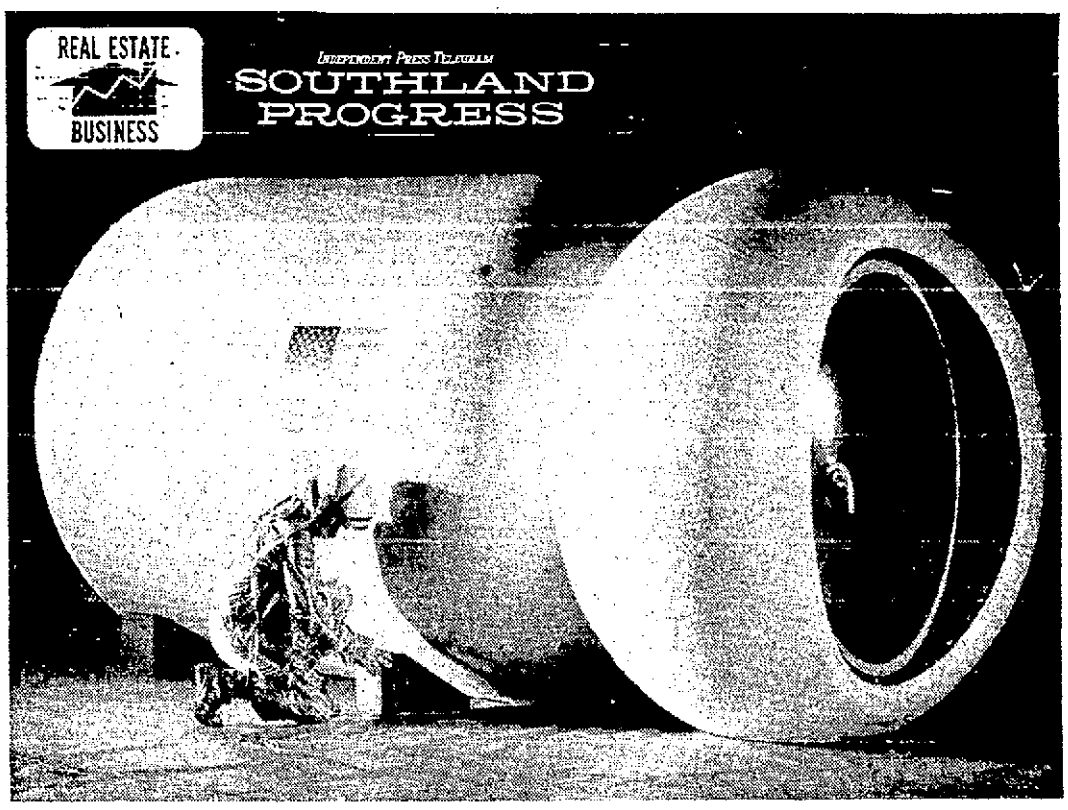

He's proud of another extra-curricular chore. When students want to write essays about Signal Hill, their first thought is to call the Macmillan Refinery.

The calls are habitually routed on to Cliff Cailland. Sometimes he's stumped for answers, but not too often.

"Whatever it is," he says, "we try to be helpful. That's why we are here."

West Orange Co. Realtors Find Business Booming

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Business Editor

Business continues to show a healthy increase insofar as resale of real property is concerned, according to Gene Flecky, chairman of the multiple listing committee of the West Orange County Board of Realtors.

Releasing figures for the first six months of this year, Flecky revealed there have been 1307 sales this year through the board, totalling $32,035,544, which favorably compares with last year's total of 1,281 sales, totalling $30,349,692.

The average dwelling sold for $24,985 this year as compared to $23,614 for the first six months of last year.

"While it is obvious the tight money situation has made it more expensive to finance property, it is also obvious the demand for resale homes continues high and will doubtlessly reflect gains through the rest of the year," he said. "Realtors take special courses in financing and spare no efforts to obtain the best possible terms for home buyers. Also, "the West Orange County Board of Realtors enjoys reciprocal listing service with such nearby boards as Anaheim, Buena Park, Fullerton, Huntington Beach-Fountain Valley, Long Beach, Newport Harbor-Costa Mesa, and the Santa Ana-Orange-Tustin.

"This means members of the West Orange County Board can service listings in these areas as well as in the four communities directly within the jurisdiction of the Board, which include Garden Grove, Los Alamitos, Stanton and Westminster," Flecky said.

CONSUMER PRICES IN THE Los Angeles-Long Beach Metropolitan Area increased 3.0 per cent during the first six months of 1969, according to Suzanne Sadowsky, chief of the Southern California office, U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

It was the largest increase recorded during the first six months of any year since 1951. A 0.8 per cent price rise during June pushed the area's "All Items Consumer Price Index" to a record high of 127.9 (1957-59-100), 4.9 per cent above the level recorded one year ago.

About 75 per cent of the over-the-month increase was attributable to higher transportation and food costs, although all major categories of consumer spending were up.

A 2.8 per cent increase in transportation costs during the month reflected primarily the termination of May's gasoline price wars and a one-cent increase in the state gasoline tax which was levied June 1.

Plane, train, and bus fares were up while used car prices were reported down during the month.

FOOD PRICES CONTINUED to climb in June at a monthly rate substantially greater than any reported so far this year.

The food index rose 1.2 per cent during the month and was 4.9 per cent above the year ago level. Prices of meats, poultry and fish which have been rising steadily since last November registered a severe 5.7 per cent increase in June — the highest month-to-month price rise since September 1947 — and were 12.8 per cent higher than June of last year.

Housing costs rose 0.2 per cent in June to a level 6.6 per cent above that reported one year ago.

Higher mortgage interest rates contributed substantially to a 0.1 per cent increase in homeownership costs. A decline in other costs associated with homeownership were somewhat offsetting.

Homeownership costs were reported 9.2 per cent higher than their June 1968 level. Furnishings and operation rose 0.7 per cent. Up during the month were charges for paper napkins, sheets, laundry services and moving fees. Fuel and utility costs were determined unchanged in June.

STATISTICS COMPILED BY THE Economic Research Department of Security Pacific National Bank reflect particularly strong 1968-69 gains for Southern California in spending, business loans, total construction, jobs, homebuilding and department store sales.

Reported was an overall advance of 12 per cent in business activity, based on comparable first-half averages for this year and last.

Activity index averages are up 27 per cent in bank debits, 21 per cent in business loans, 20 per cent in total construction, 18 per cent in job advertisements, 15 per cent in homebuilding and 13.5 per cent in department store sales.

Increases of 9 to 11 per cent have been calculated for demand deposits, retail sales, building permits and real estate loan volume, the bank researchers learned.

THE "CAGE," A MAJOR WALL STREET back-office operation which has stubbornly resisted automation in the past, has for the first time yielded to the computer.

This was demonstrated at a New York press conference last week by Goodbody & Co., one of the nation's largest securities brokerage firms.

Simultaneously, the formation was announced of Goodbody Systems, Inc., a new computer service organization for the securities industry owned jointly by Goodbody & Co. and a New York based computer consultant company which has worked with Goodbody for two years in the creation of this Cage project.

Goodbody expects the new automated system, called "AutoCage," to go far toward reducing the problem of "fails" — the inability to deliver certificates on time.

Following nearly two years of preparation and testing, Goodbody began using the system last month. When fully installed, by autumn, it will be the first completely automated securities clearance system on Wall Street.

The Cage is a focal area in any brokerage firm, for it is there that securities are received or dispatched. Keeping close track of a large number of valuable certificates and making the many entries necessary is a complex procedure which calls for constant checking and re-checking.

By its nature, the Cage has been a major contributor to the clerical logjams which occur on Wall Street during periods of heavy trading.

So important is the potential seen in the new system that the decision was made to offer it, on a commercial basis, to other brokerage firms.

FACILITY TO OPEN

New California Convalescent Hospital-Long Beach, 455 Columbia St., will hold public opening from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 17. Named administrator was Mrs. Jacqueline Thearle, R.N. NOW THAT COLOR IS BEING used as extensively on the outside of the house as on the inside, a homeowner may be revealing more about himself to his neighbors than he realizes.

Psychologists say that colors not only influence moods, but often reflect the personality of the user.

Accordingly, if a homeowner wants his house to connote friendliness, he might be wise to choose a green shade, with perhaps a yellow trim for confidence.

To the psychologist's eye, blue doesn't necessarily mean sadness. Among other things, it shows tenderness. Brown connotes fellowship; red, excitement; violet, enchantment; red-orange, strength; and pink, intimate.

Well, now, you've read it. You don't have to accept it!

TRADE TIPS ON THE WORLD MARKET

By REVAN KOMAROFF

When in Rome, do as the Romans.

I was struck with this profundity on my recent travels abroad. I found the viability of this classical aphorism is being field tested by American manufacturers as they step up penetration of world markets.

Moving rapidly from an expert-oriented marketing strategy to one based increasingly on local manufacture, American producers are making a strong bid to achieve a non-American image in the world marketplace.

Though superior technology has been a decided plus for the overseas American marketing manager, it has not been enough to override strong national bias among OEMs (original equipment manufacturers) in the host country. This has proved especially true among the Japanese who insist on a piece of the action.

A MORE formidable obstacle in Europe, according to some experts, is the trend toward multi-national programs which may tend strongly toward national suppliers. The idea is to have such an international company so that there are no borders, no national lines.

We can't compete locally if we have the label of an American company.

We can either be an American company overseas, or an international company. The latter is the key.

The move, therefore, on the part of many U.S. companies is to move multi-nationally.

The vendor user interface which has complicated the lives of marketing moguls in this country has become an important factor in marketing psychology abroad.

IN MOST cases, the customer prefers to deal with sales and marketing people of his own nationality.

There is a mixture of nationalism and a very real problem of language compatibility, particularly when you get into advanced technical areas where translation of technical terms can be very difficult and possibly misleading.

As for whipping together a local marketing team, it is much more difficult to build this kind of team on a multi-national environment. You don't always find it, so it must be developed:

Count on the administrative and management talent of the nationals overseas rather than try to establish an Americanized version of U.S. operations, and be prepared to fit the structure of operation to circumstances in the country being marketed.

Paperboard production went down 5.4 per cent.

West Orange Co. Realtors Find Business Booming

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Business Editor

Business continues to show a healthy increase insofar as resale of real property is concerned, according to Gene Flecky, chairman of the multiple listing committee of the West Orange County Board of Realtors.

Releasing figures for the first six months of this year, Flecky revealed there have been 1307 sales this year through the board, totalling $32,635,544, which favorably compares with last year's total of 1,281 sales, totalling $30,349,692.

The average dwelling sold for $24,985 this year as compared to $23,614 for the first six months of last year.

"While it is obvious the tight money situation has made it more expensive to finance property, it is also obvious the demand for resale homes continues high and will doubtlessly reflect gains through the rest of the year," he said. "Realtors take special courses in financing and spare no efforts to obtain the best possible terms for home buyers. Also, "the West Orange County Board of Realtors enjoys reciprocal listing service with such nearby boards as Anaheim, Buena Park, Fullerton, Huntington Beach-Fountain Valley, Long Beach, Newport Harbor-Costa Mesa, and the Santa Ana-Orange-Tustin.

"This means members of the West Orange County Board can service listings in these areas as well as in the four communities directly within the jurisdiction of the Board, which include Garden Grove, Los Alamitos, Stanton and Westminster," Flecky said.

CONSUMER PRICES IN THE Los Angeles-Long Beach Metropolitan Area increased 3.0 per cent during the first six months of 1969, according to Suzanne Sadowsky, chief of the Southern California office, U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

It was the largest increase recorded during the first six months of any year since 1951. A 0.8 per cent price rise during June pushed the area's "All Items Consumer Price Index" to a record high of 127.9 (1957-59-100), 4.9 per cent above the level recorded one year ago.

About 75 per cent of the over-the-month increase was attributable to higher transportation and food costs, although all major categories of consumer spending were up.

A 2.8 per cent increase in transportation costs during the month reflected primarily the termination of May's gasoline price wars and a one-cent increase in the state gasoline tax which was levied June 1.

Plane, train, and bus fares were up while used car prices were reported down during the month.

FOOD PRICES CONTINUED to climb in June at a monthly rate substantially greater than any reported so far this year.

The food index rose 1.2 per cent during the month and was 4.9 per cent above the year ago level. Prices of meats, poultry and fish which have been rising steadily since last November registered a severe 5.7 per cent increase in June — the highest month-to-month price rise since September 1947 — and were 12.8 per cent higher than June of last year.

Housing costs rose 0.2 per cent in June to a level 6.6 per cent above that reported one year ago.

Higher mortgage interest rates contributed substantially to a 0.1 per cent increase in homeownership costs. A decline in other costs associated with homeownership were somewhat offsetting.

Homeownership costs were reported 9.2 per cent higher than their June 1968 level. Furnishings and operation rose 0.7 per cent. Up during the month were charges for paper napkins, sheets, laundry services and moving fees. Fuel and utility costs were determined unchanged in June.

STATISTICS COMPILED BY THE Economic Research Department of Security Pacific National Bank reflect particularly strong 1968-69 gains for Southern California in spending, business loans, total construction, jobs, homebuilding and department store sales.

Reported was an overall advance of 12 per cent in business activity, based on comparable first-half averages for this year and last.

Activity index averages are up 27 per cent in bank debits, 21 per cent in business loans, 20 per cent in total construction, 18 per cent in job advertisements, 15 per cent in homebuilding and 13.5 per cent in department store sales.

Increases of 9 to 11 per cent have been calculated for demand deposits, retail sales, building permits and real estate loan volume, the bank researchers learned.

THE "CAGE," A MAJOR WALL STREET back-office operation which has stubbornly resisted automation in the past, has for the first time yielded to the computer.

This was demonstrated at a New York press conference last week by Goodbody & Co., one of the nation's largest securities brokerage firms.

Simultaneously, the formation was announced of Goodbody Systems, Inc., a new computer service organization for the securities industry owned jointly by Goodbody & Co. and a New York based computer consultant company which has worked with Goodbody for two years in the creation of this Cage project.

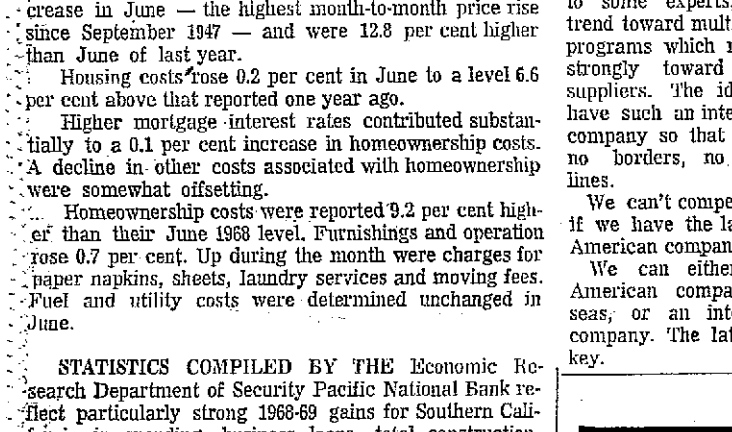

Goodbody expects the new automated system, called "AutoCage," to go far toward reducing the problem of "fails" — the inability to deliver certificates on time.

Following nearly two years of preparation and testing, Goodbody began using the system last month. When fully installed, by autumn, it will be the first completely automated securities clearance system on Wall Street.

The Cage is a focal area in any brokerage firm, for it is there that securities are received or dispatched. Keeping close track of a large number of valuable certificates and making the many entries necessary is a complex procedure which calls for constant checking and re-checking.

By its nature, the Cage has been a major contributor to the clerical logjams which occur on Wall Street during periods of heavy trading.

So important is the potential seen in the new system that the decision was made to offer it, on a commercial basis, to other brokerage firms.

TRADE TIPS ON THE WORLD MARKET

By REVAN KOMAROFF

When in Rome, do as the Romans.

I was struck with this profundity on my recent travels abroad. I found the viability of this classical aphorism is being field tested by American manufacturers as they step up penetration of world markets.

Moving rapidly from an expert-oriented marketing strategy to one based increasingly on local manufacture, American producers are making a strong bid to achieve a non-American image in the world marketplace.

Though superior technology has been a decided plus for the overseas American marketing manager, it has not been enough to override strong national bias among OEMs (original equipment manufacturers) in the host country. This has proved especially true among the Japanese who insist on a piece of the action.

A MORE formidable obstacle in Europe, according to some experts, is the trend toward multi-national programs which may tend strongly toward national suppliers. The idea is to have such an international company so that there are no borders, no national lines.

We can't compete locally if we have the label of an American company.

We can either be an American company overseas, or an international company. The latter is the key.

The move, therefore, on the part of many U.S. companies is to move multi-nationally.

The vendor user interface which has complicated the lives of marketing moguls in this country has become an important factor in marketing psychology abroad.

IN MOST cases, the customer prefers to deal with sales and marketing people of his own nationality.

There is a mixture of nationalism and a very real problem of language compatibility, particularly when you get into advanced technical areas where translation of technical terms can be very difficult and possibly misleading.

As for whipping together a local marketing team, it is much more difficult to build this kind of team on a multi-national environment. You don't always find it, so it must be developed.

Count on the administrative and management talent of the nationals overseas rather than try to establish an Americanized version of U.S. operations, and be prepared to fit the structure of operation to circumstances in the country being marketed.

If you homeowner may be revealing more about himself to his neighbors than he realizes.

Psychologists say that colors not only influence moods, but often reflect the personality of the user.

Accordingly, if a homeowner wants his house to connote friendliness, he might be wise to choose a green shade, with perhaps a yellow trim for confidence.

To the psychologist's eye, blue doesn't necessarily mean sadness. Among other things, it shows tenderness. Brown connotes fellowship; red, excitement; violet, enchantment; red-orange, strength; and pink, intimate.

Well, now, you've read it. You don't have to accept it!

Early Car Model Change Is Noted

This week's Index slipped 0.1 per cent below last week's figures as all but two of the components registered losses.

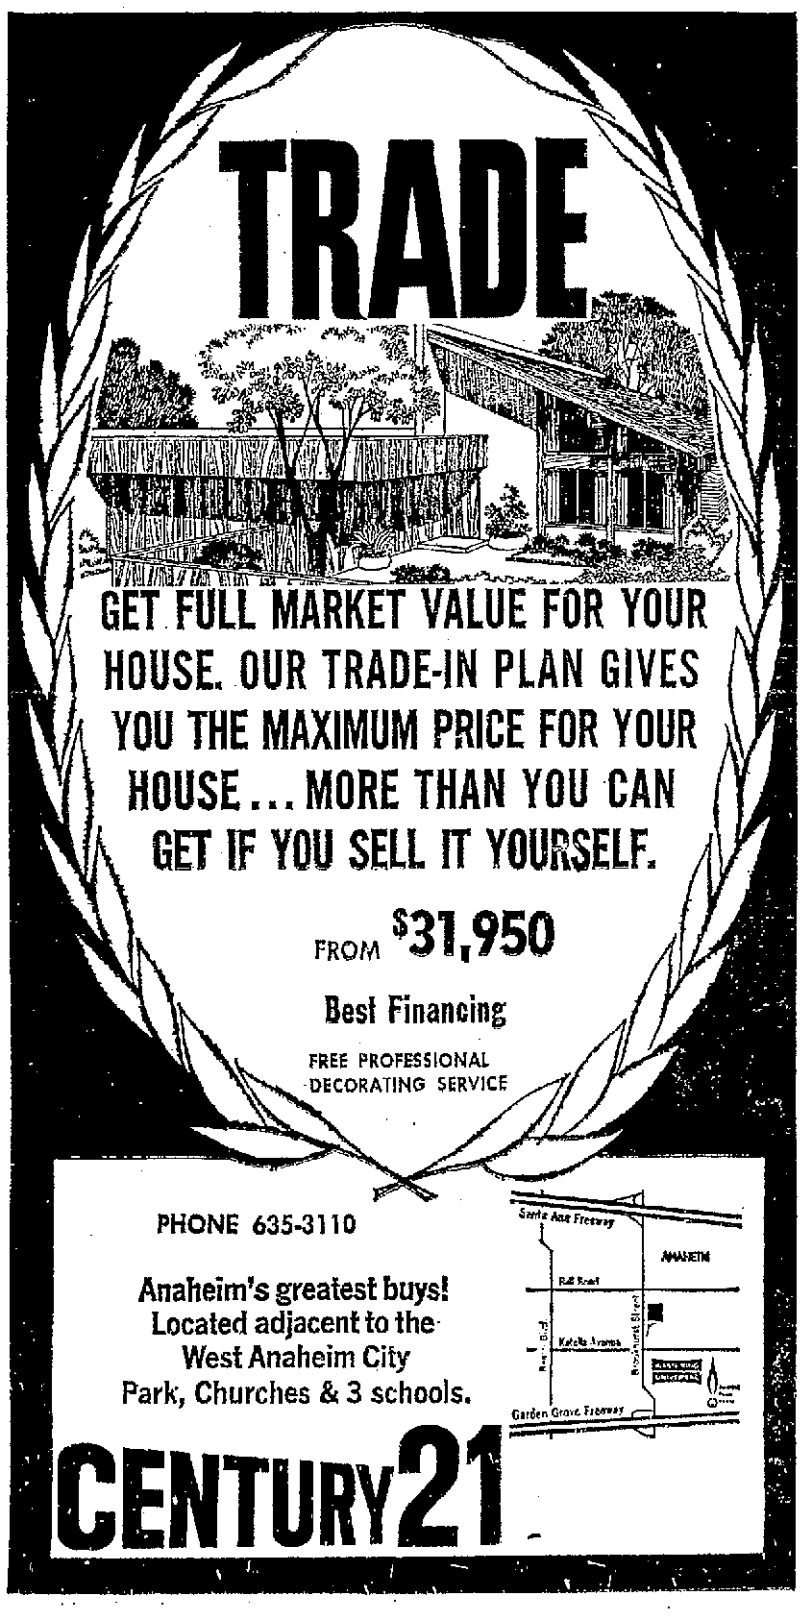

Auto production lagged 13.6 per cent below a week ago. An early model changeover pulled output 22.6 per cent below a year ago level. Some 1970 models are scheduled for production by the end of the month.

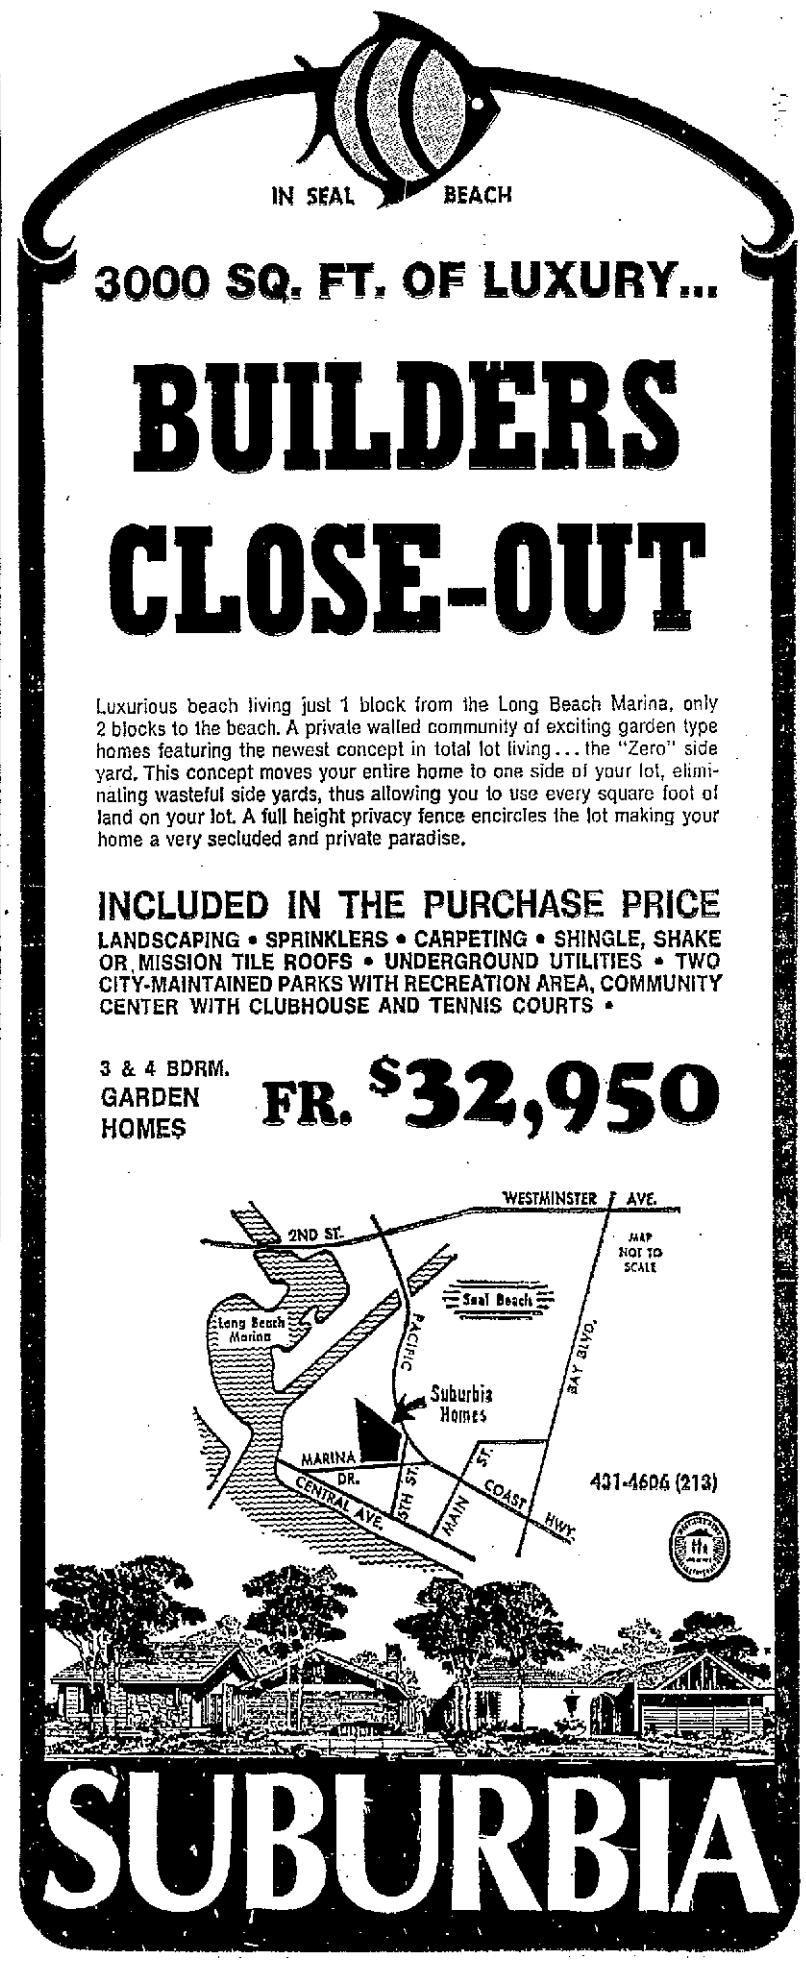

Steel output gained 3.3 per cent. Future orders began to slow down slightly, while third quarter shipments are slated to be record breaking.

Crude oil refinery runs were down 0.2 per cent, while electric power output rose 1.8 per cent.

The surface transportation components fell in the current week. Losses in coal output; metal ores; forest products and grain production pulled all other carloadings 21.0 per cent below last week. Intercity truck tonnage slipped 1.3 per cent and miscellaneous carloadings dropped 0.1 per cent.

Penney's New Stonewood Center Store Opened

Penney's last week opened the doors of its new department store at the Stonewood Shopping Center, Downey, following ribbon-cutting ceremonies.

At 198,840 square feet, the new facility is nearly four and one-half times larger than the company's original Stonewood store just down the shopping center's mall from the new location.

The older store, which was opened in October, 1958, was closed July 25, so personnel and merchandise could be shifted to the new site.

MANAGER Boyd E.Stevenson, who has directed the operation of the older store since 1966, acted as master of ceremonies.

Stevenson commented: "I am very proud of this new store and so pleased that we can offer our customers greatly expanded services and merchandise assortments. Those who have known Penney's as a soft-goods store and the place to get work clothes and ready-to-wear garments," he continued, "will witness the expansion of traditional lines of clothing and the addition of completely new 'hard lines,' including major appliances, color television, hardware, furniture, sporting goods, fine jewelry, and a fully-equipped automobile service center."

WITH 12 service bays for complete front-to-rear repairs, the center will display a complete line of Penney's own private-brand tires, batteries, and accessories.

Located at the northwest end of the Stonewood Mall at the corner of Lakewood and Firestone Boulevards, Penney's newest store is a two-story structure with both street and below street level floors.

New services to be offered at Penney's include a beauty salon, portrait studio and a coffee shop.

Consumers Provided Route for Appeal on Poor Credit

Any consumer with credit difficulty who after visiting the local credit bureau still feels aggrieved now can request a review by a special supervisory committee established by the Associated Credit Bureaus of California.

According to B.L. Gibbs, secretary-manager of the Long Beach Credit Association, this action has been taken by the state bureau group to guarantee a helpful and impartial attitude on the part of bureaus and to insure fair credit reporting.

"Although credit bureaus do not recommend either approval or rejection of credit" Gibbs said, "they keenly feel the responsibility to be sure that a consumer's credit record is reported accurately. When items in the report are disputed, they will be so reported and credit bureaus invite the individual to file a brief explanation of the matter to be included in the record."

ASSOCIATED Credit Bureaus, Inc., the national trade association, has implemented national policies for consumer protection along similar lines.

Gibbs said the 125 credit bureau members of the state association have pledged cooperation and that the information accumulated as a result of the consumer affairs program would be made available to the Special Task Force on Credit and Personnel Reporting appointed recently by Governor Ronald Reagan.

GIBBS emphasized that the first step to be taken by a person who feels that his credit report does not reflect his true standing should visit the local credit bureau for an interview and discussion of the report.

Gibbs said persons dissatisfied with the interview at the local credit bureau may write to the Consumer Affairs Committee, Associated Credit Bureaus, P.O. Box 11521, Palo Alto, California 94306, or request the local credit bureau to forward the case for review by the committee who will communicate the results of the review to the person and to the Credit Bureau.

Good Selection Found at College Park -- Seal Beach

College Park in North Seal Beach offers a selection of seven models in the medium price range which provide the homebuyer with an unusual selection of luxury features.

Included in the basic home price at College Park are items such as walk-in pantry, imported Italian marble flooring, crystal chandeliers, hardwood parquet floors, panelling in family room, and luxurious walls and fireplaces of natural stonework.

The construction in the homes features genuine lath and plaster throughout the entire home, custom cabinetry, beamed cathedral ceilings, and generous use of stone and masonry trim on exteriors.

Price Increase

Good Selection Found at College Park—Seal Beach

College Park in North Seal Beach offers a selection of seven models in the medium price range which provide the homebuyer with an unusual selection of luxury features.

Included in the basic home price at College Park are items such as walk-in pantry, imported Italian marble flooring, crystal chandeliers, hardwood parquet floors, panelling in family room, and luxurious walls and fireplaces of natural stonework.

The construction in the homes features genuine lath and plaster throughout the entire home, custom cabinetry, beamed cathedral ceilings, and generous use of stone and masonry trim on exteriors.

STANDARD features in every home by S&S Construction must include genuine lath and plaster, and this has never been abandoned in the construction of more than 14,000 homes in Southern California.

S&S President, Nathan Shapell, believes the extra durability and sound barrier provided by lath and plaster are absolutely essential to the building of a quality home.

Priced from $32,300, College Park homes range in size from three to six bedrooms with up to three bathrooms, three-car garage, formal dining room, and family room.

ALSO offered are bonus room plans which provide large recreation rooms, or the home darkroom or library which so many families find useful today.

Located immediately adjacent to the San Diego Freeway, College Park provides easy driving access to the major industrial and shopping centers of Southern California.

To visit College Park, take the Garden Grove Freeway to Valley View and turn North or take the Santa Ana Freeway to Valley View and turn South to the decorated models located just one mile North of the Garden Grove Freeway.

Century 21 Homes Call For Leisure

Minimum maintenance of a home, inside and out, even though its appearance suggest hours of care have been spent on it, is the secret according to Robert and Irving Solomon, developers of the new Century 21 home community, Anaheim.

Today's new home is a masterpiece of planning to accomplish this difficult feat.

Size of the property or yard to be cared for is one of the first considerations in a modern development.

Through the use of the lot line concept and professional landscaping together with pre-arranged use of available area, the feeling of spaciousness is preserved while the actual square footage which must be cared for is held to a minimum.

This saves countless hours, year after year of upkeep for the home owner.

PRIVACY is accentuated, added the Solomons, by locating the Century 21 homes at the lot line and fencing nearing the front and at the rear of the lot line with more space for garden courtyards, patios, pools and recreation areas.

Inside the Century 21 homes such features as self-cleaning range and oven, large double sliding aluminum windows and sliding glass doors and exclusive new "Futuristic" bath, all add to the care-free, minimum maintance living, stated the Solomons.

Century 21 was months in planning to incorporate revolutionary ideas which reflect a newer way of life.

It affords easy maintenance, time saving, and comfort features.

Homes are priced from $31,950 with VA, FHA, and conventional financing available.

Models are located on Brookhurst Street just south of Ball Road in Anaheim.

Sales Increase at Popular Yorktowne II in Westminster

Sales at Yorktowne II, have shown a steady increase in recent months, due in a major part to the "turn key" program in effect at the popular Larry Shields community in Westminster.

MIRRORED WARDROBE . . . At Yorktowne II

The "turn key" program, according to Frank McFarland, Sr., sales agent, assures buyers that the homes are not only ready for immediate occupancy, but are equipped with a number of needed items including drapes, carpeting and fencing, thereby effecting a substantial saving for a new homeowner.

Also included, he added, is a free decorator service.

PRICED from $27,500, the spacious homes may be purchased under a number of financing programs, including FHA, VA and conventional. Price range and financing have also been a big contributing factor in the continuing sales success, McFarland said.

The homes are available in a number of attractive one and two-story stylings, with floor plans providing three or four bedrooms and two baths, together with numerous luxury features and design innovations, such as two-story living rooms, with sloping ceilings and second floor galleries overlooking the living room.

THE popular patio kitchen' has large sliding pass-through windows connecting the kitchen with the built-in hospitality bar on the patio for indoor-outdoor entertaining.

The adjacent family room, with its sliding glass doors leading to the patio, enables homeowners to utilize the entire area as a large entertainment center for informal or formal gatherings.

Model homes may be reached from the San Diego Freeway by driving north on Brookhurst to Edinger, left on Edinger to Bushard and then right on Bushard to the sales office.

Sales Increase at Popular Yorktowne II in Westminster

Sales at Yorktowne II, have shown a steady increase in recent months, due in a major part to the "turn key" program in effect at the popular Larry Shields community in Westminster.

MIRRORED WARDROBE . . . At Yorktowne II

The "turn key" program, according to Frank McFarland Sr., sales agent, assures buyers that the homes are not only ready for immediate occupancy, but are equipped with a number of needed items including drapes, carpeting and fencing, thereby effecting a substantial saving for a new homeowner.

Also included, he added, is a free decorator service.

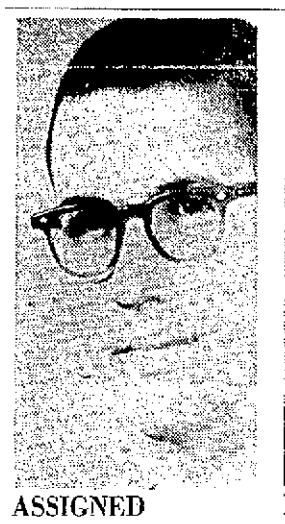

PRICED from $27,500, the spacious homes may be purchased under a number of financing programs, including FHA, VA and conventional. Price range and financing have also been a big contributing factor in the continuing sales success, McFarland said.

The homes are available in a number of attractive one and two-story stylings, with floor plans providing three or four bedrooms and two baths, together with numerous luxury features and design innovations, such as two-story living rooms, with sloping ceilings and second floor galleries overlooking the living room.

THE popular patio kitchen' has large sliding pass-through windows connecting the kitchen with the built-in hospitality bar on the patio for indoor-outdoor entertaining.

The adjacent family room, with its sliding glass doors leading to the patio, enables homeowners to utilize the entire area as a large entertainment center for informal or formal gatherings.

Model homes may be reached from the San Diego Freeway by driving north on Brookhurst to Edinger, left on Edinger to Bushard and then right on Bushard to the sales office.

WORLD OF WHEELS

NEW YORK (UPI) — In Detroit, where a car producer grosses about $340 million each time it boosts sales 1 per cent, Ford's new Maverick compact is being hailed as a marketing miracle.

On Wall Street, where analysts take hourly temperature checks on the $85 billion industry, there is general belief that Maverick's record three-month sales and continued import pressures finally have forced Detroit into an all-out battle for the small car market.

"They can't drag their feet any longer now that they know the volume is there for the taking," said Norman Greenberg, Burnham and Co. in response to a UPI survey.

"With demographics showing 800,000 prospects coming into the 24-25 age bracket annually by the early 1970's, Detroit would be remiss if it did not change its marketing concepts," said Monte Cordon of Bache and Co.

"A definite trend toward new marketing concepts centered on the small car market," said Jay Goldsmith of H. Hentz & Co.

"Maybe so," said David Healy of Argus Research Corp., "but I think the inflationary squeeze is doing it. As soon as Joe's paycheck starts buying more he'll be back looking at the big ones with lots of chrome and tinted glass."

ASKED IF HE ENVISIONED substantial production switches into the small car field, John Naughton, general manager of the Ford Division, said: "It's too early to tell, but we're highly pleased with Maverick."

On April 17, Maverick roared out of the Midwest, all six cylinders firing and sporting a $1,995 badge, to do battle with the foreign "black hats" which have been taking about 10 per cent of the market, or around 1 million cars per year.

Ford's "import killer" missed that target. But it hit a bigger one. Despite a late first half slump in Volkswagen's 1969 sales, imports grabbed 11 per cent of the new car market.

Toyota picked up the slack. In its first three months, Maverick did fuel an explosion in domestic compact sales, taking more than 11 per cent of the total market in May and June.

When import and compact sales for those months are lumped they come to an astounding 23 per cent of the market, six points better than the overall 1968 mark.

OVERALL DOMESTIC NEW CAR sales in the July 11-20 period slumped 5 per cent from the same 1968 period. Thanks to Maverick, Ford's market penetration hit a record 30.6 per cent, 6.4 per cent better than last year's overall figure.

Ford dealers around the United States are prospering.

"We sell all we get," said Ivan Born, vice president-secretary of Beaudry Ford, Atlanta.

"Demand is exceeding supply," said S & C Ford of San Francisco.

"We can't keep Maverick in stock," said John Mucha, sales manager of Litsinger Ford, Chicago.

Paradise Manor Offers Low Down

Only $500 down, 7½ per cent interest and with no points, to move into Paradise Manor's three bedroom, one-and-a-half bath homes because closing costs and impounds are included in the financeng, according to a spokesman for the Trans-Robles Corp., builders and developers of the family-oriented community.

Even 7¼ per cent interest is available with 10 per cent down.

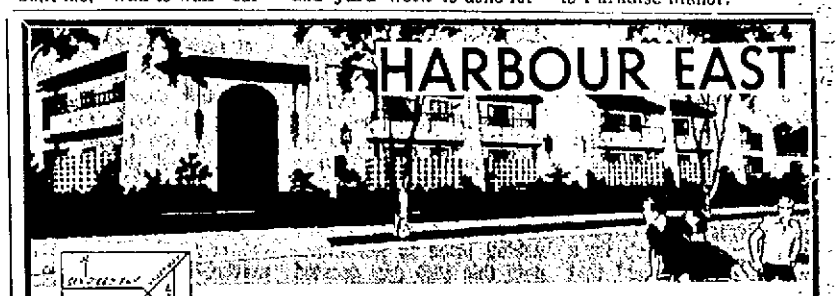

"That is quite a bargain in this day and age," continued the building executive, "when you consider $500 is usually the amount of money asked by builders as "good faith" money from potential homebuyers and the buyer still has at least several hundred dollars more to pay before buying a house. "But that just doesn't apply to Paradise Manor. $500 is the total down. Period. And the interest rates are at least 1 per cent below comparable other home developments."

PRICED from $20,995 to a high of $26,950, Paradise Manor offers 1,600 square feet of floor area with a finished 420 square foot-bonus room.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Mortgage Interest Rates Appear -- Then Disappear

By DON CAMPBELL

The magician's old piece of chatter: "Now you see it . . . "now you don't!" not only has reference these days to the deck of cards that disappears from his hand, but also to mortgage interest rates in the housing market.

You plan on buying a house and paying a 7 per cent interest rate on it, and then turn your back for a minute only to find that this figure has, in the meantime, disappeared and has been replaced with a 7½ or an 8 per cent rate.

And, all too often, even this stated interest rate is only "for openers."

MR. CAMPBELL:

We have been trying to sell our three-bedroom house now for some time but, as you know, these high interest rates are making it harder and harder to find a buyer who can qualify with the mortgage company.

Finally, by knocking our price down to $15,000, which is just about what we have in the house, we were lucky enough to find a buyer who did qualify and who has $2,000 for a down payment.

Just as we thought the whole deal was sewed up, our real estate broker tells us that we'll have to "give up five points" in order for the mortgage to go through. I don't understand what he's talking about, and I sure don't understand why these "five points" have to be paid by me, instead of the buyer." G.G.

ANSWER: Because, unfortunately, it's the name of the game—and a rather cruel game it is, too.

When your broker is talking about "points" he is talking about the number of percentage points under the face value of the mortgage that the lender is prepared to write for your buyer.

The whole thing had its start when Congress set up the FHA and VA home loan programs and established maximum interest rates that were slightly under the prevailing interest rates for conventional mortgages.

The theory was that lenders should be willing to accept a slightly lower yield on these mortgages since they were guaranteed against loss by the federal government.

THIS WAS well and good until conventional interest rates kept steadily marching upward while the FHA and VA rates remained fixed.

Eventually, riskless or not, lenders began refusing FHA and VA loans without a "sweetener"—which the government grudgingly permitted them to impose.

This sweetener is simply a device to bring the effective interest rate on FHA and VA loans up to the yield realizable from a conventional mortgage.

In this particular case it means that the mortgage lender—in discounting the deal five points—is actually going to advance only $12,350 in cash on your buyer's $13,000 mortgage but, over the life of the mortgage, he will repay the $13,000 face value, plus interest.

This means that you, as the seller, must scale your asking price to accommodate this $650 gap created by this discounting.

IT'S A cheap subterfuge that really has no purpose except to make true interest rates look lower than they are.

It creates a lot of hardship—and hard feelings—all the way around, but we seem to be stuck with it as long as the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development insists on keeping the FHA rates pegged well under comparable rates in the conventional mortgage market—although he was given congressional authority last year to set them at truly realistic levels.

Pet Food Boom

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Sales of pet foods in retail stores during 1968 reached $890 million, a gain of 10 per cent over 1967, reports Harold Neigh, extension consumer economics specialist at the Pennsylvania State University.

Neigh attributed the rise to an increasing number of pets and greater use of commercial pet foods. He also said more people are buying convenience foods for their pets, including easily opened packages and semi-moist foods which need no refrigeration.

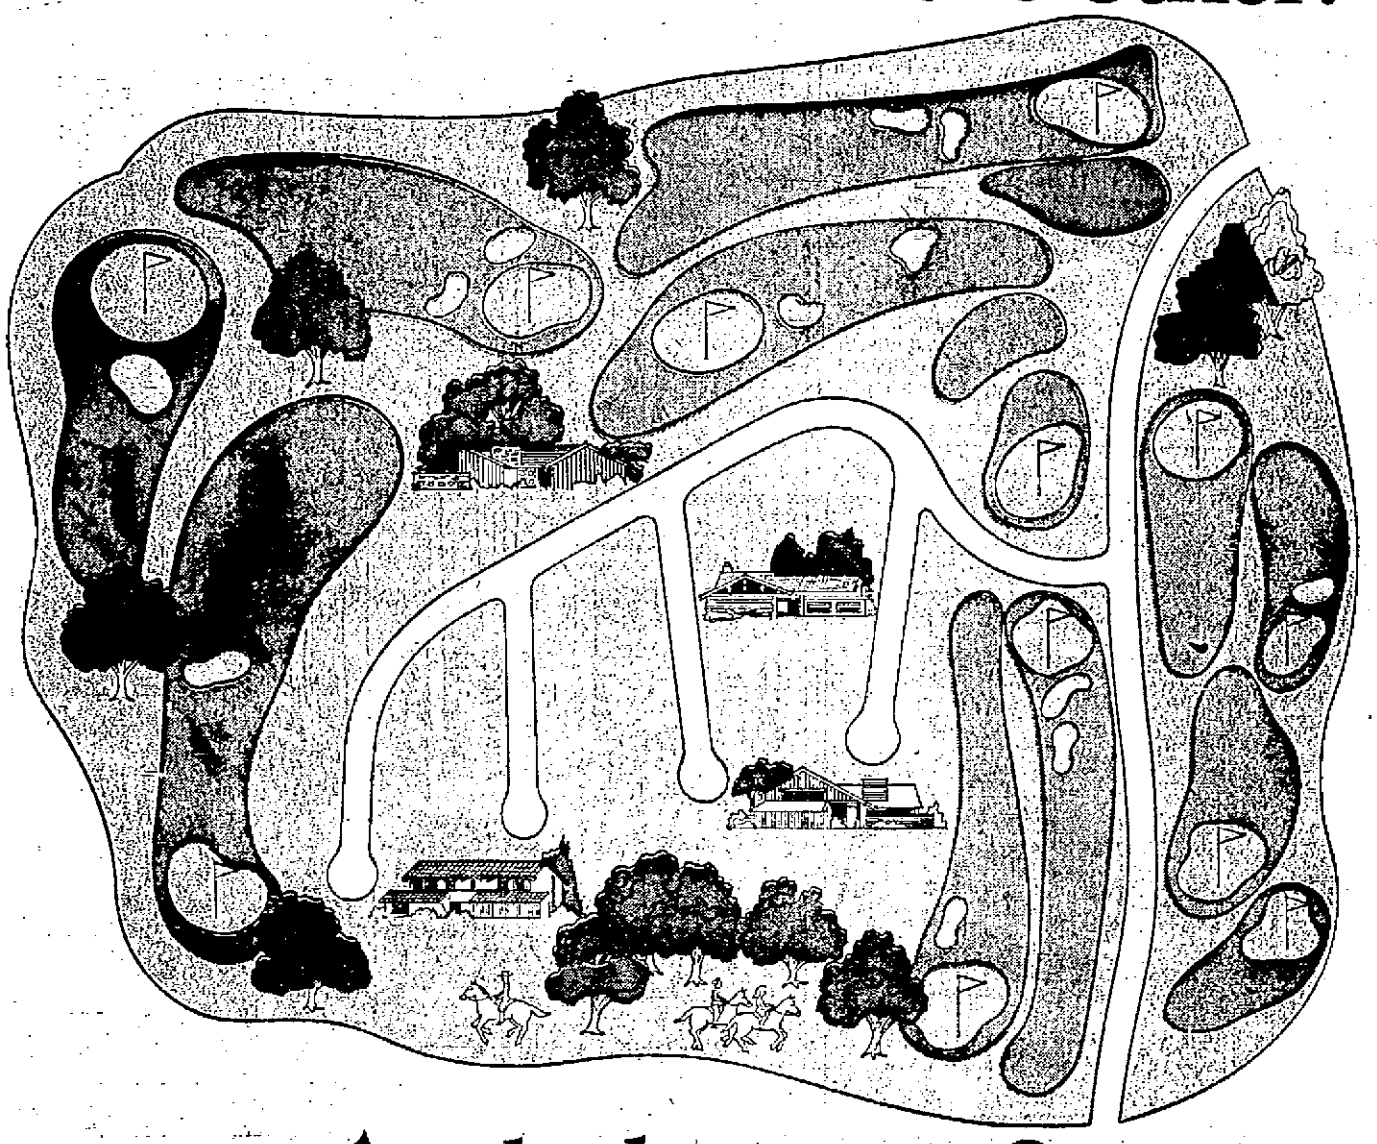

NEW POSTS FOR TWO

Richard Rowland (right), of Long Beach, former assistant manager of Security Pacific National Bank's San Pedro branch, is appointed manager of Hill and Atlantic branch in Long Beach, succeeding Albert Schinsky (left), now manager of Norwalk branch.

What's brand new, has a golf course on three sides and bridle trails on the other?

And who cares?

Last things first! You do if you're looking for a new home or a nice lot to build on.

You see, all the green stuff is the only completely private country club on the Hill (Peninsula to you flatlanders). If you like golf and you want to join — and they'll take you — it can be pretty nice having it right outside your front door. If you could care less about golf, it's still good to look at and it has a way of increasing the value of your property. I suppose there are some people in Bel Air who've never hit a golf ball.

What about the climate? Bad news. You'll have to live without the bracing wintry blasts that roar up the hills of PVE and PVP and the melancholy sound of foghorns that are heard along the south side by residents from Margate to Marineland. The days are sunnier — the evenings balmier. You can actually enjoy the outdoor living we Californians are supposed to enjoy.

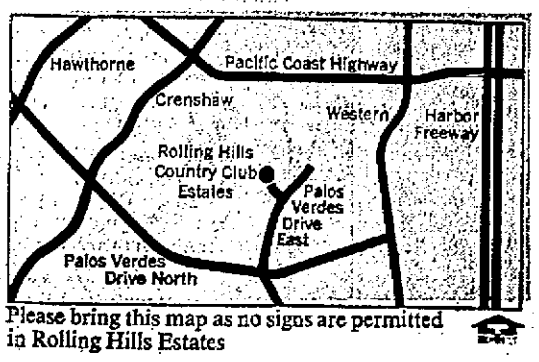

Schools? They're important. You want to be in the PV School District. You are.

The homes are beautifully built and they're priced like it — $69,000 to $89,000 — with choice of 3 to 6 bedrooms and 2230 to 3500 square feet of living space.

The lots are golf course view, city view, equestrian, and otherwise, and priced from $29,000 to $35,000.

If all this sounds good enough to look into, you might do it soon. There are only 68 homesites in the development.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Mortgage Interest Rates Appear -- Then Disappear

By DON CAMPBELL

The magician's old piece of chatter: "Now you see it . . . "now you don't!" not only has reference these days to the deck of cards that disappears from his hand, but also to mortgage interest rates in the housing market.

You plan on buying a house and paying a 7 per cent interest rate on it, and then turn your back for a minute only to find that this figure has, in the meantime, disappeared and has been replaced with a 7½ or an 8 per cent rate.

And, all too often, even this stated interest rate is only "for openers."

MR. CAMPBELL:

We have been trying to sell our three-bedroom house now for some time but, as you know, these high interest rates are making it harder and harder to find a buyer who can qualify with the mortgage company.

Finally, by knocking our price down to $15,000, which is just about what we have in the house, we were lucky enough to find a buyer who did qualify and who has $2,000 for a down payment.

Just as we thought the whole deal was sewed up, our real estate broker tells us that we'll have to "give up five points" in order for the mortgage to go through. I don't understand what he's talking about, and I sure don't understand why these "five points" have to be paid by me, instead of the buyer." G.G.

ANSWER: Because, unfortunately, it's the name of the game—and a rather cruel game it is, too.

When your broker is talking about "points" he is talking about the number of percentage points under the face value of the mortgage that the lender is prepared to write for your buyer.

The whole thing had its start when Congress set up the FHA and VA home loan programs and established maximum interest rates that were slightly under the prevailing interest rates for conventional mortgages.

The theory was that lenders should be willing to accept a slightly lower yield on these mortgages since they were guaranteed against loss by the federal govesnment.

THIS WAS well and good until conventional interest rates kept steadily marching upward while the FHA and VA rates remained fixed.

Eventually, riskless or not, lenders began refusing FHA and VA loans without a "sweetener"—which the government grudgingly permitted them to impose.

This sweetener is simply a device to bring the effective interest rate on FHA and VA loans up to the yield realizable from a conventional mortgage.

In this particular case it means that the mortgage lender—in discounting the deal five points—is actually going to advance only $12,350 in cash on your buyer's $13,000 mortgage but, over the life of the mortgage, he will repay the $13,000 face value, plus interest.

This means that you, as the seller, must scale your asking price to accommodate this $650 gap created by this discounting.

IT'S A cheap subterfuge that really has no purpose except to make true interest rates look lower than they are.

It creates a lot of hardship—and hard feelings—all the way around, but we seem to be stuck with it as long as the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development insists on keeping the FHA rates pegged well under comparable rates in the conventional mortgage market—although he was given congressional authority last year to set them at truly realistic levels.

A helping hand to heal hurt of unwed mother

By DIANNE SMITH

Janie's going to have a baby.

There's nothing unusual about this, except Janie's only 16 and she isn't married.

Janie is representative of the more than 200,000 teen-agers throughout the country who give birth out-of-wedlock each year. Of these, four out of five receive no services from public or private agencies until the time of the baby's delivery.

Another 60,000 are able to get some kind of care, with about 25,000 finding refuge in maternity homes. Janie is such a girl. She's one of 55 unwed mothers receiving counseling and pre-natal care at the Florence Crittenton Home in Los Angeles.

She arrives during her sixth month of pregnancy and will stay until about seven days after delivery.

Statistics show 1 of every 18 births in the United States is out of wedlock. In Los Angeles County this year, it is estimated that at least 5,000 unmarried teen-age girls will give birth to a child.

WHAT HAPPENS to these girls, to their families, to their babies? Between 30 and 40 per cent will keep the baby, which presents new problems. The rest will put their babies up for adoption. This compares to 15 years ago when it was rare for unwed mothers to keep their babies.

Either decision requires much counseling and guidance for the unwed mother — often the father — and her family. The shocked parents usually react with "where did I go wrong?" or "how could you do this to us?"

"We want the pregnancy to be a positive thing, not a frightening experience," explained Mrs. Marian Ovsey, supervising caseworker at the Crittenton Home.

"We don't try to talk the girl into giving up or keeping her baby. We just want her to arrive at a realistic plan." While not a licensed adoption agency, the Crittenton Home refers girls to several such agencies and lets her choose the one she wants.

"Most of the girls take responsibility for what they've done. They have a tremendous grasp of reality," Mrs. Ovsey added.

But, they consider the pregnancy a spontaneous, unplanned event, she pointed out.

The Crittenton Home in Los Angeles is one of forty-five across the country and one of three in California. There is one in San Francisco and one under construction in Orange County. It takes girls from every state, all ethnic, economic and religious backgrounds. Cost per month is $300.

Calvin Gentry: tall, husky, 18 years old. Quiet and much more inhibited than his prideful explosion of Afro hair might suggest. Has a high school diploma and often dreams about going to college to become a lawyer. Starts a new job Monday as a gas station attendant.

If you saw Calvin strolling down West 125th Street in his striped T-shirt and navy bell bottoms, you might think of him as Mr. Teenager, 1969.

But to social workers, Calvin and other boys like him have for many years borne another label: "Forgotten men."

Calvin is an unwed father.

The "forgotten man" tag stems from the fact that, until recently, social welfare agencies virtually ignored his existence in their concentration on the girl.

TO THEM and to the public, he was an irresponsible, unsympathetic, "good time Charlie" who blamed the girl for her condition and frequently walked out on her.

This stereotype began to dissolve in 1967 after Reuben Pannor and two assistants from Vista Del Mar child care service in Los Angeles published a hefty, 250-page report of a federally financed study they had made on 100 unwed fathers — most of them middle-class whites.

The report said, in effect, that the boys have just as many problems as the girls do.

Paean: How can I keep from singing?

With a wave of his baton for the opening notes of Richard Rodgers' "Victory at Sea," Elmer Bernstein will conduct the Long Beach Symphony Tuesday in its salute to the International Sea Festival.

This second free 1969 Starlight Serenade will begin at 8 p.m. in Recreation Park, Seventh Street and Park Avenue.

Drawing on the diverse talents of three artists — two veterans and one newcomer — the program promises to be one of the symphony's most joyous.

Bernstein, still in his 40s, has composed more than 70 motion picture scores; his latest music for the overnight classic "True Grit," starring John Wayne, Glen Campbell and Kim Darby will be on Tuesday's program, as will his "Hallelujah Trail."

Berstein also will conduct "Sinfonia India" by Chavez.

TO CLIMAX the evening, Bernstein has chosen "Concerto for 5-String Banjo and Orchestra" by Earl Robinson, also a motion picture composer of distinction who won an Oscar for "The House I Live In."

Soloist will be Mike De Temple, 21.

Robinson was commissioned by the Cultural Foundation of Boston to write the banjo concerto for its Wintefest 1967.

Said the Seattle-born composer, "As a young man attending vaudeville in the '20s, I got a kick out of Eddie Peabody and his brassy plectrum 4-string banjo. But it wasn't until the late '30s when I started

From Long Beach's Virginia Country Theater to one night stands with the Kids Next Door to a Las Vegas appearance with George Burns...

... Acting's a lark for Lisa

By SUSAN SOMERVILLE

CIGAR IN hand George Burns and Lisa dance and sing in a recent Chicago appearance.

Sometimes success comes through a tap on the shoulder. For Lisa Miller it was a tap of her toe.

"George Burns was performing at the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas two years ago, and his opening act was a group of teen-age singers, the Kids Next Door.

"I was a member of the group, and Mr. Burns used to show us dance steps before showtime. I was the only one who knew a time step," she explains, and thus began a friendship between the famed performer and Long Beach's kid next door.

When Lisa's mother, Mrs. Lee H. White, formerly of Long Beach, traveled to Las Vegas to catch her daughter's act, Burns asked permission for Lisa to work with him when openings occurred.

On the strength of his request, Lisa quit the Kids and came home to work on her own. Her mother insisted that she continue her education, so between acting school and tap dance lessons Lisa took classes at Pierce College and UCLA.

Burns kept his word. She is now working with him for an Aug. 21 opening in Las Vegas' Frontier Hotel, and has appeared with him previously on the Dean Martin, Bob Hope, and Joey Bishop television shows and at the Palmer House in Chicago.

ACTING STARTED as a lark for Lisa. In junior high she spent summers working with the Virginia Country Theater. While attending Polytechnic High School she sang in the chorus of several Long Beach Civic Light Opera productions and played Gloria in Community Playhouse's "Auntie Mame." Meanwhile she took voice lessons from Howard Hayes.

"A boy in Virginia Country Theater was in the Kids Next Door, an offshoot of the Young Americans. When they needed an alto he called me. I finished my finals at Long Beach City College and left three days later.

"I joined the group for a college tour of one night stands through 13 midwestern states. This is the side of show business most people don't think about."

WHILE WITH the Kids, Lisa played two weeks in Houston's Astrodome, appeared in Las Vegas with Jack Jones, did a TV special and cut records. "I was lucky that I was found so early. Education is still my primary goal right now. I'll seriously pursue a career after I graduate. I have lots to learn."

"I spent a lot of time looking for just the right dress for the Dean Martin Show. I finally decided on a black velvet with white ruffled collar and cuffs. When I arrived at the studio I found that no white could be worn for color TV. They tucked in all the ruffles and sewed flesh colored net on to keep them from creeping up. They did my make-up, and I looked like I had slanted eyes. For Bob Hope they tried to slim down my cheeks by contouring. I did my own make-up for Joey Bishop, and I looked like me."

Many people wonder what George Burns is like in real life. Lisa puts their minds at ease with her answer. "He is funnier off stage than on, and really keeps me on my toes.

"Mr. Burns took my mother, a friend of mine, and me out to dinner at Chasens for my 19th birthday. I knew that he would order me a cake, so I called and cancelled it and ordered him one. Mr. Burns knew that I would cancel it, so he ordered another one. That night we got three cakes, one for him and two for me. I fixed him at Easter though when I wrapped up a live rabbit for a present. Mr. Burns didn't lose his cool. He promptly fed the bunny a piece of lettuce from his salad."

GEORGE BURNS and Lisa are caught laughing off stage at one of his favorite jokes.

A smile opens doors the world around

A SMILE and the ability to say "thank you" in the language of the country you're visiting are as vital as a passport for the traveler who hopes to be made welcome believes Mrs. Dwight Bennett.

The Bennetts (he is president of Downtown Long Beach Lions Club) were among some 30 Long Beach area Lions who joined with 35,000 others from throughout the World for International Convention in Tokyo then headed for "Parts East" at convention close.

Among others meeting and touring were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Alford of the Belmont Shore Club and President and Mrs. Paul Souwards of the Lakewood Lions.

Vivid in Mrs. Bennett's memory of the five-week trip — in addition to the return of her smile — are a 300-mile boat trip from the beautiful city of Beppu down the inland sea to Kobe, Japan; Taiwan and the industriousness of its people; the unfriendly atmosphere both in Cambodia and Hong Kong despite the latter being a shopper's paradise; the gorgeous flora, fauna and people of Singapore; the jubilation of the people in Thailand as they watched the astronauts land on the moon.

LISA was in seclusion and unable to attend the party in her honor this week. Standing in for her were the flabbergasted Stan Thompsons who were showered with puppy-type gifts for their female Silky who was at home awaiting the imminent birth of her litter. Joining in the surprise shish-kabob festivities on the patio at the Lewis Hindley home in Lakewood were Messrs. and Mmes. Jack Harris, James Buckingham, Jerry Johnson, Stuart Monford and Dr. and Mrs. Ken Braman.

"NEVER thought I'd be sitting in front of the exquisite Taj Mahal . . . it balances out some of the filth and poverty we have been exposed to. India is not a country I wish to return to, but I'm glad I had the opportunity to do it once."

So reads the postcard received this week by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Boyd chronicling the adventures of daughter, Nancy Boyd Manahan, who is on a world tour with 30 teachers from National Education Association. A member of girls' physical education department at El Camino College, Mrs. Manahan also will visit Nairobi, Kenya, Addis Ababa, Africa, Ethiopia and Egypt before returning home via Greece and England.

A SELECT group of guests had the privilege of attending two "coming out" parties last week. Coinciding with the Assistance League Debutante Ball was delivery of a new Columbia sailboat to Capt. Tony Venne (USN, ret.). Undaunted by the duplication in date, Mrs. Venne merely picked up the phone, inviting their guests to detour enroute to the ball site to witness the christening of "Ole." Sailors in formal finery for a small part of the evening were Antonine Venne III and his bride, Marilyn, Paul Venne with Katherine Erb (one of the evening's debs), Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Trostle and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Lough.

TEXANS BELIEVE in doing things up big and that's the tradition the Davidson family is living up to with its 10th reunion beginning next Sunday in San Diego. Long Beach residents, Mr. and Mrs. Tory Davidson, will join more than 500 relatives from Texas and throughout California at the four-day get-together at the Hilton Inn.

Davidson is the youngest of four sons born to George and Molly Davidson in Oklahoma Territory. Their names: Okla, Homa, Terry and Tory. The elder Davidsons later moved to Texas.

Festivities will kick off with a poolside luau, followed with excursions to tourist sites, a formal dinner dance and annual breakfast at which family members select a spot in the western states for the coming year's reunion.

FABULOUS is the only word that aptly describes the trip in store for the William C. Price family. A big silver bird will take to Tahiti the Prices, daughter Kay Lynn, 14, son David, 11, son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Art Miller, and friends, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Whitmore.

There the group will rendezvous with Bill Price Jr., on completion of his two and a half year mission for the Latter-day Saints Church in the South Pacific. Bill will join the group on visits to the other Society Islands then on to New Zealand, Australia, Indonesia, Thailand, China and Japan before returning home to complete his senior year at Brigham Young University.

While in Tahiti and environs, the travelers will be guests in the homes of natives — friends made by young Bill during his stay there.

ACTING STARTED as a lark for Lisa. In junior high she spent summers working with the Virginia Country Theater. While attending Polytechnic High School she sang in the chorus of several Long Beach Civic Light Opera productions and played Gloria in Community Playhouse's "Auntie Mame." Meanwhile she took voice lessons from Howard Hayes.

"A boy in Virginia Country Theater was in the Kids Next Door, an offshoot of the Young Americans. When they needed an alto he called me. I finished my finals at Long Beach City College and left three days later.

"I joined the group for a college tour of one night stands through 13 midwestern states. This is the side of show business most people don't think about."

WHILE WITH the Kids, Lisa played two weeks in Houston's Astrodome, appeared in Las Vegas with Jack Jones, did a TV special and cut records. "I was lucky that I was found so early. Education is still my primary goal right now. I'll seriously pursue a career after I graduate. I have lots to learn."

"I spent a lot of time looking for just the right dress for the Dean Martin Show. I finally decided on a black velvet with white ruffled collar and cuffs. When I arrived at the studio I found that no white could be worn for color TV. They tucked in all the ruffles and sewed flesh colored net on to keep them from creeping up. They did my make-up, and I looked like I had slanted eyes. For Bob Hope they tried to slim down my cheeks by contouring. I did my own make-up for Joey Bishop, and I looked like me."

Many people wonder what George Burns is like in real life. Lisa puts their minds at ease with her answer. "He is funnier off stage than on, and really keeps me on my toes.

"Mr. Burns took my mother, a friend of mine, and me out to dinner at Chasens for my 19th birthday. I knew that he would order me a cake, so I called and cancelled it and ordered him one. Mr. Burns knew that I would cancel it, so he ordered another one. That night we got three cakes, one for him and two for me. I fixed him at Easter though when I wrapped up a live rabbit for a present. Mr. Burns didn't lose his cool. He promptly fed the bunny a piece of lettuce from his salad."

CIGAR IN hand George Burns and Lisa dance and sing in a recent Chicago appearance.

GEORGE BURNS and Lisa are caught laughing off stage at one of his favorite jokes.

'All About Eve'

NEW YORK (AP) — "All About Eve" is going to be a musical and Lauren Bacall will portray Margo Channing, the role created in the movie by Bette Davis.

Betty Comden and Adolph Green are doing the book and music and lyrics are by Charles Strouse and Lee Adams, who did "Bye Bye Birdie" and "Golden Boy."

"All About Eve" will try out in Boston and Philadelphia before coming to Broadway.

ON THE SOCIAL SCENE

A smile opens doors the world around

A SMILE and the ability to say "thank you" in the language of the country you're visiting are as vital as a passport for the traveler who hopes to be made welcome believes Mrs. Dwight Bennett.

The Bennetts (he is president of Downtown Long Beach Lions Club) were among some 30 Long Beach area Lions who joined with 35,000 others from throughout the World for International Convention in Tokyo then headed for "Parts East" at convention close.

Among others meeting and touring were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Alford of the Belmont Shore Club and President and Mrs. Paul Souwards of the Lakewood Lions.

Vivid in Mrs. Bennett's memory of the five-week trip — in addition to the return of her smile — are a 300-mile boat trip from the beautiful city of Beppu down the inland sea to Kobe, Japan; Taiwan and the industriousness of its people; the unfriendly atmosphere both in Cambodia and Hong Kong despite the latter being a shopper's paradise; the gorgeous flora, fauna and people of Singapore, the jubilation of the people in Thailand as they watched the astronauts land on the moon.

LISA was in seclusion and unable to attend the party in her honor this week. Standing in for her were the flabbergasted Stan Thompsons who were showered with puppy-type gifts for their female Silky who was at home awaiting the imminent birth of her litter. Joining in the surprise shish-kabob festivities on the patio at the Lewis Hindley home in Lakewood were Messrs. and Mmes. Jack Harris, James Buckingham, Jerry Johnson, Stuart Monford and Dr. and Mrs. Ken Braman.

"NEVER thought I'd be sitting in front of the exquisite Taj Mahal . . . it balances out some of the filth and poverty we have been exposed to. India is not a country I wish to return to, but I'm glad I had the opportunity to do it once."

So reads the postcard received this week by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Boyd chronicling the adventures of daughter, Nancy Boyd Manahan, who is on a world tour with 30 teachers from National Education Association. A member of girls' physical education department at El Camino College, Mrs. Manahan also will visit Nairobi, Kenya, Addis Ababa, Africa, Ethiopia and Egypt before returning home via Greece and England.

A SELECT group of guests had the privilege of attending two "coming out" parties last week. Coinciding with the Assistance League Debutante Ball was delivery of a new Columbia sailboat to Capt. Tony Venne (USN, ret.). Undaunted by the duplication in date, Mrs. Venne merely picked up the phone, inviting their guests to detour enroute to the ball site to witness the christening of "Ole." Sailors in formal finery for a small part of the evening were Antonine Venne III and his bride, Marilyn, Paul Venne with Katherine Erb (one of the evening's debs), Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Trostle and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Lough.

TEXANS BELIEVE in doing things up big and that's the tradition the Davidson family is living up to with its 10th reunion beginning next Sunday in San Diego. Long Beach residents, Mr. and Mrs. Tory Davidson, will join more than 500 relatives from Texas and throughout California at the four-day get-together at the Hilton Inn.

Davidson is the youngest of four sons born to George and Molly Davidson in Oklahoma Territory. Their names: Okla, Homa, Terry and Tory. The elder Davidsons later moved to Texas.

Festivities will kick off with a poolside luau, followed with excursions to tourist sites, a formal dinner dance and annual breakfast at which family members select a spot in the western states for the coming year's reunion.

FABULOUS is the only word that aptly describes the trip in store for the William C. Price family. A big silver bird will take to Tahiti the Prices, daughter Kay Lynn, 14, son David, 11, son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Art Miller, and friends, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Whitmore.

There the group will rendezvous with Bill Price Jr., on completion of his two and a half year mission for the Latter-day Saints Church in the South Pacific. Bill will join the group on visits to the other Society Islands then on to New Zealand, Australia, Indonesia, Thailand, China and Japan before returning home to complete his senior year at Brigham Young University.

While in Tahiti and environs, the travelers will be guests in the homes of natives — friends made by young Bill during his stay there.

Ellen Krec joins staff as social columnist

Already a familiar name to readers of these newspapers in the areas of cooking and interior decorating, Ellen Krec will turn her thoughts to things social in a new column beginning on the women's pages Monday.

Appearing daily and Sunday, it will herald what the "doers are doing, where they're going and what they're saying." It also may gently prod, sometimes chide, when she senses the need.

Mrs. Krec — a resident of Long Beach for 20 years who says "I've loved nearly every minute of it" — is the wife of Ted Krec, city editor of the Orange County Evening News. Prior to turning her talents to things journalistic, she was for 10 years vice president of Wilma Hastings Finishing and Fashion Modeling School.

LUCKY PRINCE PAUL KEEPS DATELESS STARS COMPANY . . . aerialist Victoria Unus (left) and equestrienne Jeannette Williams play two daily performances, following circus circuit leaves no time to meet eligible men.

CIRCUS LOVELIES MAINTAIN:

Center rings, not gems are stars' best friends

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

If you saw Jeanette Williams on the street, you'd look at her twice, maybe three times.

Under the big top, spectators never take their eyes off her dazzling figure as she performs incredible feats of horsemanship atop 18 Lippizaner steeds.

The statuesque blonde is a fourth-generation circus performer accustomed to the price of discipline, brutal schedules and living from a trunk one pays to be a star.

"Dere's no time for nussing else," said the German performer. "Ven you grow so tired dat every night you vant somevun to take care of you — it is time to be married and leave the circus."

Obviously, the weariness she referred to has not struck the 27-year-old performer whose love for "the greatest show on earth" glows from her luminous brown eyes.

Nor has it touched another unmarried performer of the Ringling Brothers Circus, La Toria. In private life, she is Victoria Unus, daughter of Unus the Great, the only man ever to balance himself on one finger.

RENOWNED as the first aerialist since the late Lillian Leitzel to perform a series of full body twists while hanging from one arm, her spectacular feat has thrilled audiences in Moscow, London and Madrid.

"Twice a day, I feel death breathing on my neck as I climb the rope," she said.

"When you work with danger, you must keep alert, always in top condition. Going to parties and staying up late would be fatal."

Miss Williams nodded in silent agreement. In 1951, her father was trampled to death when his horse-driven chariot overturned. Her mother continued to manage the Circus Williams until signing a five-year contract to appear in the United States with Ringling Brothers last fall.

AS CHILDREN of circus performers did their parents encourage them to pursue careers under the big top?

"Nein." "Definitely not," they replied.

"I grew up and was schooled in Sarasota, Fla.," said Miss Unus. "I never was interested in the circus. That is until Easter vacation of 1959 when my mother took me to see my father perform in Madison Square Garden.

"That did it. I told her I was going to be a star like my father. She laughed. So did my father.

"That first year was devoted to fundamentals like chin-ups and acrobatics. My instructor said I'd last less than six weeks after my father told him to pull no punches. Sometimes I was so stiff and bruised, I would cry when I dragged myself out of bed.

"When my father would visit us he'd watch me work out and say 'Ha, that's nothing.' My mother was looking forward to his retirement and said she wanted to fold up the tent, not start pitching it anew for me."

Commented Miss Unus' mother, a Russian-born circus performer who now travels with her daughter:

"Vicky is stubborn. Finally I realized it would do no good to discourage her, but I remained concerned that she had selected the most difficult act an aerialist can perform."

REWARD FOR four years' intensive training came to the 18-year-old in 1953 when she became the first woman ever to debut in the center ring — the most prestigious spot under the big top.

Miss Williams says she, too, faced family opposition while she boarded at a school in Cologne, winter headquarters of the Circus Williams.

Each day after classes she made furtive trips to the family stables where a

AT WIT'S END

Weekend vacation takes week of preparation

By ERMA BOMBECK

"Let's take a run over to Slime Bottom Island for the weekend," said my husband.

"Sounds great, when do we leave?"

"I thought we could take off at five or six tomorrow morning."

"You're kidding."

"Why not? We can buy gas and groceries on the way."

"Impossible. I've got to have time to get the kids new underwear."

"What are they wearing now? Wax paper?"

"Their old underwear. Suppose we should have an accident?"

"You mean the highway patrol would sift through us and say, 'Forget about this one, he's got a safety pin in his shorts'?"

"Don't be cute. Grandma said you could always tell what kind of people you are from your underwear. How would you feel if they had to cut your clothes off in a hospital and you had runs in your T-shirt?"

"That doesn't make any sense. If they were going to cut off your underwear I'd think you'd want to wear your old ones and save the new ones for when you went home. Good grief! Now you've got me rationalizing."

"There's nothing to rationalize. I knew you wouldn't understand. There are just certain moments of your life when you have to wear new underwear. Vacations are one of them."

"I know I'm a fool for asking, but what are the other times?"

"The first day of school, your first night at camp, your Army physical, your wedding day and whenever you visit out-of-town relatives."

"I suppose you noticed my sister's underwear when she visited here this summer."

"I certainly did. She left half of it here. Now why do you think she left perfectly new underwear behind and didn't forget the old? That's class. She certainly has better upbringing than to leave a stack of undies that aren't fit for dust rags."

"I suppose if it were up to you you'd take off for a trip around the world in those old boxer shorts that the red socks faded pink in the wash. The ambulance driver would say, 'What kind of bum wears faded pink shorts?' and put you in the charity ward. Your boss would fire you for embarrassing the company. Your family would starve and we'd have to mortgage the house to eat. They'd recall your credit cards and cancel your subscription to Newsweek. And word would get out you're a loser."

"What time do the stores open?" he asked, with a tired sigh.

Vows are read in home rite

A quiet wedding Friday evening united Vicki von Eps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.C. von Eps, 2637 Regway Ave., and Gary M. Anderson in the home of the bride's brother, Mr. and Mrs. James von Eps.

AT WIT'S END

Weekend vacation takes week of preparation

By ERMA BOMBECK

"Let's take a run over to Slime Bottom Island for the weekend," said my husband.

"Sounds great, when do we leave?"

"I thought we could take off at five or six tomorrow morning."

"You're kidding."

"Why not? We can buy gas and groceries on the way."

"Impossible. I've got to have time to get the kids new underwear."

"What are they wearing now? Wax paper?"

"Their old underwear. Suppose we should have an accident?"

"You mean the highway patrol would sift through us and say, 'Forget about this one, he's got a safety pin in his shorts'?"

"Don't be cute. Grandma said you could always tell what kind of people you are from your underwear. How would you feel if they had to cut your clothes off in a hospital and you had runs in your T-shirt?"

"That doesn't make any sense. If they were going to cut off your underwear I'd think you'd want to wear your old ones and save the new ones for when you went home. Good grief! Now you've got me rationalizing."

"There's nothing to rationalize. I knew you wouldn't understand. There are just certain moments of your life when you have to wear new underwear. Vacations are one of them."

"I know I'm a fool for asking, but what are the other times?"

"The first day of school, your first night at camp, your Army physical, your wedding day and whenever you visit out-of-town relatives."

"I suppose you noticed my sister's underwear when she visited here this summer."

"I certainly did. She left half of it here. Now why do you think she left perfectly new underwear behind and didn't forget the old? That's class. She certainly has better upbringing than to leave a stack of undies that aren't fit for dust rags."

"I suppose if it were up to you you'd take off for a trip around the world in those old boxer shorts that the red socks faded pink in the wash. The ambulance driver would say, 'What kind of bum wears faded pink shorts?' and put you in the charity ward. Your boss would fire you for embarrassing the company. Your family would starve and we'd have to mortgage the house to eat. They'd recall your credit cards and cancel your subscription to Newsweek. And word would get out you're a loser."

"What time do the stores open?" he asked, with a tired sigh.

Vows are read in home rite

A quiet wedding Friday evening united Vicki von Eps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.C. von Eps, 2637 Regway Ave., and Gary M. Anderson in the home of the bride's brother, Mr. and Mrs. James von Eps.

Crittenton Home offers concern, not censure can't pay. We'll work something out," Mrs. Ovsey said, noting it costs a minimum of $400 per girl to care for her during the stay at Florence Crittenton.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in its 77-year history in Los Angeles, the home has embarked on a public fund-raising campaign. Mrs. J. Fred Lashley is general chairman of the $350,000 building fund drive, which will enable the home to double its present facilities.

The home now is housed in a three-story Spanish-style structure at 234 E. Avenue 33, which includes office space, two floors of rooms for the girls, a living room complete with white baby grand piano, a gaily decorated yellow and white dining area, kitchen, sunroom and a recovery room where the girls come for post-partum care.

The building fund drive will allow for expanded services on an outpatient basis and provide additional office and classroom space away from the living area.

Founded 86 years ago by Charles Crittenton, the national organization was designed to aid the "fallen woman," as unwed mothers were called. The homes are named for his daughter, Florence, who died at the age of 4. The Los Angeles home opened in August, 1892, and moved to its present location in 1914.

It is the only agency of its kind in Los Angeles County and one of only eight facilities in the state licensed to provide rehabilitative services for unwed mothers.

Mrs. Katheryn Nielsen, executive director, explained the home is not just a sanctuary, but a full treatment family-child service center, offering medical and psychiatric care and accredited schooling.

"There has been too much generalizing and stereotyping of the unwed mother," claimed Mrs. Ovsey. "There is less need for secrecy and hiding away now." Girls are called only by their first names, however.

SHE POINTED out peers are more understanding of the girls' situation and accept it better than friends of the parents. This is probably due to the new sexual morality in America, she added.

Each girl is assigned a household duty during her stay at the Crittenton Home, but all heavy work is done by a maintenance staff. Duties include setting the table, clearing away dishes, dusting or sweeping. In addition, the girls are expected to keep their own rooms clean. There are three private rooms, but most house three girls. The rooms are decorated by the girls and most contain a collection of stuffed animals, pop art posters and bright flowers.

Between September and June, girls attend high school classes taught by six teachers from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. They receive credit toward their diploma. "Most work ahead, so when they go to the hospital, they are caught up," Mrs. Ovsey said.

During the summer, a recreation director arranges picnics and cookouts and organizes a drama group and chorus. Volunteers from various support groups also conduct arts and crafts sessions and sewing and knitting classes.

In the basement, there are laundry facilities and a home beauty shop.

MEALS ARE eaten family style.

A staff of six registered nurses is on duty 24 hours a day. There also are six social workers, a cook, a consulting psychiatrist and two live-in housemothers.

The home contracts with Cedars of Sinai Medical Center to deliver the babies. A doctor comes once a week to examine each girl during clinic hours.

Under a new policy this year, the girls are allowed to go home every other weekend. They can have visitors and go out during the week, but those under 18 must have a list of approved guests. The fathers of the babies come to visit, too.

"They need help as much as the mother," Mrs. Ovsey said. "They have been neglected and often are more disturbed than the unmarried mother."

She has started a new group therapy session involving both the unmarried mothers and fathers. "It was at the girls' request."

There have been some marriages — often the girl leaves before the baby is born. "They're not doing it just to give the baby a name, however," Mrs. Ovsey declared. And, "we all hold our breath."

No longer forgotten . . .

That finding triggered a chain reaction among social welfare people across the country. Suddenly, programs for the "putative father," as he is called by the professionals, popped up all over. The most ambitious are usually headed by a male caseworker, and include individual counseling sessions, group therapy, and even occasional group visits with the unwed mothers.

Much of the emphasis in these sessions is not on pushing the couple into marriage, but in helping the boys find jobs or return to school.

The meetings also give the boys a chance to bring any feelings of guilt and confusion they might have about their situations out into the open.

In a recent interview after a group session, Calvin Gentry talked about his girl friend, Gloria, who is living with her mother, and their baby son.

"We might get married some day," Calvin said, fingering the orange love beads around his neck, "But I plan to be around a lot so the baby will see that he has a father. My own father left home when I was a kid and I hardly ever see him."

DID YOU AND Gloria use birth control? "I didn't think it was necessary," Calvin answered. "We didn't use it in the past and nothing ever resulted before."

Did you consider abortion? "I wouldn't ask her to do that, because that's killing," he said firmly.

Once a month, the boys in Calvin's program get together with the unwed mothers for such coed recreational programs as bowling, movies and trips to museums.

"In unmarried pregnancies, lay people often think it's the poor girl and the ruthless seducer," said Miss Marianne Blatt, head of Louise Wise's Services to Unmarried Parents. "But very often it's a frightened boy and an aggressive girl."

The caseworkers who deal with unwed fathers have also found that generally:

—The pregnancy resulted not from a casual encounter or "one night stand," but from a long-term, meaningful relationship in which the young people expressed love and affection for each other.

—The father is not only willing to marry the girl, he wants to.

—The couple did not use birth control, either because they didn't want to sacrifice pleasure for prevention, or because they had misconceptions about the various methods. ("The pill makes you sterile," one pregnant girl told a caseworker.)

—THE SEXUAL adventures most often took place either in the back seats of cars or in the girls' parents' own bedroom while the mother was away at work.

—Most unwed fathers come from homes that are female-dominated due to divorce, death or desertion, leaving the male children with a weak or distorted masculine identity.

—The vast majority of unwed fathers don't get involved in any programs. Those who are least likely to participate are married men and men involved with older women.

Thrill-seeking mate is a menace

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The man I am married to is very intelligent about most things, but he has one very childish fault. Every time he hears a siren he has to follow it. We have been late to more places because this thrill-seeking nut of mine has chased a fire engine, ambulance or squad car. He never misses your column, so maybe if you mentioned this, you'd make an impression. I can't get thru to him. LEONA

DEAR LEONA: It's nuts like your husband who make it difficult for firemen, police and rescue squads to reach the scene where they're desperately needed. Many lives have been lost, and buildings burned to the ground because curious spectators and thrill-seeking nuts have created a traffic problem. Tell your overgrown boy that if he doesn't pull over to the curb when he hears a siren, he is in violation of the law.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I were recently discussing "pickups." Do you think it is all right for a woman (age 23) to accept a ride from an attractive, polite man on a rainy evening when she is waiting for a bus?

I have always felt that a man who could pick up a strange woman might get the idea that she was a "pick up." My friend says that anyone could tell by just looking at me that I am not that type, so it would be all right to accept the ride. What do you think? CAROL

DEAR CAROL: Anyone who thinks he can tell much by "looking" should think again. No sensible woman would get into an automobile with a strange man regardless of how "attractive and polite" he appeared to be. And a man who would pick up a stranger is also taking a chance.

DEAR ABBY: Things like this always seem to happen in someone else's family, but this has happened in mine:

My son and daughter-in-law had a beautiful church wedding. A few days later, my wife and I were told that we are to become grandparents in just four months!

Shocked we were, and still are. This is contrary to our beliefs and teachings. What does one do in such a situation? Should we forgive and forget?

It is difficult to meet our friends and neighbors who came to the wedding and brought such lovely gifts.

Abby, don't you agree this couple should have gone quietly to the Justice of the Peace instead of making a farce of a church wedding? UPSET IN SPRING VALLEY

DEAR UPSET: It makes little difference now what this couple "should have" done. What's done is done. Don't sit in judgment. Forgive and forget. You'll be glad you did.

CONFIDENTAIAL TO C.C. IN S.F.: If you want a place in the sun you have to put up with a few blisters.

DEAR ABBY: In answer to "BOTHERED" whose husband looks at other women and comments on them: This is not an irritating problem, it's a healthy one. What does she want — a dead man to live with?

I've been married to a "looker" for 35 years, and I wouldn't have him any other way. If Harry quits looking, he's no good to me either.

My husband loves people, and in his business he has come in contact with lots of them. You should see the older ones light up when Harry calls them, "Dear, Honey, and Doll."

As long as he comes home to me every night, I'll never worry. If a man chases, do you know who's responsible for it? His WIFE! A jealous, nagging, belittling wife will drive a man to other women quicker than anything I know.

So tell "Bothered" to be glad her husband "looks," and if he ever quits looking, he's over the hill, and she might as well bury him. — MRS. N. IN PHOENIX

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY

Thrill-seeking mate is a menace

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The man I am married to is very intelligent about most things, but he has one very childish fault. Every time he hears a siren he has to follow it. We have been late to more places because this thrill-seeking nut of mine has chased a fire engine, ambulance or squad car. He never misses your column, so maybe if you mentioned this, you'd make an impression. I can't get thru to him. LEONA

DEAR LEONA: It's nuts like your husband who make it difficult for firemen, police and rescue squads to reach the scene where they're desperately needed. Many lives have been lost, and buildings burned to the ground because curious spectators and thrill-seeking nuts have created a traffic problem. Tell your overgrown boy that if he doesn't pull over to the curb when he hears a siren, he is in violation of the law.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I were recently discussing "pickups." Do you think it is all right for a woman (age 23) to accept a ride from an attractive, polite man on a rainy evening when she is waiting for a bus?

I have always felt that a man who could pick up a strange woman might get the idea that she was a "pick up." My friend says that anyone could tell by just looking at me that I am not that type, so it would be all right to accept the ride. What do you think? CAROL

DEAR CAROL: Anyone who thinks he can tell much by "looking" should think again. No sensible woman would get into an automobile with a strange man regardless of how "attractive and polite" he appeared to be. And a man who would pick up a stranger is also taking a chance.

DEAR ABBY: Things like this always seem to happen in someone else's family, but this has happened in mine:

My son and daughter-in-law had a beautiful church wedding. A few days later, my wife and I were told that we are to become grandparents in just four months!

Shocked we were, and still are. This is contrary to our beliefs and teachings. What does one do in such a situation? Should we forgive and forget?

It is difficult to meet our friends and neighbors who came to the wedding and brought such lovely gifts.

Abby, don't you agree this couple should have gone quietly to the Justice of the Peace instead of making a farce of a church wedding? UPSET IN SPRING VALLEY

DEAR UPSET: It makes little difference now what this couple "should have" done. What's done is done. Don't sit in judgment. Forgive and forget. You'll be glad you did.

CONFIDENTAIAL TO C.C. IN S.F.: If you want a place in the sun you have to put up with a few blisters.

DEAR ABBY: In answer to "BOTHERED" whose husband looks at other women and comments on them: This is not an irritating problem, it's a healthy one. What does she want — a dead man to live with?

I've been married to a "looker" for 35 years, and I wouldn't have him any other way. If Harry quits looking, he's no good to me either.

My husband loves people, and in his business he has come in contact with lots of them. You should see the older ones light up when Harry calls them, "Dear, Honey, and Doll."

As long as he comes home to me every night, I'll never worry. If a man chases, do you know who's responsible for it? His WIFE! A jealous, nagging, belittling wife will drive a man to other women quicker than anything I know.

So tell "Bothered" to be glad her husband "looks," and if he ever quits looking, he's over the hill, and she might as well bury him. — MRS. N. IN PHOENIX

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The bride wore a silk organza gown with a high neckline and short sleeves. Venise lace cascades adorned the bodice and watteau train.

Mrs. Geoffrey Robinson attended as matron of honor. Jane Grant and Karen Larson were bridesmaids.

The bride is a graduate of Wilson High School. She has attended University of Uppsala, Uppsala, Sweden, UC, Santa Barbara, where she was a member of Delta Zeta, and presently is attending California State College at Long Beach. Her husband was graduated from Colorado Western State College.

A reception for the 200 wedding guests at the church was followed by champagne reception at the home of the bride's parents. After a trip to Mazatlan, Mexico and a tour of western states the newlyweds will live in Newport, R.I., where the bridegroom will be stationed.

Rushing-Robinson names linked in Catholic rite

Susan Marie Rushing and Thomas Joseph Robinson recited wedding vows Saturday morning in St. Athanasius Catholic Church. Among 200 guests witnessing the ceremony were parents of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Mark E. Rushing, 1815 Rogers St., and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Robinson of Cypress.

The bride was attired in an A-line gown of crepe and Chantilly lace. Mrs. John Bradshaw was her matron of honor. Mrs. Otto R. Hester Jr., sister of bride, and Carolyn West were bridesmaids, and Bonnie Ann Hester was flower girl.

Roy D. Abbott served as best man with Steve Robinson and Dale Robinson, brothers of bridegroom, seating guests. Martin Robinson, another brother, and Mark Otto Hester were ring bearers.

Mrs. Robinson is a graduate of Jordan High School, and her husband is an alumnus of Western High School.

retired performer taught her to ride.

WHAT CONTRASTS has she noted between American and European circuses since arriving in the U.S. last November?

"In Europe ve perform under a tent and have one ring. In America, there are three rings. Here ve vork in buildings. It is much cleaner and doesn't matter if it is vindy or rainy.

"Most Ringling performers live and travel in a train, but ve Europeans can travel in our trailers. It is difficult to learn now to live differently, so I drive my little auto and trailer which I bring from Germany."

BOTH AGREE that keeping their performances in top-notch position on the program doesn't allow time to make contacts with bachelor stockbrokers, engineers or other professionals never noted for being circus buffs.

"As for other performers, they're either married or . . . " sighed Miss Unus. "This is a competitive business, those who perform in the center ring feel apart.

"When the right time and the right man arrives I'd like to get married. Until then, I'm more than busy keeping my act in the center ring."

Show explores style in depth

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Willem de Kooning who, with Robert Motherwell, is one of the few living survivors of the great New York School of the late '40s and mid-'50s, is to be seen in depth at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

Born in Holland in 1904, and trained in the disciplines of the art guild system, de Kooning came to New York in 1926. He worked as a commercial artist until the Federal Arts Project (WPA) gave him a year to devote to painting. From the group involved, there grew up a club who carved out the independent school of American art at a time when the School of Paris (Picasso, Braque, Matisse, Modigliani, Soutine, et al)was art.

This New York School developed abstract expressionism, or action painting, a painting that wasn't about anything else (life, still life, or landscape) but painting.

This group, which included the late Jackson Pollock, was first exhibited internationally at the American Pavilion at the Venice Biennale in 1950. De Kooning's "Excavation" (a large yellowish abstraction with amorphous forms) was included, and his "Attic" was shown at the Whitney Annual in New York.

In that same year, de Kooning began his "Woman" series for which he is best known. Included in the series was his "Marilyn Monroe" series. Both of these are in the present exhibit. With vigorous, slashing strokes, de Kooning attacked modern woman — mother, sex, goddess, consumer, devourer.

DE KOONING'S "WOMAN ACABONIC, 1966"

"WOMAN" expressively set forth in pigment what Philip Wylie had said in the late '30s in "Generation of Vipers" ("the American 'Mom' is the bride at every funeral and the mourner at every wedding"). These two, de Kooning and Wylie, in my opinion, were equally effective in toppling Mom and Sis from their pedestals as the keepers of the shrine of the good, the true, and the beautiful.

Among the 147 works in the present show (oils, drawings, collages) are samplings up through Jan. 1, 1967. De Kooning's technique has broadened to include large planes of space in his special, clear colors. He seems to be returning to the frame of reference of his early training which was the clear modernity of De Stijl (the style) of Mondrian and Theo van Doesburg.

The present exhibition opened in Amsterdam, went on to the Tate in London, the Museum of Modern Art in New York, and the Art Institute in Chicago before coming here where it will be shown through September 14. It provides an excellent opportunity to become acquainted in depth with a great modern painter — brave, witty, ultimately human.

Hours at the museum are 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Thursdays, 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. on Fridays, 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Saturdays and from noon until 6 p.m. on Sundays.

'Midsummer Share-in' time

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Friends of the Performing Arts at UCLA have devised an unusual project, a "Midsummer Share-In." Beginning at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday in the beautiful setting of UCLA Sunset Canyon Recreation Center, the program will range from entertainment by the Randy Sparks Collection to aquatic exhibitions by UCLA national and international champions. An elaborate gourmet buffet will be served; a fashion show will feature clothes for men and women.

With all of this will be exhibitions of graphics, photography and ceramics. Exhibiting artists will include Jan Stussy, Max Hein, John Schulps, Darryl Curran and Robert Fichter.

Purpose is support of a new project, "Design for Sharing" which makes it possible for people of all ages and races to attend live performances at UCLA. So far, more than 30 groups have been guests of the Friends — among them high potential minority students; evolving young artists; the mentally, physically and emotionally handicapped; the blind; the aged; and many others to whom a shared experience in the arts has special meaning.

Tickets are on sale at the UCLA concert ticket office in Westwood Village.

AN ARTIST who was an assistant at the CSLB Sculpture Symposium, will have her first one-woman show of portraits at Esther Robles Gallery, 665 N. La Cienega, Blvd. through Aug. 16.

Irene Shapira, a citizen of France, also served from Dec. 1967 to April, 1969, as coordinator for the art and technology project now underway at Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

A writer, architect and fashion photographer, Miss Shapira currently is creating visages using as her base a foam core on which she makes a preliminary sketch in pencil. On this she builds a portrait by cutting and pasting colored paper and plastic for a three-dimensional effect.

Gallery hours are Mondays, 2 to 5 and 8 to 10 p.m.; Tuesday through Fridays, noon to 5 p.m.; Saturdays, 2 to 5 p.m.

LONG BEACH Art Association will join the California International Sea Festival again this year with Art Fair '69, Sunday, Aug. 17, in Bixby Park.

Everyone is invited to participate or just to look. There will be an open juried show, music, a puppet show by the Scheherazade Players and a special exhibits area for artist and artisans who want to demonstrate, display and sell their work.

For the moppets, there will be a children's paint-in section and, for young artists, a juried show with prizes: scholarships for instruction at Long Beach Museum of Art and cash awards.

Gerd Koch will select winners in the adult open juried show — $200 for best of show, $100 for second and $50 for third place.

For specific information, call the art association gallery, 300 E. Ocean Blvd.

JOHN W. GROSSMAN JR., well-known San Francisco painter and graphic designer, has been elected chairman of the California Arts Commission for 1969-70. He has been a member of the commission since 1967.

Paul G. Manolis, executive editor of the Oakland Tribune is newly-elected vice chairman.

Singer returns to Greek

For Harry Belafonte, opening Thursday night at the Greek Theater was "like coming home again." Since 1955, the popular singer has returned every other year to the outdoor amphitheater.

This year, three new Belafonte discoveries are featured: Patti Austin, young vocalist, and Hedge and Donna, a musical couple who sing with an unamplified guitar.

The show includes many new ballads, among them "Bo Jangles," a waltz meldoy about an old song and dance man—not the great Bill Robinson, but the man from whom Robinson took his name.

TWO TUNES are by contemporary Canadian composers: Gordon Lightfoot's "Last Time I Saw Her Face" and Leonard Cohn's "Oh, Suzanne."

Also in the new show are Simon and Garfunkel's "Homeward Bound" and "Abraham, Martin and John."

Tickets still are available for all performances of the engagement which will run nightly, except Sundays, through Aug. 23. Reserved seats may be purchased at the Greek box office, by mail and at all agencies, including Computicket outlets.

Show explores style in depth

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Willem de Kooning who, with Robert Motherwell, is one of the few living survivors of the great New York School of the late '40s and mid-'50s, is to be seen in depth at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

Born in Holland in 1904, and trained in the disciplines of the art guild system, de Kooning came to New York in 1926. He worked as a commercial artist until the Federal Arts Project (WPA) gave him a year to devote to painting. From the group involved, there grew up a club who carved out the independent school of American art at a time when the School of Paris (Picasso, Braque, Matisse, Modigliani, Soutine, et al)was art.

This New York School developed abstract expressionism, or action painting, a painting that wasn't about anything else (life, still life, or landscape) but painting.

This group, which included the late Jackson Pollock, was first exhibited internationally at the American Pavilion at the Venice Biennale in 1950. De Kooning's "Excavation" (a large yellowish abstraction with amorphous forms) was included, and his "Attic" was shown at the Whitney Annual in New York.

In that same year, de Kooning began his "Woman" series for which he is best known. Included in the series was his "Marilyn Monroe" series. Both of these are in the present exhibit. With vigorous, slashing strokes, de Kooning attacked modern woman — mother, sex, goddess, consumer, devourer.

"WOMAN" expressively set forth in pigment what Philip Wylie had said in the late '30s in "Generation of Vipers" ("the American 'Mom' is the bride at every funeral and the mourner at every wedding"). These two, de Kooning and Wylie, in my opinion, were equally effective in toppling Mom and Sis from their pedestals as the keepers of the shrine of the good, the true, and the beautiful.

Among the 147 works in the present show (oils, drawings, collages) are samplings up through Jan. 1, 1967. De Kooning's technique has broadened to include large planes of space in his special, clear colors. He seems to be returning to the frame of reference of his early training which was the clear modernity of De Stijl (the style) of Mondrian and Theo van Doesburg.

The present exhibition opened in Amsterdam, went on to the Tate in London, the Museum of Modern Art in New York, and the Art Institute in Chicago before coming here where it will be shown through September 14. It provides an excellent opportunity to become acquainted in depth with a great modern painter — brave, witty, ultimately human.

Hours at the museum are 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Thursdays, 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. on Fridays, 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Saturdays and from noon until 6 p.m. on Sundays.

'Midsummer Share-in' time

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Friends of the Performing Arts at UCLA have devised an unusual project, a "Midsummer Share-In." Beginning at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday in the beautiful setting of UCLA Sunset Canyon Recreation Center, the program will range from entertainment by the Randy Sparks Collection to aquatic exhibitions by UCLA national and international champions. An elaborate gourmet buffet will be served; a fashion show will feature clothes for men and women.

With all of this will be exhibitions of graphics, photography and ceramics. Exhibiting artists will include Jan Stussy, Max Hein, John Schulps, Darryl Curran and Robert Fichter.

Purpose is support of a new project, "Design for Sharing" which makes it possible for people of all ages and races to attend live performances at UCLA. So far, more than 30 groups have been guests of the Friends — among them high potential minority students; evolving young artists; the mentally, physically and emotionally handicapped; the blind; the aged; and many others to whom a shared experience in the arts has special meaning.

Tickets are on sale at the UCLA concert ticket office in Westwood Village.

AN ARTIST who was an assistant at the CSLB Sculpture Symposium, will have her first one-woman show of portraits at Esther Robles Gallery, 665 N. La Cienega, Blvd. through Aug. 16.

Irene Shapira, a citizen of France, also served from Dec. 1967 to April, 1969, as coordinator for the art and technology project now underway at Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

A writer, architect and fashion photographer, Miss Shapira currently is creating visages using as her base a foam core on which she makes a preliminary sketch in pencil. On this she builds a portrait by cutting and pasting colored paper and plastic for a three-dimensional effect.

Gallery hours are Mondays, 2 to 5 and 8 to 10 p.m.; Tuesday through Fridays, noon to 5 p.m.; Saturdays, 2 to 5 p.m.

LONG BEACH Art Association will join the California International Sea Festival again this year with Art Fair '69, Sunday, Aug. 17, in Bixby Park.

Everyone is invited to participate or just to look. There will be an open juried show, music, a puppet show by the Scheherazade Players and a special exhibits area for artist and artisans who want to demonstrate, display and sell their work.

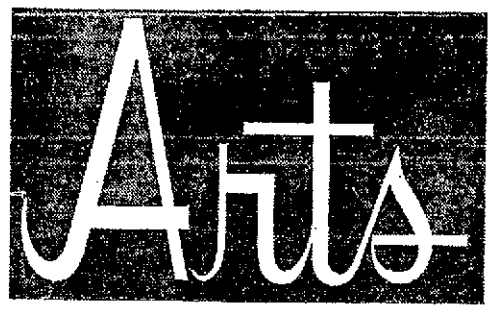

For the moppets, there will be a children's paint-in section and, for young artists, a juried show with prizes: scholarships for instruction at Long Beach Museum of Art and cash awards.

Gerd Koch will select winners in the adult open juried show — $200 for best of show, $100 for second and $50 for third place.

For specific information, call the art association gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

FOR MIKE DE TEMPLE, PARK IS PLACE TO SING

Banjo picker discovers joys of new concerto

digging deeper into folk music that I heard this remarkable 5-string instrument with the amazing contrapuntal sound made by the folk singer.

"I first made use of the 5-stringer in my Lincoln cantata, 'The Lonesome Train,' getting Pete Seeger out of boot camp in Alabama in 1944 to play with the first CBS broadcast and Decca recording. The thought of a possible concerto was born then but it took more than 20 years for it to come to fruition with the Boston commission."

ROBINSON took the subtitle for his concerto from an old American Shaker hymn, "How Can I Keep From Singing."

"Notice," he said, "there is never a question mark here. It's always a positive statement. The words by Lee Hays and myself are a modern paraphrase of the old words — the world is in such a mess, so many unsolved problems for man to overcome, but the good things and the possibilities for good are so deep and true that one cannot remain silent — one has to raise one's voice, sing out."

For Mike De Temple, the concerto has been a good and positive thing.

Looking for a soloist for the concerto's West Coast premiere with Bernstein and the Inglewood Symphony last March, Robinson asked his friend Allen Hjerpe for a suggestion.

"Mike De Temple!" Hjerpe recommended. "He won the Topango Canyon Plaza banjo and fiddle contest in 1966, 1967 and 1968. I was a judge and he's great!"

Robinson called the long-legged, long-haired, long-bearded banjo picker. He listened to Mike play and said, "You'll do!"

Mike had one slight problem — he couldn't read music.

UP AT PIERCE Junior College in Woodland Hills, he had started some music courses. "Then some of the teachers told me that the 5-string banjo was a nice instrument, but you couldn't play any real music on it. So I quit school."

Under Robinson's tutelage, Mike learned the score and added a few flourishes of his own. "There's a cadenza between the third and fourth movements when I improvise. I just let my hand and mind trip along the strings — sometimes I surprise myself!"

Rehearsals were a new experience. "The first time I ever heard a symphony I was sitting there with all those musicians playing with them. I didn't do anything right. I could see they didn't think much of me. Then about halfway through rehearsal, they started being with me and I started being with them and it was beautiful. Elmer Bernstein was conducting — he was great!

"It was like that at the performance, too. A bunch of my friends had come — you know, they look like I do, with beards and all — and I could see the audience didn't have much use for us.

"Then the concerto started. It's wonderful music. It's like a story that starts with the old time, then comes to the new time and hits all the points between and looks to the future. It moves the banjo to a classical instrument. It goes from theme to theme. It jumps from rhythm to rhythm — from five-four time to nine-eight, from country and Bluegrass to Dixieland to classics.

"WHEN IT WAS OVER, people crowded around me and my friends and talked to us. We were all together. When music can do that, it's some music!"

In April, Mike performed the concerto with the Los Angeles Philharmonic under direction of Lawrence Foster.

"But the Long Beach concert will be the first time the concerto will be done as Earl wrote it — with the banjo player bursting out at the end singing. You know— he's saying, how can I keep from singing when everyone's so nice, everything's so great."

Music, conductor Bernstein has said, is written to reach people at an emotional level. "An audience reacts to words mentally, after evaluating them. But music is emotional, a physical reaction, a total experience.

"That's the way it is with the banjo concerto — a spontaneous, happy joyous reaction — How Can I Keep From Singing!"

FOR MIKE DE TEMPLE, PARK IS PLACE TO SING

digging deeper into folk music that I heard this remarkable 5-string instrument with the amazing contrapuntal sound made by the folk singer.

"I first made use of the 5-stringer in my Lincoln cantata, 'The Lonesome Train,' getting Pete Seeger out of boot camp in Alabama in 1944 to play with the first CBS broadcast and Decca recording. The thought of a possible concerto was born then but it took more than 20 years for it to come to fruition with the Boston commission."

ROBINSON took the subtitle for his concerto from an old American Shaker hymn, "How Can I Keep From Singing."

"Notice," he said, "there is never a question mark here. It's always a positive statement. The words by Lee Hays and myself are a modern paraphrase of the old words — the world is in such a mess, so many unsolved problems for man to overcome, but the good things and the possibilities for good are so deep and true that one cannot remain silent — one has to raise one's voice, sing out."

For Mike De Temple, the concerto has been a good and positive thing.

Looking for a soloist for the concerto's West Coast premiere with Bernstein and the Inglewood Symphony last March, Robinson asked his friend Allen Hjerpe for a suggestion.

"Mike De Temple!" Hjerpe recommended. "He won the Topango Canyon Plaza banjo and fiddle contest in 1966, 1967 and 1968. I was a judge and he's great!"

Robinson called the long-legged, long-haired, long-bearded banjo picker. He listened to Mike play and said, "You'll do!"

Mike had one slight problem — he couldn't read music.

UP AT PIERCE Junior College in Woodland Hills, he had started some music courses. "Then some of the teachers told me that the 5-string banjo was a nice instrument, but you couldn't play any real music on it. So I quit school."

Under Robinson's tutelage, Mike learned the score and added a few flourishes of his own. "There's a cadenza between the third and fourth movements when I improvise. I just let my hand and mind trip along the strings — sometimes I surprise myself!"

Rehearsals were a new experience. "The first time I ever heard a symphony I was sitting there with all those musicians playing with them. I didn't do anything right. I could see they didn't think much of me. Then about halfway through rehearsal, they started being with me and I started being with them and it was beautiful. Elmer Bernstein was conducting — he was great!

"It was like that at the performance, too. A bunch of my friends had come — you know, they look like I do, with beards and all — and I could see the audience didn't have much use for us.

"Then the concerto started. It's wonderful music. It's like a story that starts with the old time, then comes to the new time and hits all the points between and looks to the future. It moves the banjo to a classical instrument. It goes from theme to theme. It jumps from rhythm to rhythm — from five-four time to nine-eight, from country and Bluegrass to Dixieland to classics.

"WHEN IT WAS OVER, people crowded around me and my friends and talked to us. We were all together. When music can do that, it's some music!"

In April, Mike performed the concerto with the Los Angeles Philharmonic under direction of Lawrence Foster.

"But the Long Beach concert will be the first time the concerto will be done as Earl wrote it — with the banjo player bursting out at the end singing. You know— he's saying, how can I keep from singing when everyone's so nice, everything's so great."

Music, conductor Bernstein has said, is written to reach people at an emotional level. "An audience reacts to words mentally, after evaluating them. But music is emotional, a physical reaction, a total experience.

"That's the way it is with the banjo concerto — a spontaneous, happy joyous reaction — How Can I Keep From Singing!"

The bride wore a formal gown of organza with appliques of Venise lace flowers on the neckline, bodice, sleeves and skirt.

Mrs. Bruce Morgan was matron of honor. Susan Johnson, Mrs. Paul Dellorso, and Viriginia Gramm, sister of bridegroom, attended as bridesmaids.

Paul Dellorso stood as best man. Ronald Leftwich, James Kirkpatrick and Steven Farmen, brother of bride, ushered the 100 guests.

MRS. T. J. GRAMM

After a reception in Patterson Hall at the Church, the newlyweds departed for a trip to Las Vegas, New York and New Jersey. Upon their return they will make their first home in Long Beach.

"Around the World with Zetas" is theme of the 11:30 a.m. event. The Howell home is located at 3845 Lime Ave.

President of the Long Beach chapter, Mrs. James McCarey, will assist Mrs. Howell in greeting guests.

Helping with arrangements are Mmes. A. A. Carrey, George Cordon, Claire Pike, Harry Rabbitt, John Wood and H.H. Ziegler. Mrs. Sam Bragg has charge of decorations.

Mrs. McCarey or Mrs. Bragg will take reservations.

Aid playwrights

NEW YORK (AP) — Three young playwrights have been granted cash awards by the American National Theatre and Academy — ANTA. The ANTA-Bishop Awards in Playwrighting, honoring the late Robert Hamilton Bishop III, were given to Ransom Jeffrey, $2,000, for his play "The Guest;" Frank M. Mosier, $700, for "The Duchess of Santiago;" and Richard Cook, $300, for his play "Charlie Boy."

The awards were open to a promising American playwright who had not yet had a play produced for profit and who submitted a play which had not been previously produced.

Robert G. Budai, served as best man. Jerry W. Jones and Donald Barger seated guests.

Karpin on bridge

by Fred L. Karpin

Through the years, Life Master Dave Warner, of Philadelphia, has acquired the reputation of being a practical joker at the bridge table. Here is an example of this proclivity of his.

The opponents had reached a seven heart contract against Dave. After the adverse trumps had been extracted, the declarer exposed his cards and claimed the contract. Dave told him to play on. The ace of spades was then led.

Dave snapped a joker out of his hand, plunked it on the table, and exclaimed: "I'm trumping it! Down one!"

At the table, during the bidding, Dave can also be a "joker," as is evidenced in the deal presented.

Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

The deal arose in the Masters Pairs Championship of 1950. Warner was sitting in the South seat.

His one spade overcall of East's opening one club bid, was a "psychic bid," pure and simple. His retreat to one no-trump when West doubled the spade overcall was the same type of bid, made in the hope of confusing the opposition.

When the latter bid was doubled by West, Warner bid his real (sic!) suit, diamonds. Imbued with the doubling rhythm established by West, East now got into the act by doubling the two diamond call. It was a mistake.

THE OPENING SPADE lead was captured by dummy's ace, after which the ace of trumps was led, felling West's king. Another trump lead then followed, East taking his jack. East returned a spade, South ruffing.

When play had ended, Warner had lost just one heart, two diamonds, and two clubs. Thus he fulfilled his doubled two diamond contract, for a top score on the deal.

On this occasion, his shenanigans had paid off. But, as he himself would admit, there have been other days when he indulged in "unorthodox" bidding, with most unhappy results.

A GO GO JAMAICA

Ocho Rios lures sun, sea lovers

OCHO RIOS, Jamaica — East from the town of Port Maria, and west to St. Ann's Bay for some 15 miles along Jamaica's lush north coast, stretches one of the island's most enchanting resort areas, and its capital is the sprawling village of Ocho Rios.

Jamaicans know it as the second biggest town of St. Ann's, the sunshine island's largest parish, sometimes called the garden parish for its flowering beauty. Its name, Ocho Rios, in the language of the conquering dons who originally settled it, means eight rivers. Island historians suspect, however, that it was more properly called Las Choreras by the founding Spaniards, which means "the waterfalls."

Winter visitors to the area are hard put to find any eight rivers flowing down the nearby mountains to the sea. But they certainly find "the waterfalls," and one of Ocho Rios's most famous tourist sites at the same time.

THIS IS Dunn's River Falls where local Jamaicans, renowned for being more-so in the torso, guide swim-suited visitors safely up the limestone rock platforms through cascades of cool mountain spray.

Dunn's River Falls is on most scheduled tours arranged for guests of the many resort hotels within the area. It may be the most photographed vacation locale in all of Jamaica.

If so, it shares honors. For just outside Ocho Rios lies Fern Gully, where good road runs through a dry mountain gorge of great depth for some six miles and visitors see what botanists from all over the world have called the most lavish array of tropical ferns. There are some 500 species in Jamaica.

NOT ALL of Ocho Rios's charms are countryside ones. Any visitor who neglects a trip to Shaw Park and its famous gardens overlooking the blue waters of St. Ann's Bay, where Columbus's caravels today await underwater excavation, misses an unforgettable Caribbean panorama.

The village itself owns a sophistication.

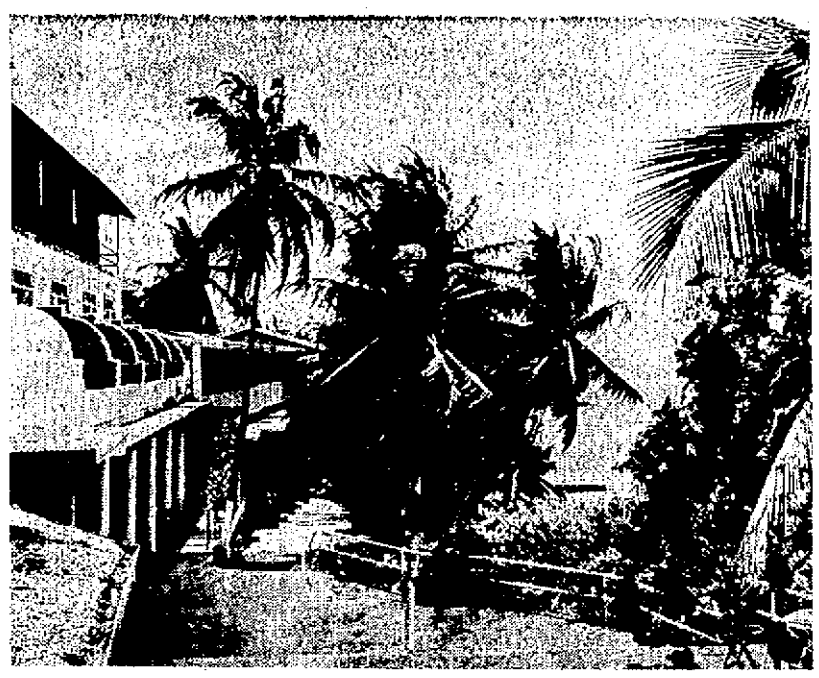

Pineapple Place, a mall of many shops, is a browser's delight featuring island crafts, fashions, and some extraordinary bargains in duty-free merchandise. And, the Celia Byass Centre is quite literally both a museum of Jamaican handiwork and a museum piece of island culture.

Strollers through the downtown usually find some local residential color not common to northern latitudes. Curbstone produce markets, complete with the bounty of nearby gardens, seemingly spring up at random and become centers of smiling gossip with all comers welcome. And, it is impossible to get lost while walking. The ever-present Jamaican constabulary and arm-banded Courtesy Corps guides assigned to Tourist Board informational duty are always ready to supply answers.

ACCOMMODATIONS at Ocho Rios in the Silver Seas can be a reasonable $33 a day for two with modified American plan. And the 55-room hotel is a brisk walk from the village of Ocho Rios where you can spend a full day browsing through the straw market, considering free port shopping and in the evening visiting a native nitery. As a shopping mecca, one can buy European imports, watches, crystal, perfumes, handbags, silverware and many other items.

At the Silver Seas, guests may take part in glass bottom boating, haul away on a row boat or skin dive in the tributary of water which juts in from the sea around the hotel property. There's sail fishing out in the Caribbean Sea where record size marlin, albacore, kingfish and jack have been caught.

Delta Air Lines serves Montego Bay and Jamaica's north shore with four direct flights a week from Los Angeles, all of them daylight services. With a brief stop in New Orleans, Delta's big DC-8s make the trip in slightly more than six hours elapsed time.

ONE OF MANY FINE OCHO RIOS HOTELS in the Silver Seas, close to all the action and free port shopping. (Jamaica Tourist Board photos)

LOVELY JAMAICAN MISS offers enticing smile with a distinctive hat found at one of the many craft markets in the North Shore resort town of Ocho Rios.

Dunn's River Falls is on most scheduled tours arranged for guests of the many resort hotels within the area. It may be the most photographed vacation locale in all of Jamaica.

If so, it shares honors. For just outside Ocho Rios lies Fern Gully, where good road runs through a dry mountain gorge of great depth for some six miles and visitors see what botanists from all over the world have called the most lavish array of tropical ferns. There are some 500 species in Jamaica.

NOT ALL of Ocho Rios's charms are countryside ones. Any visitor who neglects a trip to Shaw Park and its famous gardens overlooking the blue waters of St. Ann's Bay, where Columbus's caravels today await underwater excavation, misses an unforgettable Caribbean panorama.

The village itself owns a sophistication.

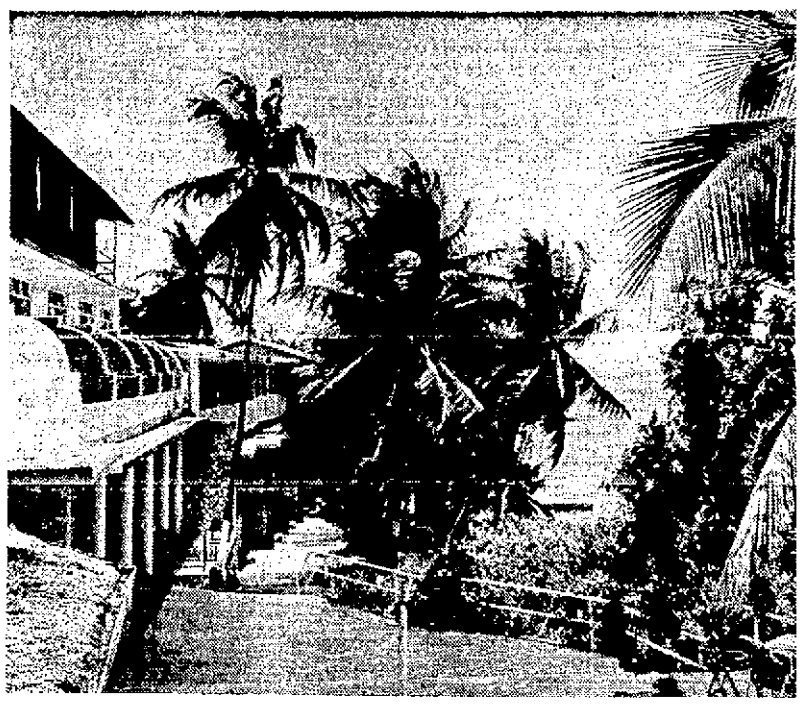

Pineapple Place, a mall of many shops, is a browser's delight featuring island crafts, fashions, and some extraordinary bargains in duty-free merchandise. And, the Celia Byass Centre is quite literally both a museum of Jamaican handiwork and a museum piece of island culture.

Strollers through the downtown usually find some local residential color not common to northern latitudes. Curbstone produce markets, complete with the bounty of nearby gardens, seemingly spring up at random and become centers of smiling gossip with all comers welcome. And, it is impossible to get lost while walking. The ever-present Jamaican constabulary and arm-banded Courtesy Corps guides assigned to Tourist Board informational duty are always ready to supply answers.

ACCOMMODATIONS at Ocho Rios in the Silver Seas can be a reasonable $33 a day for two with modified American plan. And the 55-room hotel is a brisk walk from the village of Ocho Rios where you can spend a full day browsing through the straw market, considering free port shopping and in the evening visiting a native nitery. As a shopping mecca, one can buy European imports, watches, crystal, perfumes, handbags, silverware and many other items.

At the Silver Seas, guests may take part in glass bottom boating, haul away on a row boat or skin dive in the tributary of water which juts in from the sea around the hotel property. There's sail fishing out in the Caribbean Sea where record size marlin, albacore, kingfish and jack have been caught.

Delta Air Lines serves Montego Bay and Jamaica's north shore with four direct flights a week from Los Angeles, all of them daylight services. With a brief stop in New Orleans, Delta's big DC-8s make the trip in slightly more than six hours elapsed time.

ONE OF MANY FINE OCHO RIOS HOTELS in the Silver Seas, close to all the action and free port shopping. (Jamaica Tourist Board photos)

LOVELY JAMAICAN MISS offers enticing smile with a distinctive hat found at one of the many craft markets in the North Shore resort town of Ocho Rios.

Bali Hai nurtured to renown by Newport Beach partners

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth and concluding report by Travel Editor Fred Kraft on UTA French Airlines' recent flight inaugurating triangular service — Los Angeles — Honolulu-Papeete-Los Angeles — with DC-8-62 Fan Jets to Tahiti.)

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

MOOREA, French Polynesia — Back in 1959, Hugh Kelley of Newport Beach, being pretty fed up with his law business in Los Angeles and with life in general, decided to get away from it all for a time.

KRAFT

He sailed leisurely into the Pacific to French Polynesia, and that 4,200-mile junket changed his entire life.

When he came over to this lush, sparsely populated, offbeat island — only 12 miles from Tahiti — he fell in love with everything about it. He wrote to two World War II buddies in Newport Beach — Jay Carlisle, who owned a seat on the Pacific Coast Stock Exchange, and Muk McCallum, an associate of Garcia Mitchell in a Newport Beach fishing tackle business — that a group of Americans had offered to sell him 400 acres that looked like a good bet for a vanilla plantation.

The idea sounded good to Carlisle and McCallum. Like Kelley, they junked everything and met down here to start life anew.

That's how Moorea's Bali Hai Hotel, now one of the most reputable watering places in the South Seas, came to be born.

BUT NOT right away. The partners three discovered soon enough that raising vanilla beans is a scientific undertaking and that, furthermore, it takes time to develop and put such an enterprise in the black.

About that time they ran across a Tahitian in the process of going belly up with a hotel-restaurant business on one of Moorea's most beautiful white sand beaches. They bought it, ripped a leaf from James A. Michener's "Tales of the South Pacific" by christening it "Bali Hai," and went to work.

NEW POLYNESIAN FARES AT MOOREA'S BALI HAI HOTEL will be built out over the water (above) with transparent plexiglass floors and underwater lights to provide guests with circus acts by fish of every size and color known in the South Seas.

"Having never been in the hotel business," McCallum recalls, "we had no idea of profit margins and the like. So we began pouring the largest drink in French Polynesia, and giving our guests all they could eat; and we were determined to make it a 'fun place.' "

THINGS apparently have worked out ideally for the partners from the beginning.

In 1963, they started adding to the four original guest bungalows at the rate of four to six a year. They now have 30, strung out along the gorgeous beach, and within a few months will build six new ones out over the water with transparent pexiglass floors and underwater lights.

After enjoying the multiludinous amenities the Bali Hai has to offer, a couple renting one of these Polynesian-style fares can retire to their little grass shack and watch fish of every size and color cavort within an arm's reach.

The new fares with the transparent floors will rent for $50 a day for a couple. The others bring in $20 to $25 a day per person, everything furnished.

"Everything," McCallum explains, includes the bungalow — or fare — three meals, swimming equipment, canoe with an engine, a sail for a sailboat, and use of a catamaran, The Leaky Tiki.

And it includes real Tahitian dancing with music from non-electric guitars and ukeles.

MCCALLUM insists Bali Hai dancers "are the prettiest vahines that every shook a grass skirt."

Furthermore, the hotel's Sunday night torch-lit dances are the largest in French Polynesia, the second largest in the entire South Pacific.

The Bali Hai employs about 80 persons, all Tahitians from the nearby village of Maharepa. As they add to their knowledge of English they are advanced to better jobs.

"We expect to expand to about 45 units eventually," says McCallum. "Since we operate on a personal basis, that's about all we can handle and still give our guests the service they deserve — which is the best."

However, the partners have expanded, in another way, by opening a second but smaller Bali Hai on the remote island of Raiatea, near Bora Bora, where life is much the same as it was before the first tourist arrived.

R.A.I., an affiliate of UTA French Airlines which whizzed me to French Polynesia, makes two round trips daily to Moorea in a 19-seat Twin Otter. The 12-mile, six-minute ride costs $5.75, one way, and passengers are landed on a strip only three and one-half miles from the Bali Hai. A trip on a 40-passenger boat costs $3.45 going or coming.

Peak months at the Bali Hai are January-February, July-August, and November, for which they are booked into 1972, according to McCallum. "But," he adds with a wink, "we always try to accommodate old friends of the Bali Hai."

What happened to the 400 acres purchased originally to grow vanilla beans?

The partners three converted it into a poultry farm which produces 60 per cent of all fresh eggs consumed in French Polynesia.

Old Hawaii Oahu exhibit is reopened

ULU MAU VILLAGE — The world's largest and most authentic living exhibit of old Hawaii — has reopened its gates at Heeia on Windward Oahu.

The Village, which since 1960 has been an increasingly popular visitor attraction, is newly located on a 7-acre promontory overlooking Kaneohe Bay. To one side is an ancient Hawaiian fishpond, remarkably well-preserved; on the other, the serrated cliffs of the Koolau Mountains plunging into the sea.

Only about a 30-minute drive from Waikiki, the complex offers an excellent restaurant, "Hale Aina," that seats 500 and specializes in Polynesian and American cuisine with lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. There's also a bar and cocktail area. Plans call for the restaurant to open for dinner in the near future.

VISITORS ARE greeted by friendly Polynesian "villagers" and are conducted about the authentically reconstructed, 16th-century Hawaiian chief's village by the sea.

Guests have the opportunity to amble in and out of the many thatched dwellings, to play the games and compete in the sports enjoyed by Hawaiians of hundreds of years ago, to witness spirited reenactments of ancient ceremonies and old-time hulas, and to view arts and crafts that have almost passed from sight in modern Polynesia, such as tapa making, poi pounding and hala weaving.

The Village is open from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., seven days a week. Admission: adults, $1.50; children 6-12, 75 cents.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Europe Capitals Jammed

By STAN DELAPLANE

Travel and RESORTS

LONDON — Love this town, but can't bear it in the summer jam. Fact is, the European capitals cannot take this yearly increase of tourists, 15 to 20 per cent, forever. They've reached a saturation point.

Hotels are packed. A wait of 20 minutes for a menu in the best restaurants not unusual. We took children to The Changing of the Guard and couldn't get within a block.

A walk through Westminster Abbey is like going through Macy's during the white sales.

People coming in from Rome and Paris say it's the same there.

Every plane I've been on has been filled from cockpit to galley. Mostly with packaged tours. No matter how cheap the trip, I don't think you can get fair value in a mob scene.

What's the answer? Maybe avoiding July and August. Maybe heading for the back country out of the capitals.

TO A GIRL who wanted to work in England, I said: "My passport was always stamped, 'Not Permitted To Work.' " But I had heard there was a way to get around this. This shook out three American employment agencies who say they CAN arrange jobs and work permits in England. Stivers Lifesavers with offices in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles. Brook Street Bureau of Mayfair Ltd. Offices in San Francisco, New York, Boston, Hempstead, N.Y. And Western Girl Inc. in San Francisco.

"Because of my health I am required to drink a great deal of water. I am wondering how to handle this if I go to Mexico."

TOURIST hotels put a jug of purified water in your room. Now as soon as you get to your room, empty this jug. Ask the maid to refill it. She hasn't done this since the last person moved out — that could be a week ago. She fills your jug from a five-gallon bottle of purified water. (Usually kept in the hall if you want to watch it done.)

Tourist restaurant water is purified. But it's likely the ice is not. Bottled is OK. Ask for Tehuacan. If you want it without carbonation, say "sin gas."

I don't think there's any way to be absolutley sure about water. (I met a couple of American girls in Mexico who were brushing their teeth in Coca Cola.) Americans living in Mexico take all precautions possible and hope to win most of the time.

"We were intrigued with your Irish-rent-a-cottage story. Alas, they seem to be full for the time we want to go . . ."

TRY THIS THEN: Irish International Airlines has a selection of Irish country homes where you live with the family. They were picked for "luxurious accommodations and scenic locations."

Ireland's one of the countries where you won't be crowded — except in summer in Dublin. Wonderful driving country. There's little traffic. Don't boom around the curves. The road is likely to be full of cows.

"We are just starting to learn scuba diving and hope to do some in the South Pacific. Then we read something about coral cuts . . ."

CORAL CUTS infect wildly. The native remedy is squeezing lime juice on it right away. But there are a lot of tropical medicine specialists — they come from a school in Fiji. I'd check in with them if you get a cut.

Better check locally on what bites. There's a spiral shell on the reef with a little sea animal that can reach out and bite like a rattlesnake. Fish in some water is poisonous at certain times of the year. Even the natives get caught once in awhile. Fijians brought us a fine live lobster, and the lobster cocktail turned my wife bright red from head to toe. She wasn't sick but she certainly was a gaudy sight.

However, the partners have expanded, in another way, by opening a second but smaller Bali Hai on the remote island of Raiatea, near Bora Bora, where life is much the same as it was before the first tourist arrived.

R.A.I., an affiliate of UTA French Airlines which whizzed me to French Polynesia, makes two round trips daily to Moorea in a 19-seat Twin Otter. The 12-mile, six-minute ride costs $5.75, one way, and passengers are landed on a strip only three and one-half miles from the Bali Hai. A trip on a 40-passenger boat costs $3.45 going or coming.

Peak months at the Bali Hai are January-February, July-August, and November, for which they are booked into 1972, according to McCallum. "But," he adds with a wink, "we always try to accommodate 4 old friends of the Bali Hai."

What happened to the 400 acres purchased originally to grow vanilla beans?

The partners three converted it into a poultry farm which produces 60 per cent of all fresh eggs consumed in French Polynesia.

Old Hawaii Oahu exhibit is reopened

ULU MAU VILLAGE — The world's largest and most authentic living exhibit of old Hawaii — has reopened its gates at Heeia on Windward Oahu.

The Village, which since 1960 has been an increasingly popular visitor attraction, is newly located on a 7-acre promontory overlooking Kaneohe Bay. To one side is an ancient Hawaiian fishpond, remarkably well-preserved; on the other, the serrated cliffs of the Koolau Mountains plunging into the sea.

Only about a 30-minute drive from Waikiki, the complex offers an excellent restaurant, "Hale Aina," that seats 500 and specializes in Polynesian and American cuisine with lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. There's also a bar and cocktail area. Plans call for the restaurant to open for dinner in the near future.

VISITORS ARE greeted by friendly Polynesian "villagers" and are conducted about the authentically reconstructed, 16th-century Hawaiian chief's village by the sea.

Guests have the opportunity to amble in and out of the many thatched dwellings, to play the games and compete in the sports enjoyed by Hawaiians of hundreds of years ago, to witness spirited reenactments of ancient ceremonies and old-time hulas, and to view arts and crafts that have almost passed from sight in modern Polynesia, such as tape making, poi pounding and hala weaving.

The Village is open from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., seven days a week. Admission: adults, $1.50; children 6-12, 75 cents.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Europe Capitals Jammed

By STAN DELAPLANE

Travel and RESORTS

LONDON — Love this town, but can't bear it in the summer jam. Fact is, the European capitals cannot take this yearly increase of tourists, 15 to 20 per cent, forever. They've reached a saturation point.

Hotels are packed. A wait of 20 minutes for a menu in the best restaurants not unusual. We took children to The Changing of the Guard and couldn't get within a block.

A walk through Westminster Abbey is like going through Macy's during the white sales.

People coming in from Rome and Paris say it's the same there.

Every plane I've been on has been filled from cockpit to galley. Mostly with packaged tours. No matter how cheap the trip, I don't think you can get fair value in a mob scene.

What's the answer? Maybe avoiding July and August. Maybe heading for the back country out of the capitals.

TO A GIRL who wanted to work in England, I said: "My passport was always stamped, 'Not Permitted To Work.'" But I had heard there was a way to get around this. This shook out three American employment agencies who say they CAN arrange jobs and work permits in England. Stivers Lifesavers with offices in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles. Brook Street Bureau of Mayfair Ltd. Offices in San Francisco, New York, Boston, Hempstead, N.Y. And Western Girl Inc. in San Francisco.

"Because of my health I am required to drink a great deal of water. I am wondering how to handle this if I go to Mexico."

TOURIST hotels put a jug of purified water in your room. Now as soon as you get to your room, empty this jug. Ask the maid to refill it. She hasn't done this since the last person moved out — that could be a week ago. She fills your jug from a five-gallon bottle of purified water. (Usually kept in the hall if you want to watch it done.)

Tourist restaurant water is purified. But it's likely the ice is not. Bottled is OK. Ask for Tehuacan. If you want it without carbonation, say "sin gas."

I don't think there's any way to be absolutley sure about water. (I met a couple of American girls in Mexico who were brushing their teeth in Coca Cola.) Americans living in Mexico take all precautions possible and hope to win most of the time.

"We were intrigued with your Irish-rent-a-cottage story. Alas, they seem to be full for the time we want to go . . ."

TRY THIS THEN: Irish International Airlines has a selection of Irish country homes where you live with the family. They were picked for "luxurious accommodations and scenic locations."

Ireland's one of the countries where you won't be crowded — except in summer in Dublin. Wonderful driving country. There's little traffic. Don't boom around the curves. The road is likely to be full of cows.

"We are just starting to learn scuba diving and hope to do some in the South Pacific. Then we read something about coral cuts . . ."

CORAL CUTS infect wildly. The native remedy is squeezing lime juice on it right away. But there are a lot of tropical medicine specialists — they come from a school in Fiji. I'd check in with them if you get a cut.

Better check locally on what bites. There's a spiral shell on the reef with a little sea animal that can reach out and bite like a rattlesnake. Fish in some water is poisonous at certain times of the year. Even the natives get caught once in awhile. Fijians brought us a fine live lobster, and the lobster cocktail turned my wife bright red from head to toe. She wasn't sick but she certainly was a gaudy sight.

Matson's Hotel SS Lurline is going to Expo 70 & The Orient

March 27, 1970 for a once-in-a-lifetime vacation,—45 days

Matson turned a luxury ship into a most unusual hotel: the Hotel SS Lurline.

It's one hotel that doesn't stay in one place. Instead, it floats people from place to beautiful place. A beautiful idea.

So beautiful that now the Hotel is going to Expo 70 and the Orient for a once-in-a-lifetime adventure.

On March 27, the Hotel leaves Los Angeles for a 45-day cruise vacation in Honolulu, Yokohama–Tokyo, Kobe–Osaka, Keelung–Taipei, Hong Kong, Manila, Guam and back to Honolulu and California. The SS Lurline will be your hotel for several days in Japan itself while you see Expo 70 during the Cherry Blossom season!

And here's the beautiful part. You travel from place to place without packing and unpacking every few days. No waiting for hotel rooms. No checking in and out. No rushing for planes.

Check in at the Hotel SS Lurline. It's going places.

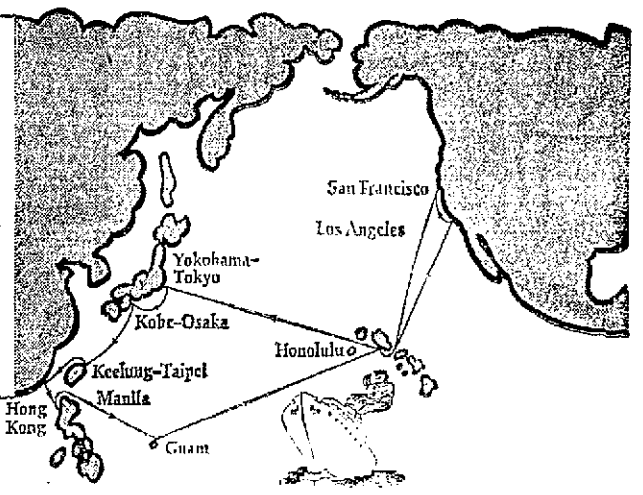

Leaving March 27, from Los Angeles (March 29 from San Francisco) for 45 days. From $1890 to $7110. 35-day cruise leaves Honolulu April 4 with return to Honolulu. From $1470 to $5530.

CONTACT YOUR TRAVEL AGENT. He'll arrange everything for you. Or send the coupon.

SAFETY INFORMATION: The SS Lurline, registered in the U.S., substantially meets International Safety Standards for new ships developed in 1960; and meets the 1966 Fire Safety Requirements.

Bayer-Gardiner vows read in garden rite

Family and close friends gathered Friday evening in the garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bayer, 890 Holly Glen Drive, to witness the marriage ceremony uniting Aina L. Gardiner and Ronald M. Bayer.

The daughter of Mrs. Vella E. Gardiner, 4702 Hersholt Ave., wore a short white dress with long sleeves. Connie Sessions was her maid of honor, and Bill Broekhof served as best man.

The bride is a graduate of Lakewood High School and attended Long Beach City College. Her husband was graduated from Lakewood High School and UCLA where he was president of Phi Delta Theta. He will enter UCLA Law School this fall.

A champagne buffet dinner followed the ceremony. After a honeymoon in Carmel and Monterey the couple will reside in West Los Angeles.

Grads wed, plan to teach

In a double ring ceremony Saturday evening in Riviera Methodist Church, Redondo Beach, Janet Diane Schultz exchanged nuptial vows with Thomas Donald Ridley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald D. Ridley of Palos Verdes Estates.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Schultz, Dominguez, wore an empire gown of candlelight peau de soie and Venetian lace. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Michael T. Huling as matron of honor, Donna Ridley, sister of the bridegroom, Cecilia Desmond, Mrs. Anthony Anderson, and Mrs. Charles Fesmire, bridesmaids.

The bridegroom chose his brothers, Michael A. and Peter Ridley, to be his best men. Ronald Schultz, brother of bride, Mark Frampton and Gordon Hill seated 225 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Ridley are both graduates of California State College at Long Beach where they were music majors. They both will be teaching in September.

A reception in the home of the bridegroom honored the newlyweds before they left for a trip to Santa Barbara. They plan to reside in Long Beach.

Glad You Asked That!

By Hy Gardner

Q. IS CASSIUS CLAY going to make his acting debut on Broadway this fall in "The Great White Hope"?—Brigid Wendell, Honolulu.

A. Not likely. Though Clay, after seeing James Earl Jones' portrayal of boxing champ Jack Johnson, cackled, "I am him!"—producer Herman Levin doesn't agree. Says he didn't offer the part to Cassius because it's too demanding for anyone but a very seasoned professional actor. When Jones drops out of the hit in September to film the movie version in Hollywood, he'll be replaced by his understudy, Yapha Koto.

Q. How does the U. S. Olympic Committee feel about long-haired athletes?—Joan Greenwood, Cincinnati.

A. "There are no restrictions on how one wears his hair," a spokesman says. "In international competition you can run into religious beliefs, national styles, or customs which vary. However, many of the world's outstanding male swimmers shave their bodies (chest and legs) to further reduce the friction of going through the water."

Q. Jimmy Durante plays the piano, sings(?), even dances. What's his greatest talent?—P.N.R., San Diego.

A. It must be his nose. Even his 7½-year-old daughter Cee-Cee tells her septuagenarian dad, "Someday I'm going to pull off that nose of yours and you won't be famous any more." (Could be she was jealous of his fans and wanted pop for herself?).

Q. Bogart, Cooper, Gable and now Robert Taylor—isn't it ironic that so many of our matinee idols died of lung cancer? — Iren Goldberg, Philadelphia.

A. Only Taylor died of lung cancer. Humphrey Bogart and Gary Cooper were felled by throat cancer, Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy by heart disease.

Robert Taylor.

Clay and Jones . . . No "Hope" for Cassius.

Q. Does Bobbie Gentry wear a wig or is all that hair her own? — Kathy L. Wessel, Vallonia, Ind.

A. Most of "all that" is her own. But like most fashionable females these days, in and out of show business, she does, when in the mood, add a fall or rig a wig.

Q. Which is more difficult for an actor to do—make people laugh or cry?—Mrs. R. L., Providence.

A. Veteran comedian Jack Pearl (the Baron Munchausen of radio fame) speaks for his craft, I think, when he says, "Even peeling an onion can make people cry—but there's no vegetable to make them laugh!"

Q. How much does Jackie Gleason weigh?—C. C., Greensburg, Ind.

A. Now that the Great One has lost 32 pounds, he tips the scales at around 230. But then, Jackie has always been a big tipper.

Q. Didn't the real Baroness Von Trapp appear briefly in the movie version of her biography, "The Sound of Music"?—A. M., Seattle.

Outside House Painting Eliminated for 15 Years

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (CT)—Painting is a thing of the past. Let us show you how Fiberglas TEX-COTE insulates, waterproofs and beautifies and is factory guaranteed for a full 15 years.

BEST IN NATION

Homeowners are requested not to spend a single penny on painting their residences until they hear the TEX-COTE story. This remarkable material insulates, waterproofs and beautifies, and every fiberglas TEX-COTE job is factory guaranteed for 15 full years against chipping, flaking or peeling.

Fiberglas, a product of Owens-Corning, brings to TEX-COTE its great strength, its wonderful insulating properties, its resistance to time, weather and chemical attack.

PROVEN OVER THE YEARS

TEX-COTE is one of the oldest coatings now marketed and has been applied on thousands of homes and commercial buildings since 1946. These buildings have remained in perfect condition after more than 15 years exposure in all types of weather.

SHOT FROM A GUN

TEX-COTE is applied with heavy duty spray equipment and is actually "shot from a gun" without muss, fuss or odor. TEX-COTE fuses itself to the walls and fills holes, cracks and covers building defects. TEX-COTE may be applied over stucco, wood, brick, block or shingles.

CITY OF LONG BEACH

Cal-Tex Improvements, Inc., is a licensed City of Long Beach Building Contractor. Most of the work now being done by Cal-Tex is in the greater Long Beach and West Orange County areas.

THE WELLS REPORT

Caesar's Candidate

By Bob Wells

THERE IS ONE THING the events of the past few days have made certain: Sen. Edward Kennedy is a serious and formidable contender for the Presidency of the United States — if not in 1972, then certainly in 1976.

Some people, I suppose, would consider that I am putting any reputation I might hope to possess as a political prophet in considerable danger by this flat assertion. After all, at the time of this writing the Massachusetts senator has not even decided whether or not he will resign from the Senate. Yet, Kennedy's decision to plead guilty to leaving the scene of the accident in which a young and beautiful political associate was killed, and his subsequent TV address, clearly demonstrates his intent.

And no one can appreciate that intent more fully than President Nixon. It was Richard Nixon who for all intents and purposes wrote the script for Kennedy.

Nixon was faced with somewhat the same problem when as the Republican candidate for vice president in 1952 the existence of a secret $18,000 slush fund was revealed. Nixon took his case to the country with his now-famous "Checkers" speech.

There was such an outpouring of sentiment from the public in response to the speech that Mr. Eisenhower could not have asked the vice presidential candidate to resign if he had wanted to. After the television appearance, Mr. Nixon flatly refused to discuss further the issues raised by the slush fund disclosure — although there were still unanswered questions.

KENNEDY HAS MET HIS CRISIS in almost the same way. The plea of guilty and subsequent suspended sentence of two months averted a hearing on the tragedy and a full inquiry into what happened that night. And the Nixon telecast had demonstrated the likelihood that if Sen. Kennedy made a plea to his state and nation for understanding and forgiveness, the people would respond.

There are important differences in the two cases. Mr. Nixon was not charged with a crime, only an impropriety. No one died. There were no whispers and innuendoes about his sobriety or moral conduct. But another large difference is that the then-Sen. Nixon was a Republican and Sen. Kennedy is a Democrat.

The first thing a politician has to worry about is the backing of his own people. He has to be nominated before he can be elected. Traditionally in this country Republicans have been less worried about accusations of breach of public trust than the Democrats, but they have been more worried than the Democrats about a candidate's family life and sexual morals. Many observers still feel that Gov. Rockefeller's divorce and remarriage and the birth of a baby to his new wife, right before the California primary in 1964, was the crucial element in his loss to Goldwater in that primary and the collapse of his presidential hopes.

ASSUMING THAT THE candidate has the unified backing of his own party, historical evidence suggests that public insistence on observance of moral rules is not strict.

In 1791, Andrew Jackson was married to Rachel Robards, the divorced wife of Lewis Robards. Because of a legal misunderstanding regarding the procurement of the divorce, the marriage ceremony was repeated two years later. When Jackson ran for president in 1828, these circumstances were recalled and Jackson's "premarital" cohabitation with his wife described in lurid detail. But neither this revelation nor others concerning Jackson's frontier brawls, in one of which he killed a man, prevented his election and re-election.

The question of sexual morality was raised again during the Jackson administration, when the President appointed John H. Eaton as secretary of war. Eaton was married to the vivacious, beautiful, witty and sexy Peggy O'Neale Timberlake Eaton.

She had been married at an early age to a purser in the navy. While her husband was off on long trips at sea, she became the mistress of Eaton, then a bachelor senator from Tennessee. Eventually the husband died or committed suicide — no one was ever sure which. Eaton married the 32-year-old widow. Washington was scandalized. The wife of Vice President John C. Calhoun refused to receive the "hussy" and the other cabinet and diplomatic wives followed suit.

The political loser, however, was not Eaton, but Calhoun. President Jackson, perhaps mindful of the smears against his beloved Rachel, now dead, strongly supported Eaton and became estranged from Calhoun. Calhoun had been the heir-presumptive to the Presidency, but Jackson succeeded in having Martin Van Buren nominated and elected.

IN 1884, THE DEMOCRATS nominated Grover Cleveland, a self-made man who as governor of New York had opposed Tammany Hall and won a reputation for independence, integrity and firmness.

The bachelor Cleveland had, however, fathered an illegitimate child. When the Republicans dug up this fact and publicly charged him with it, Cleveland cheerfully admitted it.

The Republican candidate was James G. Blaine, one-time speaker of the House of Representatives, author of the 14th Amendment, and U.S. senator from Maine.

Blaine was known as "the plumed knight." A man of great talents, he also led an exemplary and happy family life. But a number of persons including some members of his own party charged him with prostituting public office for personal gain. He had acted as broker for the bonds of a subsequently bankrupt railroad, making some $100,000 personal profit. As secretary of state for a few months he ordered American diplomats mediating the war between Peru and Chile to write the payment of a dubious claim one of his friends was interested in into the peace settlement.

Faced with these two different candidates, one of Cleveland's supporters suggested a way out:

"We should elect Mr. Cleveland to the public office which he is so admirably qualified to fill, and remand Mr. Blaine to the private life which he is so eminently fitted to adorn."

The American people agreed.

IF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE have been willing to overlook certain irregularities in the private lives of their leaders, it is perhaps because they realize that the lapses are usually infrequent and always dull. As Stimson Bullitt sums it up in his gem of a book, "To Be a Politician:"

"Among politicians one finds cowardice, dishonesty, and pride, but little sloth, lust, cruelty or greed . . . Although some politicians have colorful personalities, few successful ones have lurid faults.

"Ambition makes most successful politicians impose on themselves disciplined habits of restraint from vicious pleasures. . . . they generally can resist temptation because they prefer success to pleasure.

"Drinking often becomes a problem because of long meetings and conferences under conditions which encourage it in hotels, lodge halls, restaurants and homes. . . . But in this profession are some teetotalers and few drunkards, because ambition is to politics what hope of profit is to busi-

THE WELLS REPORT

Caesar's Candidate

By Bob Wells

THERE IS ONE THING the events of the past few days have made certain: Sen. Edward Kennedy is a serious and formidable contender for the Presidency of the United States — if not in 1972, then certainly in 1976.

Some people, I suppose, would consider that I am putting any reputation I might hope to possess as a political prophet in considerable danger by this flat assertion. After all, at the time of this writing the Massachusetts senator has not even decided whether or not he will resign from the Senate. Yet, Kennedy's decision to plead guilty to leaving the scene of the accident in which a young and beautiful political associate was killed, and his subsequent TV address, clearly demonstrates his intent.

And no one can appreciate that intent more fully than President Nixon. It was Richard Nixon who for all intents and purposes wrote the script for Kennedy.

Nixon was faced with somewhat the same problem when as the Republican candidate for vice president in 1952 the existence of a secret $18,000 slush fund was revealed. Nixon took his case to the country with his now-famous "Checkers" speech.

There was such an outpouring of sentiment from the public in response to the speech that Mr. Eisenhower could not have asked the vice presidential candidate to resign if he had wanted to. After the television appearance, Mr. Nixon flatly refused to discuss further the issues raised by the slush fund disclosure — although there were still unanswered questions.

KENNEDY HAS MET HIS CRISIS in almost the same way. The plea of guilty and subsequent suspended sentence of two months averted a hearing on the tragedy and a full inquiry into what happened that night. And the Nixon telecast had demonstrated the likelihood that if Sen. Kennedy made a plea to his state and nation for understanding and forgiveness, the people would respond.

There are important differences in the two cases. Mr. Nixon was not charged with a crime, only an impropriety. No one died. There were no whispers and innuendoes about his sobriety or moral conduct. But another large difference is that the then-Sen. Nixon was a Republican and Sen. Kennedy is a Democrat.

The first thing a politician has to worry about is the backing of his own people. He has to be nominated before he can be elected. Traditionally in this country Republicans have been less worried about accusations of breach of public trust than the Democrats, but they have been more worried than the Democrats about a candidate's family life and sexual morals. Many observers still feel that Gov. Rockefeller's divorce and remarriage and the birth of a baby to his new wife, right before the California primary in 1964, was the crucial element in his loss to Goldwater in that primary and the collapse of his presidential hopes.

ASSUMING THAT THE candidate has the unified backing of his own party, historical evidence suggests that public insistence on observance of moral rules is not strict.

In 1791, Andrew Jackson was married to Rachel Robards, the divorced wife of Lewis Robards. Because of a legal misunderstanding regarding the procurement of the divorce, the marriage ceremony was repeated two years later. When Jackson ran for president in 1828, these circumstances were recalled and Jackson's "premarital" cohabitation with his wife described in lurid detail. But neither this revelation nor others concerning Jackson's frontier brawls, in one of which he killed a man, prevented his election and re-election.

The question of sexual morality was raised again during the Jackson administration, when the President appointed John H. Eaton as secretary of war. Eaton was married to the vivacious, beautiful, witty and sexy Peggy O'Neale Timberlake Eaton.

She had been married at an early age to a purser in the navy. While her husband was off on long trips at sea, she became the mistress of Eaton, then a bachelor senator from Tennessee. Eventually the husband died or committed suicide — no one was ever sure which. Eaton married the 32-year-old widow. Washington was scandalized. The wife of Vice President John C. Calhoun refused to receive the "hussy" and the other cabinet and diplomatic wives followed suit.

The political loser, however, was not Eaton, but Calhoun. President Jackson, perhaps mindful of the smears against his beloved Rachel, now dead, strongly supported Eaton and became estranged from Calhoun. Calhoun had been the heir-presumptive to the Presidency, but Jackson succeeded in having Martin Van Buren nominated and elected.

IN 1884, THE DEMOCRATS nominated Grover Cleveland, a self-made man who as governor of New York had opposed Tammany Hall and won a reputation for independence, integrity and firmness.

The bachelor Cleveland had, however, fathered an illegitimate child. When the Republicans dug up this fact and publicly charged him with it, Cleveland cheerfully admitted it.

The Republican candidate was James G. Blaine, one-time speaker of the House of Representatives, author of the 14th Amendment, and U.S. senator from Maine.

Blaine was known as "the plumed knight." A man of great talents, he also led an exemplary and happy family life. But a number of persons including some members of his own party charged him with prostituting public office for personal gain. He had acted as broker for the bonds of a subsequently bankrupt railroad, making some $100,000 personal profit. As secretary of state for a few months he ordered American diplomats mediating the war between Peru and Chile to write the payment of a dubious claim one of his friends was interested in into the peace settlement.

Faced with these two different candidates, one of Cleveland's supporters suggested a way out:

"We should elect Mr. Cleveland to the public office which he is so admirably qualified to fill, and remand Mr. Blaine to the private life which he is so eminently fitted to adorn."

The American people agreed.

IF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE have been willing to overlook certain irregularities in the private lives of their leaders, it is perhaps because they realize that the lapses are usually infrequent and always dull. As Stimson Bullitt sums it up in his gem of a book, "To Be a Politician:"

"Among politicians one finds cowardice, dishonesty, and pride, but little sloth, lust, cruelty or greed . . . Although some politicians have colorful personalities, few successful ones have lurid faults.

"Ambition makes most successful politicians impose on themselves disciplined habits of restraint from vicious pleasures. . . . they generally can resist temptation because they prefer success to pleasure.

"Drinking often becomes a problem because of long meetings and conferences under conditions which encourage it in hotels, lodge halls, restaurants and homes. . . . But in this profession are some teetotalers and few drunkards, because ambition is to politics what hope of profit is to business."

The Unearthly Fascination of Underwater Photography

By Merv Harris

Miss Underwater Photographic Society for 1969 is Lynn Alexander, shown with a Nikonos underwater camera. Underwater films, slides and prints from all over the world will be shown Saturday night in Long Beach Municipal Auditorium in conjunction with the California International Sea Festival.

THE SENSATION is like no other and the vista is an eerie, kaleidoscopic world of strange shapes and unfamiliar colors which, until Jacques-Yves Cousteau and Emile Gagnan invented the Aqualung in 1943, was more distant and more alien to man than was the moon.

With the invention of a device which would permit a man to breathe beneath the sea unencumbered by bulky diving suits and awkward air hoses, a new industry was born and a vast new recreational opportunity was opened.

The industry was oceanography, for which Long Beach is becoming the world center of development and activity.

The sport was SCUBA (self-contained underwater breathing apparatus) diving, and a branch of it — the fastest-growing branch — is underwater photography.

Long Beach will be the capital of this activity, too, Saturday night when the finest black and white and color photos and motion pictures of the year will be displayed in the ninth annual International Underwater Photographic Society Exhibition at Long Beach Municipal Auditorium as an event of the California International Sea Festival.

Over 100 photographers and film makers submitted what they considered their best pictures and films, and from this group — collected from literally all over the world (or all under the world) were selected the prize winners for the oldest continuous underwater photo show held anywhere.

The hobby of underwater picture taking has grown so rapidly and has been open to great enough numbers of people that the Long Beach show's winners include a Houston eye-ear-nose-throat surgeon and a plumber from the small Canadian city of Kitchener, Ont.

Jie Lingrey, one of the International Underwater Photographic Society officials who has been working on arrangements for the exhibition, points out that diving gear can be purchased for as little as $200 new or less than that used and that simple photo equipment to be used underwater can be had for as little as $50.

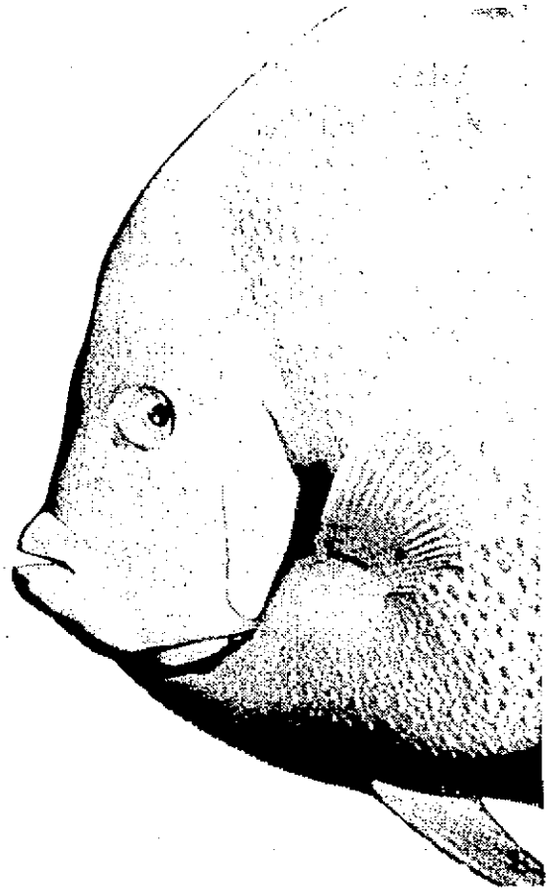

The attractions of the sport are picture taking, for many years one of the most popular of American leisure activities, and simply the experience of moving in a realm of new sights and, yes, even new sounds.

Another leader of the society, Paula Jeppson, was asked to give her impression of the attraction of underwater photography.

"It is a lovely world," she said, "that sways and flows to the sound of a mysterious, silent music. Colorful, glowing creatures dance about and peck curiously into the lens of the camera because they have no fear of man. Often, a friendly seal or dolphin will drop by and smilingly invite the visitor to play."

Perhaps Paula was laying it on a bit thick, but that is the enthusiasm of the underwater people, who

OLD-TIME MOVIE STAR
A POPULAR LECTURER
WHO RAPS SMUT GLUT

The Ladies Still Love Richard Arlen

By Mary Neiswender

RICHARD ARLEN was titillating female moviegoers' hearts 50 years ago, and he starred in the first Academy Award-winning motion picture, "Wings," more than 40 years ago.

The women have grown old — from flush-faced teenagers to wrinkled grandmothers.

And the movies have changed too — from silent, jerking pictures flashing across a small screen to stereophonic Panavision epics.

But not Richard Arlen.

Although his straight hair is now gray, he's trim and tanned and still handsome enough to stir the hearts of females across the country.

His smile and hearty guffaw, coupled with bold adjectives from a man's vocabulary and independence of thought, have made him one of the most sought-after speakers by women's organizations throughout the nation.

The movies no longer attract him:

"I don't have to work . . . It's late in life, and unless I can do something that's good . . . that fits me, I won't do it at all.

"I don't want to get involved in the very thing I lecture about — obscenity, pornography, dirty pictures, violence on television . . . "

On the Los Angeles County Commission on Pornography and Obscenity, the actor is an outspoken foe of smut and feels womn's organizations are the answer.

Women, he says, say "To hell with whose toes we step on, if it's right we'll do it."

He believes in women, and women apparently believe in him — he's been made an honorary member of three women's organizations.

"I think I honestly have something to say — to tell the truth — be outspoken on basic fundamentals," he says.

And that's what he does on his lecture tours across country. But he saves some of his sharpest barbs for television, which he says, can be used for good or evil.

"Television is what has brought violence to our society. Remember when we used to fight like men — now they hit you in the throat . . . in the back of the neck . . . boot you in the . . . The little kids pick up this violence."

He cites a television series, "The Rogues" featuring three old-time Hollywood stars, which, he says, was taken off the air after a group of kids in Los Angeles were arrested.

"The kids — the oldest was 18— made more than $250,000 just by patterning themselves and their robberies after the show . . . "

Arlen, who lives with his third wife, Margaret, who he married in 1948, in an eight-room converted "coach house" on one-and-a-half acres of land in Sherman Oaks, is also outspoken on the subject of his old-time buddies.

Bill Boyd, Hopalong Cassidy: "He gave me the best advice I ever got. He said when I was under contract to always borrow enough money from the studio so they'd have to pick up my option — that was the trick and it worked."

Wallace Beery: "Paramount fired him because they put the microphone gain so high — the mike was so far away — that in his first talkie instead of coming out with a booming voice, he sounded like a fairy. Mayer signed him and the first picture he did for Mayer, "The Champ," was a winner. They paid Beery $5,000 a week just to sit there."

Howard Hughes: "I've known him all my Hollywood life — he's a very nice guy. We were on the same golf team at Lakeside for many years. Everybody says you can't see Hughes — it depends on who wants to see him. If it's his old friends, my God, he's as available as you or I. There's no question in my mind he's one of the most brilliant men in this country . . . the kindest, most gentle of men, but with the guts of an Army mule."

Born in St. Paul, Minn., the son of an attorney who later became a judge, Arlen had an early life that reads like a movie script itself.

After graduating from St. Thomas Military Academy in St. Paul, he joined the Royal Air Force -- then called the Royal Flying Corps -- in the fall of 1917.

"I used to ferry planes across the English Channel. We used to crab all the way across the channel, hoping to hit a big smokestack — that was our landmark. Beyond that were railroad tracks, where we'd turn left.

"Nothing worked on those old planes . . . they were lucky to hold together across the channel."

A picture of himself in knee-high boots, flying jodhpurs and scarf hangs on the wall in a small corner of his den, along with his presentation before the Court of St. James in 1920, a picture of the cast of "Wings" with their plaster of paris statuette and other mementos.

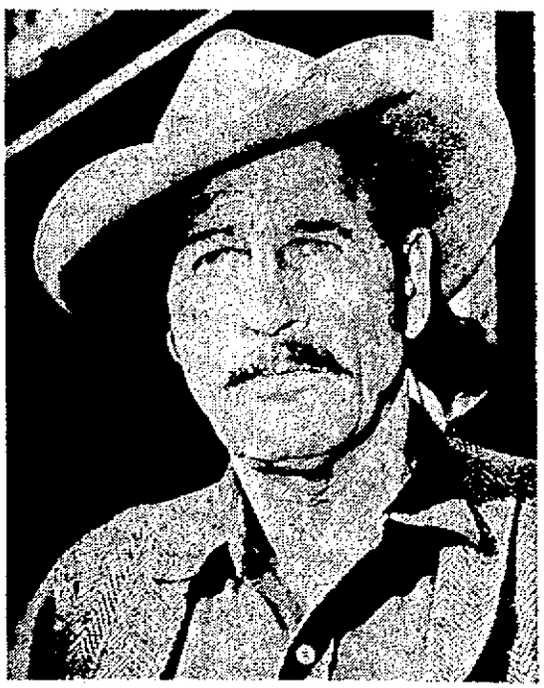

When Arlen got out of the RAF in December of 1918, he and two of his flying buddies headed for Texas to make money.

"We looked like a million — still dressed in our uniforms and slickered-down hair -- so we went to the oil fields to make a million."

"The first job I had was driving a truck that you'd have to crank to start . . . we were fresh as hell . . . I was about 19 or 20 . . . we were dressed like $2,000 an hour, but were making $7.50 a day."

One cold Texas night the three decided they'd had enough of the oil fields and headed for the orange groves and beaches of California.

Arlen answered a newspaper ad for a "jack of all trades" and ended up driving a motorcycle, among other things, for a film laboratory. But it didn't last long. His motorcycle and a truck collided at the entrance to a motion picture studio. The truck belonged to the studio, so Arlen was offered a job when he recovered.

"They forgot an actor one day on location," he recalls with a laugh, "and asked if I could ride a horse."

For $250 a week, Arlen laughs, he could ride anything.

He got the part, his first. But it wasn't until there was a picture being made in Honolulu, "Vengeance of the Deep," that he got a starring role.

"They couldn't find a leading man who would go down in the diving outfit and swim well enough to get away from sharks in Kaneohe Bay."

Arlen would . . . and did . . . and can still recite the review from memory: "Devil fish, sea crabs, tiger sharks, all very interesting, but when the actor gets on dry land, p.u."

"That was my first review, and I have a feeling that p.u. meant it stunk. They didn't pay me the last week, so they gave me the working print of the film. I was the only actor in Hollywood with the working print of a film. The others would go around from studio to studio showing stills of what they had done -- not me, I had film."

He recalls that "Vengeance of the Deep" was shown in his hometown and he quickly received a letter from his father saying: "It looks like I'll have to leave town!"

And Arlen's father — a member of the first graduating class from the University of Minnesota Law School — did leave town.

"My mother sent dad to get me. Acting was a dirty word in those days, and mom was a feisty little woman, pretty much of an aristocrat. She sent dad to get her son out of that filthy, decadent business.

"Pop really didn't see anything wrong with Hollywood — or even "Vengeance of the Deep" — he thought I was a hell of an actor. He said the only thing wrong was that we didn't work.

"I was living at the old Hollywood Hotel, and what he didn't know was that Saturday night was drunk night. They used to pull the awnings at half mast to catch the drunks falling out of the windows. Then, early in the morning they'd put the awnings out full and let the drunks fall to the ground."

But Arlen, then known as Richard Van Mattimore, had something more going for him than most actors -- he owned a Locomobile, America's Rolls-Royce.

"The status symbol in pictures was what kind of a car was in front of the door. I rented the car out and it was earning more than I was — it was making $50 a day.

"I bought it at a fire sale, then borrowed enough to fix it up. I had to hire a chauffeur finally — and the only

Gondolas in the Bathroom

By Bill Wy Wilson

I WANTED to travel, but I wanted to remodel the house too, which is known as a conflict, since money can travel only so far, especially when you're traveling with it. My wife, Elma, had the same conflict. But she solved it with female domesticity. "We can travel and remodel the house at the same time," she announced. And before I could recover from this statement, we were already traveling — in the bathroom, wallpapering from top to bottom. "We can pretend we're gondoliering around Venice," Elma sang out, as we pasted up wallpaper depicting gondolas and Italian statues.

We worked our way around the room, humming arias while the pizza cooked and the red wine chilled. There was a sudden misadventure; my foot slipped into the toilet bowl, and my hand hit the flusher, and, swoosh, I lost a shoe. But I was philosophical about it; after all, every trip couldn't be perfect, and it was one of those traveling mishaps we'd laugh about later. Besides, it was only a scuffed-up old shoe that the dog had chewed on. Naturally our dog, Antonio, was traveling with us. Some traveling companion! He kept nipping at the gondolier, who was me, evidently in protest against my Italiano fortissimos.

If this is August, we must be in the dining room, or the Balkans. And for a change of scene my wife wallpapered east is east and I wallpapered west is west, and the twain met somewhere in the middle, with a motif resembling early Yugoslavian. Another mishap: our black cat fell into the paint bucket and, with her tail swishing furiously, she managed to paint two chairs with a bright red before I could get her into the paint remover. She yowled, streaked north, hit the wall, and disappeared into West Germany, which was actually Fred Schultz's backyard.

Next, we took a train to the cuisine area. The train was my wife's idea. I wanted to fly, but she wouldn't think of it. "How are we going to see the French countryside that way?" she wanted to know. Some imagination! So we completely redecorated the cuisine countryside. Out with the old sink and cupboards, in with the new dishwasher, built-ins, and garbage disposal. Young Larry, in a mishap of his own, dropped a jigsaw puzzle, one of those abstract kind, into the new disposal, and our drain was now more mixed up than Humpty Dumpty. Only a plumber with an I.P.Q. (Intelligence Plumber Quotient) of at least 125 could put it together again. Fortunately (I guess) we found one, but he traveled only by round-trip, at $40.30 per trip. He may have been a Parisian plumber, but he certainly had American ideas about money. "That's the way I'd like to travel," I told my wife.

Gondolas in the Bathroom

By Bill Wy Wilson

I WANTED to travel, but I wanted to remodel the house too, which is known as a conflict, since money can travel only so far, especially when you're traveling with it. My wife, Elma, had the same conflict. But she solved it with female domesticity. "We can travel and remodel the house at the same time," she announced. And before I could recover from this statement, we were already traveling -- in the bathroom, wallpapering from top to bottom. "We can pretend we're gondoliering around Venice," Elma sang out, as we pasted up wallpaper depicting gondolas and Italian statues.

We worked our way around the room, humming arias while the pizza cooked and the red wine chilled. There was a sudden misadventure; my foot slipped into the toilet bowl, and my hand hit the flusher, and, swoosh, I lost a shoe. But I was philosophical about it; after all, every trip couldn't be perfect, and it was one of those traveling mishaps we'd laugh about later. Besides, it was only a scuffed-up old shoe that the dog had chewed on. Naturally our dog, Antonio, was traveling with us. Some traveling companion! What Your Name Means

By LA REINA RULE

Send your name to La Reina Rule, Post Office Box 64151, Los Angeles, Calif. 90064, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: May we have brief data on JORDAN? — D.J., M.J., Long Beach.

JORDAN, English, was initiated as a surname by returning 12th century pilgrims who went to the Holy Land in the 3rd Crusade. Jordan, meaning "descending river," was adopted as a name by pilgrims who brought back with them bottles of Jordan River water from Palestine. The Jordan armorial shield granted in England in 1290 is blue, covered with a pattern of gold crosses overlaid with a rampant gold lion.

MISS RULE: Please analyze JOSEPH. — E.J., Long Beach.

JOSEPH, French and Belgian, honors an ancestor baptized with the Biblical name Joseph meaning "He shall add." The Joseph armorial shield from Tournai, Belgium, is gold, emblazoned with a large black heraldic bird without beak or feet.

MISS RULE: May we learn about HICKS? — K.H., Bellflower.

Hicks, English, developed from "Hick's-sone," which in the 12th century denoted "son of Richard," from the nickname Hick. Richard, a hero name, described "powerful ruler." The Hicks shield is red, crossed by a wavy gold stripe set between three gold fleurs-de-lis (lilies). The Hicks motto "Tout en bonne heure" is archaic French, meaning "All in good time." Robert Hicks of London came to Plymouth, Mass., on the ship Fortune in 1621.

MISS RULE: Please give history on MONCRIEF. — B.M., Long Beach.

MONCRIEF, Scottish, had its inception as the Gaelic town-name Monid-Croib meaning "hill of trees," a locality in Perthshire. The Moncrief armorial shield is silver, emblazoned with a red rampant lion placed below an ermine stripe. The Moncrief motto "Firma Spes" means "Firm Hope." Forefathers include Sir Henry Moncrieff, 1750-1827, a noted Scottish writer and prognosticator.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform on Riser. — I. R., Long Beach.

RISER, German and Swiss, originated as "Rieser," referring to an ancestral home on a water-channel or canal. The Rieser shield is red, decorated with a rampant gold panther on a black mound.

MISS RULE: Would like genealogy data on HILLEGASS—E.H., Gorden Grove. Grove.

HILLEGASS, German, traces to the source syllables "Hull-Gasse," which in dialectical medieval German described "home on a lane in a marsh."

Pool Your Efforts

By Steve Ellingson

IT IS difficult to conceive of a home improvement project that offers more benefits for an entire family than that of a swimming pool. What else can provide such healthy recreation for everyone? Unlike many investments, a swimming pool increases the value of your property. It provides an entertainment center for the most gracious kind of living. It adds to the beauty and glamour of your home and encourages everyone to get more of the right kind of exercise.

If you have delayed adding a swimming pool to your home because of the cost . . . delay no more. For today's project we have complete directions on pool planning and construction. You will be happy to know that your do-it-yourself pool will compare favorably with professionally built pools in construction detail, operation and appearance. Furthermore, this can be accomplished at a significantly lower cost.

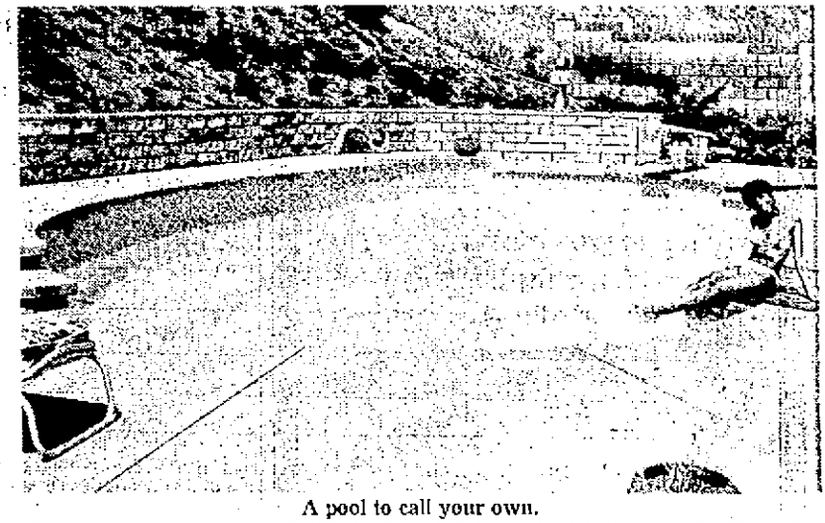

The pool shown here with Chelsea Brown of NBC's "Laugh-In" series is one of many typical styles and shapes which you may find suitable for your particular lot. The pattern for building your own pool illustrates eleven different shapes to choose from. It gives complete directions from laying out the area to taking your first plunge. Lots of pictures and illustrations, along with easy-to-read instructions, are included. Every detail is covered — the pattern leaves nothing to your imagination.

To obtain the easy-to-follow swimming pool pattern number 471, send $3 (add 25c per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to:

Mexican Beef Salad

Beef with a Mexican accent.

By Mildred Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

AS ALWAYS, dieting is IN this summer. But swimming, tennis and other outdoorsy activities really create an appetite. So solve the problem with a hearty salad of marinated California roast beef and other delightful ingredients.

The inherent good flavor of California beef becomes robust with its marinade of oil, vinegar, cayenne and chili powder. The Mexican accent makes it a double-good hot weather dish . . . all over the world, people who live in hot climes find spicy hot foods the perfect thing to eat.

Arrange this delightful marinated beef on crisp greens, onion and green pepper rings. Garnish with avocado slices and ripe olives if you want to splurge a little. Make it a glorious medley of colors and shapes . . . one in which the beef strips star as a sprightly central attraction.

Depend on California beef for your important summer menus. The home economists of the California Beef Council recommend marinating cuts of chuck, such as the flatiron roast, chuck steak or chuck strips in soy sauce with seasonings for tender economical meats to barbecue.

At Home on the Sea

"I GREW UP WITH boats. They were home," says 18-year-old Alex Kimball. And for the tall graduate of Anaheim's Western High School, home can be anywhere on a sabot or sloop—Chicago, Seattle, Long Beach or Australia.

Alex was one representative of the United States Sailing Association in Australian competition two years ago, and holds several local sailing titles, including first place in the 1966 Naples Sabot Nationals in Alamitos Bay.

Summer isn't all sailing for Alex, however. He leaves his home at 2941 Edgeley Place, Los Alamitos, early each morning to attend summer school in preparation for study in architecture. After working as a sailmaker in Seal Beach, he has a few hours to go out in his sabot or in bigger boats. His views:

—I grew up in New York where we cruised around — day sailing, we call it. It was just for relaxation and the fun of it. I didn't even try competition sailing until I came out here. For one reason, I was too young. But also, it just didn't occur to me how much enjoyment and excitement can be found in competition. I guess if somebody told me I had to choose between day sailing and competition now, I'd take competition.

—Let's take a hard sabot race. We all start out in a crowd, and it's like a multiple chess game. All the time you're wondering what the other players are going to do, how they're going to move. My brother Ed and I seldom race as a team. We like to compete against each other to build the excitement. It gets pretty high. I've seen guys bite clear through pipe stems.

—Weekends are the time to stretch out your sailing muscles. Southern California is about the best of the places I've sailed — at least for open ocean sailing. There are plenty of weekend races up and down the coast — just a couple of weeks ago we sailed on a big boat from Del Rey to San Diego in a night race. I like to sail hard at night, when a lot of the other boats are just goofing around.

—Sailing in my opinion definitely is a sport. Some people say it isn't because there isn't much exertion. They think ocean sailing is a lot of cruising and smiling. I don't agree. When you're wearing 75 pounds of wet sweat shirts to give the boat weight, when you're leaning over the boards and the winches are grinding and the booms flying, it's as strenuous as any sport. We have a joke of telling ourselves "this is fun" just when the going gets hardest.

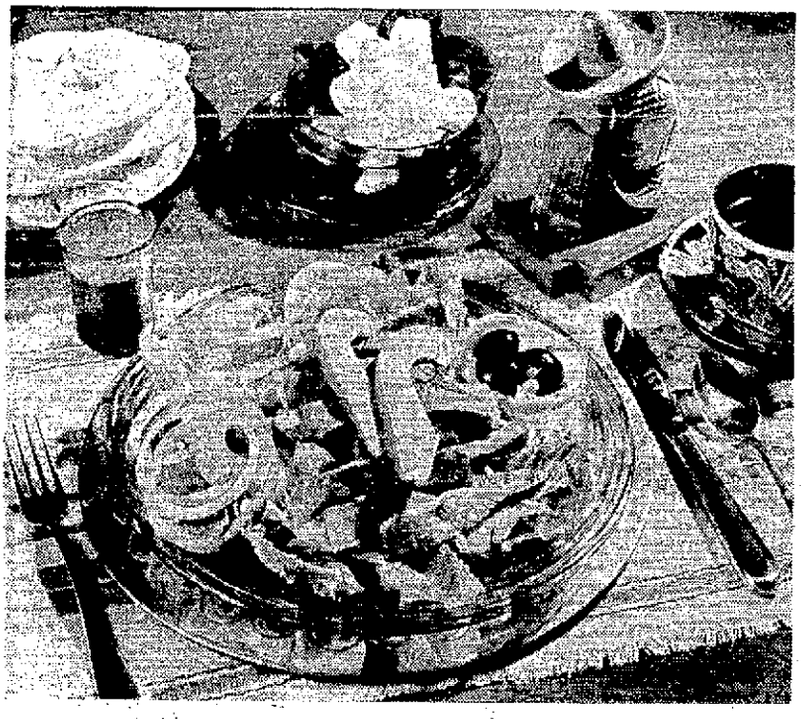

—For me sailing isn't a lonely thing. It's something I share with other people, trade stories about, and learn new things through. After a race we sit and tell each other how we could have done better — just wasting time, living with other people.

—Power boats are totally different. I can see a power boater's point of view, but it's like a different world.

—Probably my favorite type of race — if I could choose — is a match race between two boats, say 40-footers with six-man crews. The close tacking duels, the excitement of a one-to-one race is unbeatable.

—To someone just beginning to sail — and a lot more people are becoming interested — he should first learn the rules. It might be a good idea to get a sabot, take a few lessons, and experiment for himself. Once you get good with a sabot, you're on your way up. — Steve Stowe.

Abode of Ambition

By Ellen Krec

GETTING an estimate but doing the work themselves provided Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey D. Skinner with their ideal home in the California Heights section of Long Beach.

"With our two children we needed more space than our previous one-bedroom home," says Skinner, who spends full time with Lever Brothers and part-time as a painter of shoe cards and signs.

From a few blocks away the Skinners viewed the comfortable home they eventually purchased. Both Long Beach natives, they knew the area in which they preferred to live.

"I get the ideas and supervise," admits Mrs. Skinner. "My husband will try anything, so he does the work."

A middle-of-the-night idea transformed the postage stamp kitchen into a spacious, convenient, food-preparation center without major structural changes.

The kitchen was a one-woman affair cut up into small areas with none large enough to accommodate the inevitable guests who arrived. The wall between the kitchen and laundry area was removed and cabinets joined to form a light divider and counter.

A chance purchase of stainless steel oven and cooking unit at $50 supplied the kitchen necessities. Skinner, with an assist from his electronic engineer father-in-law, installed the oven in a wall cabinet and the stove was recessed in a formica-topped counter.

A $60 plus installation fee caused the dishwasher to be placed in the car and it took three days to learn how to install it in the kitchen.

The purchase price of the home was a comfortable $18,400. An additional $3,500 has been the improvement expenditure.

Kitchen estimate was $700, but the Skinners accomplished admirable results with an expenditure of $150, which included maple staining the old ash cabinets and installing some new ones.

To complement the open feeling between the food and laundry center, Skinner combined veneer trim with solid panels in the cabinets to save on the cost, then was stunned to discover the stain used on the new cabinets was no longer available. After experimenting with a combination of oak, walnut and maple, he arrived at an acceptable result, only to find that three months later a change in the color had taken place!

Another advantage in the kitchen change was it was no longer necessary to go through the living room to the bedrooms. A by-pass was created in the kitchen.

The first of the kitchen renovating steps was the vinyl mosaic floor and the $12 wood grain formica expenditure to top the counters. Three years since the counter completion proves it still is adequate.

Skinner learned to apply the formica without experience and after a few difficulties discovered it worked better when it was warmed in the oven.

With space for a circular dining table in the kitchen Skinner feels he has earned the position near the window and away from any work.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey D. Skinner find the companion chairs in their family room ideal for restful reading.

Randy, 4, and Laura, 7, were the main reasons for the move to the three-bedroom home, but at the time there really were only two bedrooms. A third was contrived from a storage room between the family room and the garage.

The only addition to the home was the professionally contracted family room and bath. The reason was time and Skinner knew it would take him more than a year with his limited time to complete such a project. He did manage to find the time to install the tile and paint.

Forced air installation was still another necessity when the Skinners realized the home was nearly always cold. So with a collection of how-to-do-it books and the usual estimate of $1,000, Skinner installed heating system for a total of $300 and the heating inspector said it is among the finest systems he has ever seen!

The 20-year-old dwelling takes kindly to change and, rather than lose the spacious rear yard and patio, the Skinners had the home lengthened to include the garage.

"We bought the home on the spur of the moment," Skinner says.

Mrs. Skinner adds: "We thought it was in such excellent condition there would be no work to speak of . . . but we haven't stopped improving it since we moved in!"

In the four years some changes have changed. A taste for provincial was developed around a turned post addition to "dressup" the facade. Recently remodeling removed the ex-

THE SOUTHLAND AT HOME

Dining area blends into living room, while grille doors shield the kitchen from view.

cess trim in a newer appreciation for contemporary simplicity.'

With the exception of paint and a mantel addition to the fireplace, the furnishings made the change in the living room. A blend of Spanish contemporary and some antiques creates a comfortable conversational area and semi-secluded space for dining or the occasional bridge game.

"We play volleyball twice a week, belong to a dinner club and are active in our church," says Mrs. Skinner. "Aside from that our hobbies either make money for us, such as the sign painting, or save money in remodeling."

One clever addition to the living room is the four-inch-wide divider exactly sofa height, which makes an excellent place for an arm or a coffee cup.

With multi-color obscure glass forming the chandelier, interesting light patterns develop in the evening.

In the narrow space between kitchen and bedrooms, the Skinners placed what has been called "the results of a very expensive evening of bridge — a curio cabinet discovered at 5 o'clock on the way to a friend's home."

One window was removed and a closet added to Randy's room along with a bookcase headboard. Randy still prefers his sister's company in the evening but shares his room daytimes with the dog and cat. The electric chord organ consoles the children while mother plays the piano in the family room.

Skinner laughs at the time he took the organ apart to look for a non-existent speaker which Mrs Skinner found an asset. She says: "I can't imagine 'Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star' piped through the house!"

Only the tub remains in the bath where a low pullman was installed. All white paint including the shutters was the color decision, since the room is small. Even the blue tile was painted white with Varathane and the Skinners agree that the $3 investment has made the bathroom more attractive to them for the past three years.

Black-painted bars were tipped with drapery pikes when the Skinners found several at 15 cents to form the towel holders.

Father's first wallpapering attempt furnished the zinnia covered room for little Laura. Her bedroom furniture is a portion of a $15 purchase which Mrs. Skinner discovered at a manse sale. Tweed-topped twin beds have been a more recent addition.

All the scrap lumber went into shelves for Laura's room. The corner bookcase was an exercise in ingenuity when each piece was cut at an angle when attached to the wall, creating an irregular and useful storage for toys and books.

A second Skinner innovation is the doll-house-shape storage with pegs at the sides for hats.

The original use was to form headboards and they were lighted above each bed, but the Skinners preferred using the units individually.

Like father, daughter is a prize winning poster painter with a ribbon to show for her clown who expresses cents. The lamps were hung at each side of the entrance to delight the incomers with their rare design.

Both Skinners admit an antipathy toward gardening but the camellias grow to four feet without special care or even water.

"Fortunately the flowers thrive on neglect," says Skinner. "There's no time for another hobby!"

the "Don't clown around with guns" thought.

The master bedroom is an amazing collection of hobbies and talents all surrounded by paneled walls. An extensive electric train collection called "the ulcer preventer" fills one-third of the room. Underfoot is a 12-foot-by-15-foot handhooked rug which required three years of work by Skinner's grandmother. The rug is a muted combination of floral blocks and geometric shapes and will be the basis for the future decorating scheme

A narrow private patio borders the family room where comfortable furnishings and entertainment equipment make the room pleasant and secluded.

In keeping with the unusual approach to anything, Skinner discovered a wormy picture frame he liked, so he painted the ship to fill it!

The bath was a bit too simple on completion and a party was imminent, so Skinner utilized his talent for pin striping and gold trimmed the room.

A gift of pink and white tile made the shower installation most reasonable and, two days following completion, Mrs. Skinner found a perfect-match shower curtain.

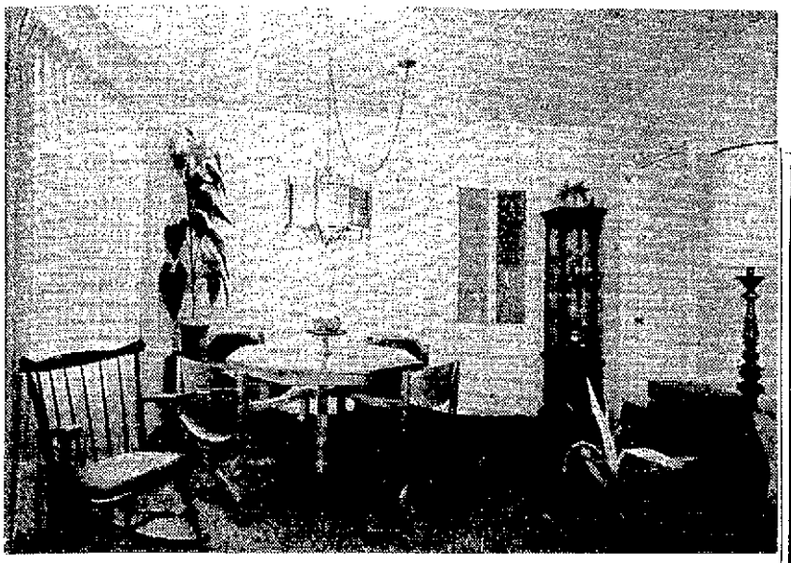

"The garage is my room," says Skinner, and for several months it has been the scene of custom painting his truck.

Nothing has daunted the determined Skinners, including a desire for more than usual facade lighting. Two lamps were constructed from black painted wood frames surrounding four clear glass ashtrays easily purchased for 29 cess trim in a newer appreciation for contemporary simplicity.

With the exception of paint and a mantel addition to the fireplace, the furnishings made the change in the living room. A blend of Spanish contemporary and some antiques creates a comfortable conversational area and semi-secluded space for dining or the occasional bridge game.

"We play volleyball twice a week, belong to a dinner club and are active in our church," says Mrs. Skinner. "Aside from that our hobbies either make money for us, such as the sign painting, or save money in remodeling."

One clever addition to the living room is the four-inch-wide divider exactly sofa height, which makes an excellent place for an arm or a coffee cup.

With multi-color obscure glass forming the chandelier, interesting light patterns develop in the evening.

In the narrow space between kitchen and bedrooms, the Skinners placed what has been called "the results of a very expensive evening of bridge — a curio cabinet discovered at 5 o'clock on the way to a friend's home."

One window was removed and a closet added to Randy's room along with a bookcase headboard. Randy still prefers his sister's company in the evening but shares his room daytimes with the dog and cat. The electric chord organ consoles the children while mother plays the piano in the family room.

Skinner laughs at the time he took the organ apart to look for a non-existent speaker which Mrs Skinner found an asset. She says: "I can't imagine 'Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star' piped through the house!"

Only the tub remains in the bath where a low pullman was installed. All white paint including the shutters was the color decision, since the room is small. Even the blue tile was painted white with Varathane and the Skinners agree that the $3 investment has made the bathroom more attractive to them for the past three years.

Black-painted bars were tipped with drapery pikes when the Skinners found several at 15 cents to form the towel holders.

Father's first wallpapering attempt furnished the zinnia covered room for little Laura. Her bedroom furniture is a portion of a $15 purchase which Mrs. Skinner discovered at a manse sale. Tweed-topped twin beds have been a more recent addition.

All the scrap lumber went into shelves for Laura's room. The corner bookcase was an exercise in ingenuity when each piece was cut at an angle when attached to the wall, creating an irregular and useful storage for toys and books.

A second Skinner innovation is the doll-house-shape storage with pegs at the sides for hats.

The original use was to form headboards and they were lighted above each bed, but the Skinners preferred using the units individually.

Like father, daughter is a prize winning poster painter with a ribbon to show for her clown who expresses the "Don't clown around with guns" thought.

The master bedroom is an amazing collection of hobbies and talents all surrounded by paneled walls. An extensive electric train collection called "the ulcer preventer" fills one-third of the room. Underfoot is a 12-foot-by-15-foot hand-hooked rug which required three years of work by Skinner's grandmother. The rug is a muted combination of floral blocks and geometric shapes and will be the basis for the future decorating scheme

A narrow private patio borders the family room where comfortable furnishings and entertainment equipment make the room pleasant and secluded.

In keeping with the unusual approach to anything, Skinner discovered a wormy picture frame he liked, so he painted the ship to fill it!

The bath was a bit too simple on completion and a party was imminent, so Skinner utilized his talent for pin striping and gold trimmed the room.

A gift of pink and white tile made the shower installation most reasonable and, two days following completion, Mrs. Skinner found a perfect-match shower curtain.

"The garage is my room," says Skinner, and for several months it has been the scene of custom painting his truck.

Nothing has daunted the determined Skinners, including a desire for more than usual facade lighting. Two lamps were constructed from black painted wood frames surrounding four clear glass ashtrays easily purchased for 29 cents. The lamps were hung at each side of the entrance to delight the incomers with their rare design.

Both Skinners admit an antipathy toward gardening but the camellias grow to four feet without special care or even water.

"Fortunately the flowers thrive on neglect," says Skinner. "There's no time for another hobby!"

GONDOLAS IN THE BATHROOM

as we followed the seasons from room to room around the world, with time out one month to repair the heating system. And for a while I looked more like a stoker in a ship's engine room than I did like a bon-vivant tourist. But the wife looked beautiful. Every three weeks she'd buy a new outfit to match the place we were visiting. "A woman has to look chic on the Riviera, you know," is the way she explained our dwindling bank balance.

So there we were, traveling with wallpaper and paint around the Bedroom-on-the-Riviera, finally meeting at the new Mediterranean-blue drapes, with my wife in a $15 bikini.

"Elma," I said, "a woman of your age (she's 30) shouldn't be wearing such a bikini."

"It goes with the motif," is all she said.

It seemed that the house was now constantly full of unused wallpaper, half-painted cats and touring neighbors who traveled around to see the sights. They acted like tourists, too, as they talked loudly in night-school French and Spanish, while munching our Vienna sausages and drinking our imported spirits. One neighbor even sold French postcards!

Somehow I began to get the feeling that my wife was confusing reality with fantasy. This was reinforced one night when our 10-year-old daughter casually mentioned that she was going into her room to read. My wife stopped her. She stamped a "ticket," destination Norway, before she would let our daughter "travel" into the bedroom, which we had just remodeled in late Scandinavian. Swedish meatballs, naturally, were simmering in a hotplate. A sauna bath, if I knew my wife, woud not be far behind, and maybe even some of those wet branches to flay ourselves with.

And then came the day when I took a very close look at our bank balance. I immediately got this nervous twitch in my stomach. "Look here, dear," I told my traveling companion, "we'd better not do any more traveling for a while."

"But, honey, we just have to see the Egyptian pyramids." So two days later, there we were, standing on saw horses, which, according to Elma, were humped camels, and nailing Egyptian ash to the walls of the family room. I must admit that Elma, seasoned traveler that she'd become, remained in the spirit of things; and that very night she did a rather wild belly dance, much to the delight of our neighbors.

This didn't help my nervous stomach any, so I went to our family doctor. He prescribed some pink pills and said, "You need a change of scenery. Have you ever thought of an ocean voyage to settle your nerves?" I wondered if I should try to explain. I decided against it.

Later, when I told Elma what the doctor had said, she was exuberant. "That's marvelous!" she exclaimed. "Now I know what kind of travelling we can do in the guest room. We can do it in a calm South Pacific motif, with sailing ships and hula girls and soft blue waves and . . ."

"Hold it!" I cried. I rushed past her, gathered up my toothbrush, a clean pair of skivvies and my old painted cat, then kissed my daughter, patted the half-painted cat, then kissed by wife, and said: "The doctor knows best. I'll send you a picture postcard or two, in color." And I went out the door. As I reached the sidewalk my wife, silhouetted in the doorway, waved and called, "Don't forget to take your pills, dear, and send lots of picture postcards. We can paste them on that blank wall in the kitchen."

Holy mackerel! And I hurried off toward the merchant marine hiring hall. If I was lucky, I'd soon be on a restful ocean voyage to someplace like, say, Vietnam, without any special motifs, or gondola wallpaper, or too many paste-up picture postcards.

Joys of Toys for Adults

By Ellen Krec

FROM now on instead of insisting the children pick up the toys from the living room and put them away, you will be forced to insist they return the toys to the living room where they belong! Tabletop toys or grownup games are big and beautiful on the home furnishings scene.

Where a fast cocktail could enhance a lagging conversation, toys are addicting but not a social problem.

I should have remembered the time I tossed Blockhead, the children's sculpture puzzle which made its debut in San Francisco's posh bars as a gambling game, on the coffee table and a dozen guests added the swaying pieces amid much merriment.

It is no longer accidental . . . . plan the casual pick-me-up as an invitation to the curious or shy.

Moreddi has a wild collection of toys from fun-loving Italy where Danese produced six pinwheels in plastic. When sand (or sugar, even salt) sifts down a series of complicated turns, the colorful wheels turn on.

A possible hypnotist's tool, the wheels will guarantee a break in any boring dissertation.

And for the non-smoker there is an ash tray that says something besides ashes. Artimedas designed the colorful plastic squares with the groovy center to provide a plaything when the companion black ball slides into center. I suppose it could crush the flame, but no one ever said toys should be useful.

Thank goodness the tabletop art books have returned to the shelf where they belong! Whoever thought a coldly sterile collection of photographs would be appealing . . . and they always had the paper coats intact!

And for the more sensual, there are clear sensitive glass sculptural shapes with colored water waiting for the warmth of your hand to help them bubble and flow. What power! Take one to a party . . . it will give you something to hold in your hand in place of a glass!

In a group, Danese's colored balls in clear resin perform their sculptural duty, but at the same time you wonder what the psychedelic baseball game was really like . . . and who caught the globes!

Fun loving accents also head for the walls when Moreddi brings the nursery look into the living room where it really belongs! Pressed paper forms the backing for boldly colorful animals. The hangings include the most seductive slit-eyed black bear and a friendly duck with an oversized beak whose quack is quiet.

And if you wonder what day it is, just run up the flag! "The Flag" just barely resembles the old railroad drop when messages were picked up without slowing the train.

"The Flag" is a perpetual calendar that reminds you of the passing days. I suppose it really wouldn't matter if one of the days turns up missing. After all, you have hundreds more.

demonstrate that quality each Christmas when they hold an underwater Christmas party complete with Santa Claus (air tanks on his back rather than a pack of gifts) and presents!

The Sea Festival event will open at 7 p.m. to permit show-goers to browse through booths sponsored by underwater equipment manufacturers and diving organizations. The winning still photos will also be on display, both black and white and color prints. At 8 p.m., television personalities Tom and Ann Malone ("Sports Set," Channel 13, Sundays at 9:30 p.m.) will take the rostrum to serve as masters of ceremony for a 2½-hour showing of award-winning films.

Long Beach is an appropriate place for the event any year, but even more so in 1969 because last night's Grand Marshal for the Sea Festival Spectacular and Parade of Lights along the shoreline was Jacques-Yves Cousteau himself, the man whose invention made it all possible.

Lil's Memories

THE MOVIES, MR. GRIFFITH AND ME. By Lillian Gish, with Ann Pinchot. Prentice-Hall, Inc., $7.95.

Lillian Gish, born in 1896, faced her first audience at the turn of the century. Billed as Baby Lillian, she made her debut as an actress in the village of Rising-sun, in northern Ohio. A road company was putting on "In Convict's Stripes."

Lillian, with her sister Dorothy, born in 1898, were probably the greatest sister team in film history. Separately or together they appeared, often for the great D. W. Griffith, who figures much in these pages, in such silent classics as "The Birth of a Nation," "Orphans of the Storm," "Broken Blossoms," and countless other films. Lillian later gained success on the Broadway stage. She was one of the few silent stars who made the successful transition to sound movies, and she has appeared in TV dramas.

This, her autobiography, is the autobiography also of the movies, and her golden days were synonymous with the industry's. The greats of the films and the stage — Valentino, Pickford, Garbo, Von Stroheim, John Gielgud, among them, and above all Griffith, stride the stage again in Lillian Gish's pages. — N. H.

Heart Plot

THE TODD DOSSIER, by Collier Young. Delacorte, $4.95.

The topical novel may rarely survive the problem of the time it chronicles, but when it is well told it has its reason for being and, like "The Todd Dossier" can be both entertaining, a bit on the hair-raising side, and thought provoking as well.

Collier Young seizes on a matter that has been much in people's minds of late — some ethical aspects of the heart transplant. Hollis Todd, one of the richest men in the world, is at the point of death. An Olympic track star is killed in an automobile accident. His heart is given to multimillionaire Todd.

There is something too pat about the whole thing. Dr. Charles Everett believes. Delving deep, he finds a masterly plot to keep Todd alive.—N.H.

RICHARD ARLEN

reason he had a uniform was that he got it as a costume and never turned it in.

"The car couldn't work before 10 in the morning or after 4 in the afternoon — I had to go places too. With a name like Richard Van Mattimore, a chauffeur and Locomobile they thought I was a millionaire. Paramount was terribly impressed."

But everything was "on the cuff," Arlen admits, including his car and his fashion-plate clothes.

Although he hasn't changed much, he no longer has to live "on the cuff." During the days when he was making thousands, he invested heavily in San Fernando real estate, and up until World War II owned a 10,000-acre working ranch in Northridge.

His current home he bought in 1944 "over the telephone," gutted it, put in a pool and guest house and "since I fired the gardener a couple of weeks ago" takes care of the entire acre and a half by himself.

It's big enough to entertain his friends and relatives — which include a son, Richard, a South Laguna architect, and a daughter, Mrs. Norma Maurer, wife of the vice president of the United California Bank, and two grandchildren.

"I'm always busy," he says with a typical Arlen smile, "even though I still get up at 5 a.m. — I can't break the habit."

Looking to the future, he claims he'd "like to get enough ambition to go into production — to make entertainment."

"I don't want to go to the theater to cry . . . or go to the theater to worry about somebody else's problems . . . and, most of all, I don't want to see smut."

He doesn't go to the movies very often.

Chiseled in Stone

PEOPLE ARE FUNNY, even in the presence of the Grim Reaper himself.

The tombstones are filled with the proof of it, and "The Last Laugh: A Completely New Collection of Funny Old Epitaphs" has combed the cemeteries for the funniest of post-mortem commentaries.

The book is published by Hallmark Editions at $2.50; its characters have been disinterred by Gail Peterson and revitalized with likenesses by illustrator John Trotta. The professions seem to have drawn out the best wit of the epitaph writers:

Here Doctor Fisher lies interr'd
Who filled the half of this churchyard.

And this one for a dentist:
View this gravestone with gravity
He is filling his last cavity.

The deceased is memorialized thus on a gravestone in Winslow, Maine:
Here lies one Wood
enclosed in wood
One wood within another.
The outer wood is very good,
We cannot praise the other.

And in St. Botolph's, England:
Here lies Bernard Lightfoot who was accidentally killed in the forty fifth year of his age.
Erected by his grateful family.

And Try Not to Miss . . .

A PLACE IN THE WOODS. By Helen Hoover. Knopf, $5.95.

The author of the warmly praised "The Gift of a Deer" tells how she and her husband shook the dust of Chicago's streets off their shoes and lived on the edge of Minnesota's most northern wilderness and made friends with the wild animals.

MULBERRY TROUT. By Ogden Bigelow. Tuttle, $5.

The most memorable experiences of a lifetime weekend trout fisherman, who explains how he sometimes outsmarts them and sometimes makes himself seem foolish.

EMBASSY. By Stephen Coulter. Coward-McCann, $5.95.

Forty-eight hours of crisis in the American embassy in Paris, with the fate of a high Soviet official, about to defect, hanging in the balance.

MR. CAMPION'S FARTHING. By Youngman Carter. Morrow, $4.95.

Margery Allingham's famous Albert Campion involved in the affair of a missing Russian scientist. Youngman Carter, in whose hands Campion now rests, is the husband of the late, great British mystery writer.

THE COFFER DAMS. By Kamala Markandaya. John Day, $5.95.

The problems in human relationships as well as engineering that develop when an Englishman builds a great dam in India.

Cats Have Come a Long Way

By Eleanor Avery Price

DOGS BEAT cats to the New World, and for numerous generations the dog was the Eskimos' companion, also friend and food for the Indians all the way to the southernmost tip of South America. But when Spanish explorers came to our shores, they soon began importing cats to help control rodents that ravaged grains and to reduce the spread of plague. Without cats, settlers, soldiers, friars alike would have suffered tremendous losses.

At first, Indians didn't like cats because mice and rats constituted part of the Indian diet, and they didn't want to share their rodent-meat with felines. Eventually some of the Indian tribes discovered that cats were as palatable as dogs. Others learned that their papooses and older children could cradle and love kittens and cats, and so felines were adopted as sort of blood brothers.

There has been very little written about early day Mission cats, but we know they were appreciated because doors of some missions still contain small openings for the coming and going of cats. What was done about drafts and insects is anyone's guess. (Today's cat can come and go through installed pet doors such as the Johnson Pet-Dor pictured in this article. It is constructed of long-life, sturdy anodized aluminum and flexible rubber, with permanent magnets keeping it shut when not in use and a locking panel for security).

Look, ma, no doorknob!

When migrations westward began, domestic animals went along. Many stories have been given about cats on these trips. The most famous fictional story is the one written by Mark Twain about the gold rush cat, Tom Quartz, who wanted to accompany men into mines, not catch rats. A true story is of a man who took along little else than cotton for his wife to spin, a barrel of whisky to open a tavern, and kittens to complete his family.

I want to repeat and repeat the need to keep flea population down so your cat (and dog) won't be miserable. Clean the house often with a vacuum cleaner. Use a safe spray indoors and one outdoors, too. If you use a flea collar, check to be sure it isn't causing a skin reaction. If you shorten a flea collar, don't leave ends lying around for a pet or child to chew.

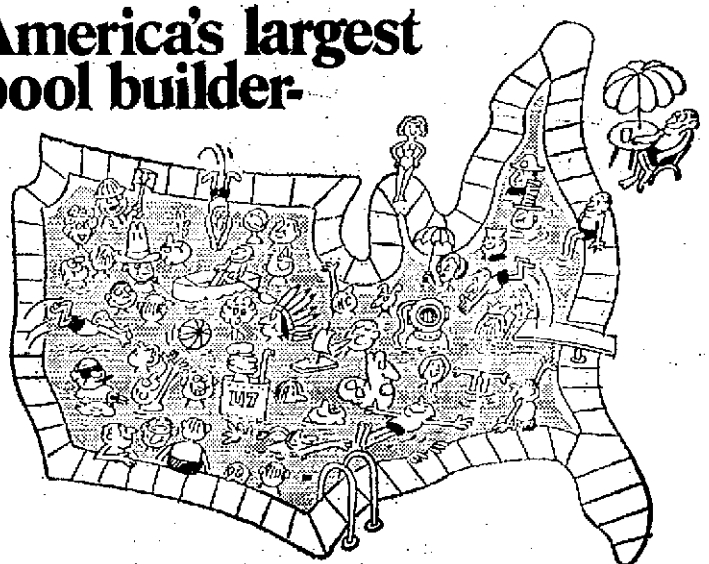

And now for a real good news about a flea killer. Doctors at the entomology department at the University of California at Los Angeles have found that finely ground silica aerogel gives a 100 per cent kill of insects such as fleas, mites, cockroaches, ants, termites, bedbugs, etc., yet is perfectly safe for warm-blooded animals. In fact, it has been used in face powder for years. The powder causes an insect to shrivel and die by a physical action, and so may prevent pests from becoming immune to it. In pet shops, it is called Penguin-Down Dri Die. (My grateful thanks to Lompoc Valley Kennel Club for this information).

The wooden hinges of this box are copied from a pair made by an early pioneer. He also pegged his box together. Screws are used for ours, the heads covered with dowel buttons. Pattern 362, which gives actual-size cutting guides and directions for the box and a canvas wood carrier, is 50c. It also is in the Antique Reproduction Packet No. 53 which is $1.50.

THE JOYS OF TOYS FOR ADULTS

ble (formerly cocktail table) to a Loo table.

In adult accessories (which sounds like gray hair or arthritis) Frank Bros.' potpourri of playthings includes Newtonian Demonstrator's action/reaction theory, the "Swinging Wonder," a collection of steel balls on walnut or lucite frames for a kinetic attraction on your table.

For the nervous hands a group of attached lucite blocks fling out in a casual array waiting for a pick-up to return them to a single block. "Multiplication" is the name of the game.

Useful? A marble tick-tack-toe which makes a neat bookend. The ticks are chrome circles and tacks are crosses which drop into winning or losing holes. A second TTT is formed from lucite cubes which fill a slender wood frame and these are known as "Naughts and crosses."

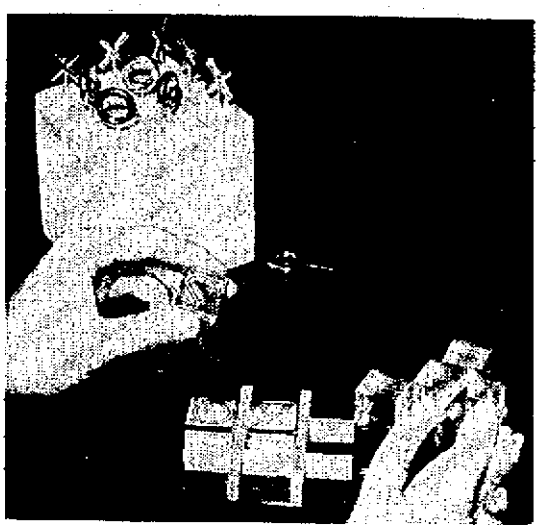

A frustrated builder would delight in the colorful plastic forms of the wood ball and square which fits to rise in your own architectural form.

Or the round pegs in the square block . . . The wood curls which fit neatly into a square package, both attractive enough alone but devilish as a time consumer!

Do-it-yourself pinwheels or tops can be created from a package of flat colored cardboard circles. The same circles with rubber bands turn into a dimensional wall sculpture.

Even the New York Museum of Modern Art is part of the act with a kaleidoscope complete with mod-nude.

Finally, blocks for the big kids. Four slender rectangles turn about to create several animals and the fun comes when you mix-match them!

Old-timey tick-tack-toe is updated with solid marble and chrome and upnamed Naughts and Crosses.

Curls of wood find a way into busy hands and eventually into a solid block.

Watch Your Language!

By Margaret O. Slicer

UNLIKE MANY people of my age, I pride myself on really being with it when it comes to the younger generation. I mean I really dig them, man, although we do have a few problems language-wise.

Take hangups. Bless you, children. I've had them for years, especially on Monday mornings. I hang up sheets, and shirts, and diapers and blue jeans. You name it. For your information, I usually use spring-type clothespins.

And I frequently get pretty uptight too. But not for long, mind you. You see, when my uptightness starts to bug me, I head for home and remove my girdle. Works wonders. Could it be that young people are uptight because of all those confining clothes — blue jeans, etc.?

We do our best in other ways. When our son says, "Man, I need some bread," his father and I give it to him. Sometimes it is whole wheat, sometimes rye. Sometimes I even spread peanut butter on it just for kicks.

And when he begged us for wheels, we gave him two — a nice red bicycle. Never could understand his attitude about that, though.

At our house, I mean "pad," we all try to do our own thing. I mean I do the housework, cook, clean, iron and the like. My husband goes to his job, and we try to convince the kids that their own thing is, for the moment, going to school. It gets a bit sticky there, but we keep trying. Every now and then we make up signs and walk up and down in front of the house. The signs read "Our son is a bum!" or "Our daughter wears Army shoes!" or things like that. This usually sends them back to school in a hurry, mainly to avoid being seen with us.

There are times, though, when they do seem to understand us. Last week I went shopping with my daughter for a new purse — a mistake right there — and she proceeded to pick out something for me that looked like a cross between an old-fashioned Gladstone and a gunny-sack.

I looked her straight in the eyes (after pulling her hair apart to find them) and I said, "Sweetie, that's just not my bag!"

And do you know, she hugged me, and said I was really with it. I don't know what brought it on, but it was nice while it lasted.

Gourmet's Guide

by Todd Thomey

Southland Dining at its Finest in the Long Beach and Orange County Area

IN CONVERSATIONS all over town, the name of a certain restaurant pops up with astonishing frequency.

When businessmen are chatting on the phone, one is apt to say: "OK, Ralph, it's a deal. I'll meet you at the Manhattan for lunch."

Among women discussing plans for a sociable evening, this remark is likely to be heard: "First we'll all get together for dinner at the Manhattan. And then we'll —"

It's not by chance that Francois Manhattan, 1909 E. Fourth St. near Cherry Avenue, has for years maintained its reputation as one of Long Beach's very best and most beloved restaurants. The staff, headed by manager Van Gasaway, goes all-out day and night to provide its patrons with the finest international-American dishes, prepared with rich sauces and a dash or two of imagination.

No. 1 chef Charles Cutshaw, working with prized recipes, prepares such entrees as Francois' turkey Marco Polo, breast of capon Jerusalem, lobster thermidor, beef Stroganoff, stuffed fresh mushrooms, veal picatta with rigatoni, chicken cacciatore, frog legs saute meuniere, luscious prime rib au jus and thick, top-quality charcoal broiled steaks. Because of rising costs, some restaurants no longer include beverage and dessert. The Manhattan's table d' hote dinner is still sensibly priced ($3 to $6.25 with many items in the $3 to $3.75 range.) It is still a feast fit for a duke and duchess, including assorted hors d' oeuvres, soup in a tureen, beautiful salad or spaghetti, beverage and ice cream or sherbet.

Other specialties include whole flaming duck for two persons (a spectacular dish often imitated but never duplicated by other restaurants); whole flaming chicken, chateaubriand bouquetiere, rack of lamb bouquetiere, Caesar's salad and such flaming desserts as crepes Suzette, cherries jubilee and baked Alaska.

The chief hostess is Tharon Gasaway, Van's wife, but no one calls her by her first name. For years she's been known as Sam. The staff includes head bartender Sad Sadler, a Manhattan employe for 18 years, and a squad of the finest waiters and waitresses in town.

IN CONVERSATIONS all over town, the name of a certain restaurant pops up with astonishing frequency.

When businessmen are chatting on the phone, one is apt to say: "OK, Ralph, it's a deal. I'll meet you at the Manhattan for lunch."

Among women discussing plans for a sociable evening, this remark is likely to be heard: "First we'll all get together for dinner at the Manhattan. And then we'll —"

It's not by chance that Francois Manhattan, 1909 E. Fourth St. near Cherry Avenue, has for years maintained its reputation as one of Long Beach's very best and most beloved restaurants. The staff, headed by manager Van Gasaway, goes all-out day and night to provide its patrons with the finest international-American dishes, prepared with rich sauces and a dash or two of imagination.

No. 1 chef Charles Cutshaw, working with prized recipes, prepares such entrees as Francois' turkey Marco Polo, breast of capon Jerusalem, lobster thermidor, beef Stroganoff, stuffed fresh mushrooms, veal picatta with rigatoni, chicken cacciatore, frog legs saute meuniere, luscious prime rib au jus and thick, top-quality charcoal broiled steaks. Because of rising costs, some restaurants no longer include beverage and dessert. The Manhattan's table d' hote dinner is still sensibly priced ($3 to $6.25 with many items in the $3 to $3.75 range.) It is still a feast fit for a duke and duchess, including assorted hors d' oeuvres, soup in a tureen, beautiful salad or spaghetti, beverage and ice cream or sherbet.

SAM GASAWAY
She's Really Tharon

Caricature by Larry La Vole

Other specialties include whole flaming duck for two persons (a spectacular dish often imitated but never duplicated by other restaurants); whole flaming chicken, chateaubriand bouquetiere, rack of lamb bouquetiere, Caesar's salad and such flaming desserts as crepes Suzette, cherries jubilee and baked Alaska.

The chief hostess is Tharon Gasaway, Van's wife, but no one calls her by her first name. For years she's been known as Sam. The staff includes head bartender Sad Sadler, a Manhattan employe for 18 years, and a squad of the finest waiters and waitresses in town.

KENNEDY TELECAST

Personal Crisis and TV

By JACK GOULD

New York Times Service

The constantly expanding forms of television's influence on the national political scene were illustrated in Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's telecast on the tragic incident involving the drowning of Mary Jo Kopechne, a former secretary and campaign worker for his brother, the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

After pleading guilty to leaving the scene of the accident in Edgartown on Martha's Vineyard, Mass., Kennedy avoided all questioning on details and said he would make a statement on television.

This was the second instance of a prominent political figure taking to the video screen in a moment of personal crisis. In 1952 the then Sen. Richard M. Nixon, in his famous "Checkers speech," salvaged his career after a controversy over his campaign funds. Kennedy's appeal to the people to advise him whether to continue in office was, from a practical standpoint, not too different.

NEITHER tactic would have been possible before electronics and the power of TV. In the days of print media alone, both incidents would have been exhaustively covered — as indeed they were — but there is simply no substitute for the experience of seeing for oneself the high drama of a prominent individual with his back temporarily to the wall. In television terms, the appeal is not unlike that of sports; suspense and uncertainty of the outcome are there.

But there would appear to be a new element in TV's handling of such episodes. The viewer is exposed not only to the substance of the remarks, but is inevitably influenced by the human equation of personality. When listening to—and watching — Kennedy the viewer could not be immune to additional overriding factors, including his de-

Innocence, Anarchy, Soul

"Masters of Pop: Innocence, Anarchy and Soul," the best in rock which Variety says "captures the heady adolescent vitality so often absent from teen-beat shows," will air at 9 p.m., Thursday, Ch. 7.

The British production traces the genesis of rock from its country and blues origins to the present through representative musical selections from the several eras. "Innocence" includes such "oldies" as "Sea Cruise," "Ready Teddy," "Personality" and "Blue Suede Shoes."

Among the "Anarchy" selections are "I'm a Man," "Whole Lot of Shakin' " and various psychedelic numbers. "Soul" includes "Knock on Wood," "Put Out the Light," "Shake It" and others.

"Masters of Pop: Innocence, Anarchy and Soul" features 20 pop stars performing a cross-section of songs and sounds from the three periods. Performers include Lulu, Julie Driscoll, Brian Auger and the Trinity, Lance LeGault, Don Lang, Chris Farlowe and Lonnie Donegan.

GEORGE ERES, Editor

PAN AND FAN MAIL

. . . I WOULDN'T have missed the important parts of TV coverage of landing on the moon, take off, etc.

But TV and radio can be an awful bore, with their continued yak, yak—in other words, repeat, repeat, the same thing over and over.

. . . On this moon deal, I was on Ch. 11, a lucky station for me. They were broadcasting the Dodger-Giant game. When the landing happened they closed off the baseball and let the players and fans see the landing, then went back to the game.

. . . Walter Cronkite can drive you just as crazy as the other fellow.

Have you ever stopped to think men are talking themselves to death since we have TV and radio, night and day. They are bound to run out of something to say, so we get a lot of junk talk. I would love to have Walter Cronkite read this . . .

Mrs. Lulu Tuttle,
Long Beach

(The letter has been forwarded).

WHAT HAS become of those three great guys—Baxter Ward, Carl George and Jim Healy? Bill Bonds and his group are great also, but we sure miss our three favorites.

Mrs. Peg Brown,
Stanton

(Ward dropped out of the field to make his unsuccessful bid for L.A. mayor and has not indicated when or if he'll return to telecasting; George is a field reporter with Ch. 2 and Healy can be heard on KFWB radio).

COULD ANYONE please tell me who the blonde little girl in the King Family is? She is the youngest of the little girls who perform each week (I don't mean Marilyn's little blonde girl) and is so darling we'd love to know which part of the family she belongs to. I was wondering whether she could be King Cousin Candy's daughter . . .?

Mrs. Roann D. Gray,
Long Beach

(She is; name's Kristan, 3 years old).

Papa Doc

Duvalier speaks of his self-image, his relations with the United States, and Haiti's role in the world.

Haiti has been described by correspondents as a "Nightmare Republic" and a "Fortress of Evil," and Dr. Duvalier as "probably the most feared head of state in the world. . . . a sinister little man with the power of life and death who hides in an ornate armor-guarded palace." American tourists are steered past the hovels of Dr. Duvalier's "new Towns."

Governor Rockefeller visited Haiti on July 1 and 2 and encountered the largest and most enthusiastic reception since he and a group of experts embarked upon a "listen and learn" tour of Latin America two months ago.

GEORGE ERES, Editor

PAN AND FAN MAIL

. . . I WOULDN'T have missed the important parts of TV coverage of landing on the moon, take off, etc.

But TV and radio can be an awful bore, with their continued yak, yak—in other words, repeat, repeat, the same thing over and over.

. . . On this moon deal, I was on Ch. 11, a lucky station for me. They were broadcasting the Dodger-Giant game. When the landing happened they closed off the baseball and let the players and fans see the landing, then went back to the game.

. . . Walter Cronkite can drive you just as crazy as the other fellow.

Have you ever stopped to think men are talking themselves to death since we have TV and radio, night and day. They are bound to run out of something to say, so we get a lot of junk talk. I would love to have Walter Cronkite read this . . .

Mrs. Lulu Tuttle, Long Beach

(The letter has been forwarded).

WHAT HAS become of those three great guys—Baxter Ward, Carl George and Jim Healy? Bill Bonds and his group are great also, but we sure miss our three favorites.

Mrs. Peg Brown, Stanton

(Ward dropped out of the field to make his insuccessful bid for L.A. mayor and has not indicated when or if he'll return to telecasting; George is a field reporter with Ch. 2 and Healy can be heard on KFWB radio).

COULD ANYONE please tell me who the blonde little girl in the King Family is? She is the youngest of the little girls who perform each week (I don't mean Marilyn's little blonde girl) and is so darling we'd love to know which part of the family she belongs to. I was wondering whether she could be King Cousin Candy's daughter . . .?

Mrs. Roann D. Gray, Long Beach

(She is; name's Kristan, 3 years old).

Papa Doc

Duvalier speaks of his self-image, his relations with the United States, and Haiti's role in the world.

Haiti has been described by correspondents as a "Nightmare Republic" and a "Fortress of Evil," and Dr. Duvalier as "probably the most feared head of state in the world. . . . a sinister little man with the power of life and death who hides in an ornate armor-guarded palace." American tourists are steered past the hovels of Dr. Duvalier's "new Towns."

Governor Rockefeller visited Haiti on July 1 and 2 and encountered the largest and most enthusiastic reception since he and a group of experts embarked upon a "listen and learn" tour of Latin America two months ago.

Jackie Gleason Gets In Shape for weekly Tussle with Art Carney (above)

The Great One Prepares

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

The word from the camp of CBS-TV's Jackie Gleason is the The Great One will be going all out to fend off the new competition of NBC-TV's Andy Williams this fall.

Gleason has been a rock of ratings consistency and power for CBS-TV for years, and the NBC-TV move of confronting him head-on with Williams' variety hour will be watched closely by the trade as well as the public.

A Gleason spokesman says the comedian will offer at least 10 new one-hour musicals based on "The Honeymooners" characters that are the anchor of the series.

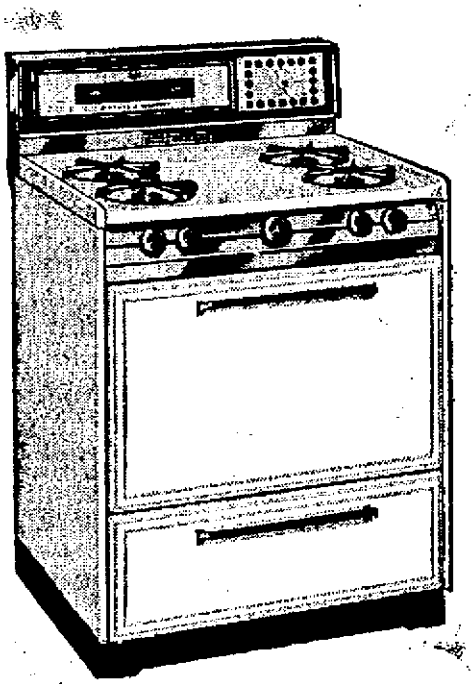

This means clearly, says the spokesman, that Art Carney, Sheila MacRae and Jane Kean will be back with Gleason. The Carney confirmation, which seems solid at this point, according to the spokesman, is pivotal to the success of the series.

For there is little doubt that without Carney the series would be severely weakened, and that the Williams competition would become even more formidable.

In addition to "The Honeymooners" musicals, says the spokesman, there will be at least 10 other programs, original, in the musical-comedy style, in which Gleason will offer some of his other characters — such as Reggie Van Gleason, Rum Dum, Fenwick Babbit, The Poor Soul, The Loud Mouth, etc., etc.

The spokesman also notes that the Gleason series will bring a number of Broadway names to the Miami Beach production point to play supporting roles in the various musical hours.

SPECIAL

FERMENT & The Catholic Church (7), 7:30 p.m.—Host Frank Reynolds and the "Summer Focus" cameras study internal forces altering the face of the Roman Catholic Church and its struggles to redefine its positions, practices and institutions in a world fraught with uncertainty and change. Filmed in May at Detroit, hour talks with young seminarians, liberal and conservative theologians, and goes to an underground mass, a Pentecostal service with its "speaking in tongues," and the marriage of an inactive priest to a former nun.

THE BEST YEARS (4), 8 p.m. — Craig Stevens (ex-Peter Gunn) stars as the father of three daughters, charged with the responsibility of raising them without a wife. The Strawberry Alarm Clock is featured in this unsold pilot created for Paramount by Sidney Sheldon (of "Jeannie" fame).

DEBBIE REYNOLDS

Baggy Pants Comic at Heart

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Television needs another half-hour situation comedy like CBS-TV needs The Smothers Brothers.

But "The Debbie Reynolds Show" will make its debut on NBC-TV Sept. 16.

What can Debbie do that Marlo Thomas, Diahann Carroll, Doris Day, Lucille Ball, Barbara Eden and Elizabeth Montgomery can't?

Well, she can be Debbie Reynolds for openers. The others can't.

"We have 10 teams of young writers with new ideas," Debbie explained in her luxurious Beverly Hills home. "Before we started production we had 10 completed scripts. We're different because we're prepared.

"Most shows start with two scripts. After that they're in trouble. Preparation is the important thing, and I'm hard to please. We've already completed nine episodes and I think they're good."

DEBBIE will play the meddlesome wife of a famous sports writer (played by Don Chastain) who drives her husband up the walls.

The scripts call for Debbie to be involved in a series of misadventures with hockey teams, lady wrestlers, taking flying lessons and other sports-oriented madness. She is doing most of the stunt work herself.

"I like physical comedy," she said. "A long time ago Dick Powell told me I was a baggy pants comedian at heart. I believed him."

MGM AND NBC feel they have a winner in Debbie before the first show is beamed. They signed her to a two-year contract.

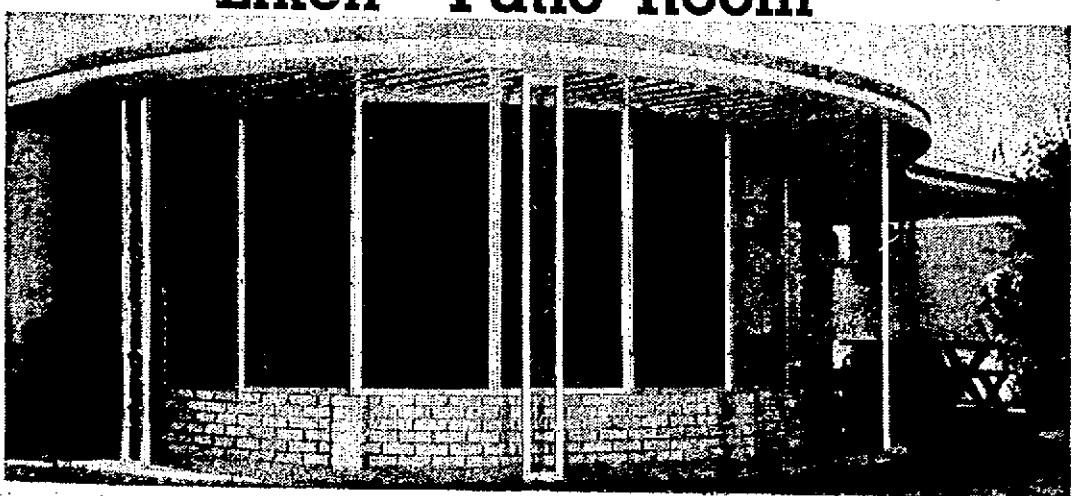

So far as is known Bill Cosby is the only other star to get a similar deal on a sitcom before a frame of film was cranked out.

"I wish I'd gone into a television series four years ago," Debbie concluded. "I guess it's not possible for me to make movies for the time being — I don't like the idea of taking off my clothes while the camera's look on."

KENNEDY TELECAST—Personal Crisis and TV

meanor and composure under exceptional strain, his speaking tone and his facial expression. Compassion and tolerance of human frailty in the mighty as well as the ordinary registered in a viewer's subconscious along with what the senator actually said. Since pure emotionalism is part of one individual's response to another, it was a peripheral part of the lasting impression a viewer took away with him at the program's close.

IT IS not a criticism of television, which surely could not be expected to pass up a story of such national importance, but merely a fact of electronic life that the home screen has introduced into democracy what might be likened to an electronic plebiscite. The individual in difficulty can ask television to be on hand at a chosen hour, not as a querulous reporter but as a passive yet socially persuasive instrument relaying the individual's own interpretation of events according to his own lights.

The senator's broadcast demonstrated again the peculiar dual journalistic role of television. Part of the time the medium is a speaker's rostrum where the mode of staging is shielded from outside intrusions; part of the time it is a bonafide reportorial medium free to ask the questions which need asking and answering. In the instance of the telecast from Hyannisport, the public was asked to give an implied vote of confidence on the basis of incomplete information.

The senator's ex parte explanation on TV, utilizing all the compelling intimacy and emotional involvement peculiar to the medium, is not the same as a man ready and willing to expose himself to cross-examination in the public presence and to clarify questions that remain unsolved. It is a sign of the electronic times that the senator and his advisers were eager to have TV cameramen enter the Kennedy compound at Hyannisport while reporters of both the press and TV were barred. Such an arrangement does not suggest that he was prepared to deal with the puzzling gaps in his narrative. Yet the power of unilateral television exposure to arouse support from his constituents may now make further elaboration on his part superfluous and unnecessary.

What TV would or could do in curbing use of the medium for what has been harshly called "political soap opera" is perhaps impossible to answer.

The men who set the course for television cannot wholly prevent the home screen from becoming a lectern, which is one of its multiple purposes. But for them to stop there as they did after the Kennedy broadcast, leaving the viewer somewhat in midair as commercial programming resumes, is not only frustrating but does little to contribute to rounded, well, informed public opinion.

SPECIAL

MASTERS OF POP (7), 9 p.m. — Producer Jack (Shindig) Good takes a retrospective British-style look at the history of the rock music revolution — through its periods of innocence (early-day "oldies"), anarchy (psychedelic era) and soul music. Featured are Lulu, Julie Driscoll, Brian Auger and the Trinity, Lance LeGault, Don Lang, Chris Farlowe (soul-singing protege of Rolling Stones' Mick Jagger), Lonnie Donegan, Dominic Grant, Ian Whitcomb, Emil Dean, Lord Rockingham's XI

BLACK FIDDLER: Prejudice & the Negro (7), 10 p.m. — "Time for Americans" documents the fact and fiction of Negro anti-Semitism based, in part, on the performance of the musical "Fiddler on the Roof" by an all-black company of Brooklyn junior high students — which found Jewish teachers and black militants agreed that the production should be banned. In a play-within-a-play, the young black actors explore their own attitudes toward portraying Jews. There's also an exchange between Rabbi Alan Miller and Rev. William A. Jones Jr., and teacher-strike leader Albert Shanker denies accusations of racism.

ABC's New Outlook for Fall

The Aim Is to Make Itself Felt Monday Nights

(Editor's Note: This is the final of three articles on the three television networks' plans for next season).

Of ABC-TV'S dozen new series next season, one-third will be devoted to making the public aware that the network is on the air on Monday nights.

Last season-ABC-TV was simply obliterated on Mondays. The CBS-TV competition was devastating: "Gunsmoke," Lucille Ball, "Mayberry R.F.D.," "Family Affair" and Carol Burnett. NBC-TV's Monday shows include "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" and a weekly movie.

Against these programs, the ABC-TV lineup of "The Avengers," Peyton Place," "The Outcasts" and "The Big Valley" turned out to be merely sacrificial. None of the four series will be back next season.

ABC will start Monday night with "The Music Scene" which will focus on hit records and their performers.

Following "The Music Scene" will be an adventure series, "The New People," which is set "on an isolated island in the South Pacific where a planeload of young Americans on a cultural tour to Southeast Asia are stranded when their aircraft crashes." The network adds:

"The group contains a broad cross-section of today's American youth with youngsters from every level of society. The deserted island was the site of an atomic test years before and is thus supplied with food and makshift housing. How the young people survive in a society of their own making is the focus of this series." Rod Serling wrote the first show.

After "The New People" on Monday's ABD-TV will present an hour-long series conceived by Harold Robbins, "The Survivors," described by insiders as a sort of jet-set "Peyton Place," and starring Lana Turner and George Hamilton.

LANA TURNER

ABC-TV'S final Monday night hour series will attempt to bring back a long-missing ingredient to video: Romance, love, stuff like that there. The series is called "Love — American Style," and it is "a romantic comedy which stars love: love among the young, love set in the city, the small towns, the resorts, on the campus." Adds the network:

"This one-hour contemporary program will contain separate love stories within each program — two, three or perhaps four separate segments — with connective vignettes between each segment. . ."

On Tuesdays of next season, by the way, ABC-TV will also offer a new "movie of the week" series, presenting original 90-minute telefilms. Technically, this could be considered a third movie night each week for ABC-TV, and eight overall for the three networks.

OTHER NEW programs on the networks in addition to "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," which was brought over from NBC and will probably develop a different relationship between the stars, are:

"Marcus Welby, M.D.," with Robert Young as a "Last Angry Man" private practioner and James Brolin as his assistant; "The Courtship of Eddie's Father," comedy about a widower and his young son, with Bill Bixby and Bran-

"Am I glad I found out in time that an independent agent makes The Big Difference in insurance!

"Suppose I'd bought home insurance directly from some companies!

"Consider this: My independent agent checked with me regularly to make certain my insurance kept up with today's replacement values. If he hadn't, I'd be several thousand dollars poorer today.

"And consider this: I get paid promptly! If there was any fussing or quibbling with the insurance company, I didn't know it. He took care of everything.

"Most important, because I had an independent agent I had no worries about insurance at all...no worries about losing big money."

Q. I am convinced that Jackie Kennedy Onassis is primarily a social butterfly without an ounce of civic consciousness. My wife says I am being unfair. I say I am only telling the truth. Which of us is right?—George T. Crandall, Palm Beach, Fla.

A. By background and predilection, Mrs. Onassis, like her sister Lee Radziwill, is an international jet-setter. She is interested in herself, clothes, jewelry, antiques, social functions, style, and the high life with the Beautiful People. When she occupied the White House, she was given an all-American image not strictly in accord with her true character.

She was never shown smoking although she is an inveterate smoker. She was never shown clothes-shopping although she spends anywhere from $25,000 to $50,000 per year on her wardrobe and jewelry.

At 40 Jackie Onassis is a woman of breathy charm, superficial knowledge, and carefully cultivated beauty who meets all the requirements of the Continental hostess. In Aristotle Onassis, the multimillionaire little Greek, she has found her near perfect mate. Truth to tell, her second marriage is in many ways a far better match for her than was her first. The late John F. Kennedy was so thoroughly American that he liked to play touch football. On balance, your judgment of Mrs. Onassis is harsh, but she is not the paragon that the White House press agents made her out to be.

JACKIE AND ONASSIS.

Q. Please identify the following quotation: "Men are so made that they can resist sound argument, and yet yield to a glance."—Olive Geraghty, Warm Springs, Ga.

A. French novelist Honoré de Balzac.

Q. Is Dean Martin fronting for a Chicago syndicate which has bought up the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas?—Ed Raillton, N. Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Martin is fronting for himself. For $80,000 and his services as an entertainer, he got a 10 percent interest in the Riviera.

Q. I have been told that Shana Alexander, the new editor of McCall's, has postponed her marriage to screenwriter Harry Crane in the expectation that Sen. Eugene McCarthy can extricate himself from his current marriage. Is this true? Also hasn't McCarthy signed a ten-year contract to write for McCall's?—T. R., McLean, Va.

A. Sen. Eugene McCarthy is tall, handsome, poetic, and particularly appealing to women of sensitivity and education. During the 1968 Presidential campaign, several female reporters succumbed to his charisma. Mrs. Alexander, then writing for Life magazine, was one. There were others. When Mrs. Alexander became editor of McCall's, she asked Senator McCarthy to write some pieces for her. Graciously, the Senator consented. That is all there is to it, mutual admiration.

Q. Was Bob Hope ever married to singer Marilyn Maxwell?—Henry Weinstein, Newark, N.J.

A. Never married, they are good friends who over the years have worked and frolicked together.

Q. Dean Acheson was the leading figure in the Truman Administration who got us into the Korean War. How long have we had U.S. troops in Korea and at what cost? How long does Acheson want us to keep U.S. troops in Vietnam?—M. King, Seattle, Wash.

A. The U.S. has had troops in South Korea for 19 years, ever since June 25, 1950. A total of 33,629 Americans were killed in the Korean War, and more than 50,000 U.S. troops are currently stationed in South Korea. Dean Acheson is popularly regarded as a war hawk, wants U.S. troops in Vietnam as long as he considers them necessary.

CLOSE FRIENDS: SMATHERS AND THE PRESIDENT.

Q. What is the relationship between Richard Nixon and George Smathers, former Democratic Senator from Florida?—Louise Evans, Miami Beach, Fla.

A. Smathers is the Clark Clifford of the Nixon Administration. An able lawyer with friends in high places, Smathers is an unofficial Nixon adviser, a close personal friend of the President, a tactful bon vivant who can be used on secret missions.

Q. I would like to know how come Hershey Chocolate Company never advertises.—Leota Deems, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. For 65 years Hershey Foods Corporation shunned conventional advertising. "Quality," Milton Hershey used to say, "is the best kind of advertising." Hershey, however, has now begun to advertise "to assure ourselves of a large share of the market."

Q. Is it true that President Richard Nixon makes no appointments without first consulting Sen. John Tower of Texas and Rep. Bob Wilson of San Diego? Aren't these the two guys who sledgehammered the appointment of Dr. John Knowles?—Victor Carter, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Tower and Wilson are two leading money-raisers for the Republican Party. They know which fat-cats are entitled to appointments and which organizations like the American Medical Association are entitled to protection of their interests. As such they carry great weight with Nixon who is basically a politician and has known from long personal experience that "money is the mother's milk of politics."

Q. What is the price of an abortion in Japan?—P.T.T., Sacramento, Calif.

A. It generally ranges from $10 to $100 for Japanese, a bit higher for foreigners.

GUNS OR BUTTER? WHICH COMES FIRST?

Senator Proxmire Seeks to Reverse Nation's Priorities

by Derek Norcross

William and Ellen Proxmire. Both are busy. She wrote a book on life as a Senator's wife, is also partner in a business.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Sen. William Proxmire, at 53 a trim, balding Democrat from Wisconsin, has a strong sense of priorities, both personal and national.

Each weekday he snaps out of bed at 6:30, performs a half hour of brisk calisthenics. He downs a high-protein breakfast, kisses Ellen, his equally trim wife, goodbye. Then, clad in shorts, he jogs to his office at the Capitol—a four-mile run.

One of Washington's early-morning tourist attractions, Proxmire completes the stint in 35 minutes. He showers in the Senate gym, changes into a single-breasted tropical, slides onto his desk chair. By 8 a.m. he is refreshed and ready for a hard day's work.

Proxmire's prime concern is with the priorities of the nation. Like many men, in and out of government, he wonders and worries whether we have become "a militaristic nation . . . a militaristic society . . . a national security state."

He knows that since the end of World War II we have spent one trillion, five hundred billion dollars on defense needs. And the demand for more military programs of every type continues to mount. But still our cities fester. Our air is fouled. Our water is polluted. Our minorities riot. Many of our people go hungry. Our children clamor for educational reforms. Our old people ask for just a little better life.

It's only money

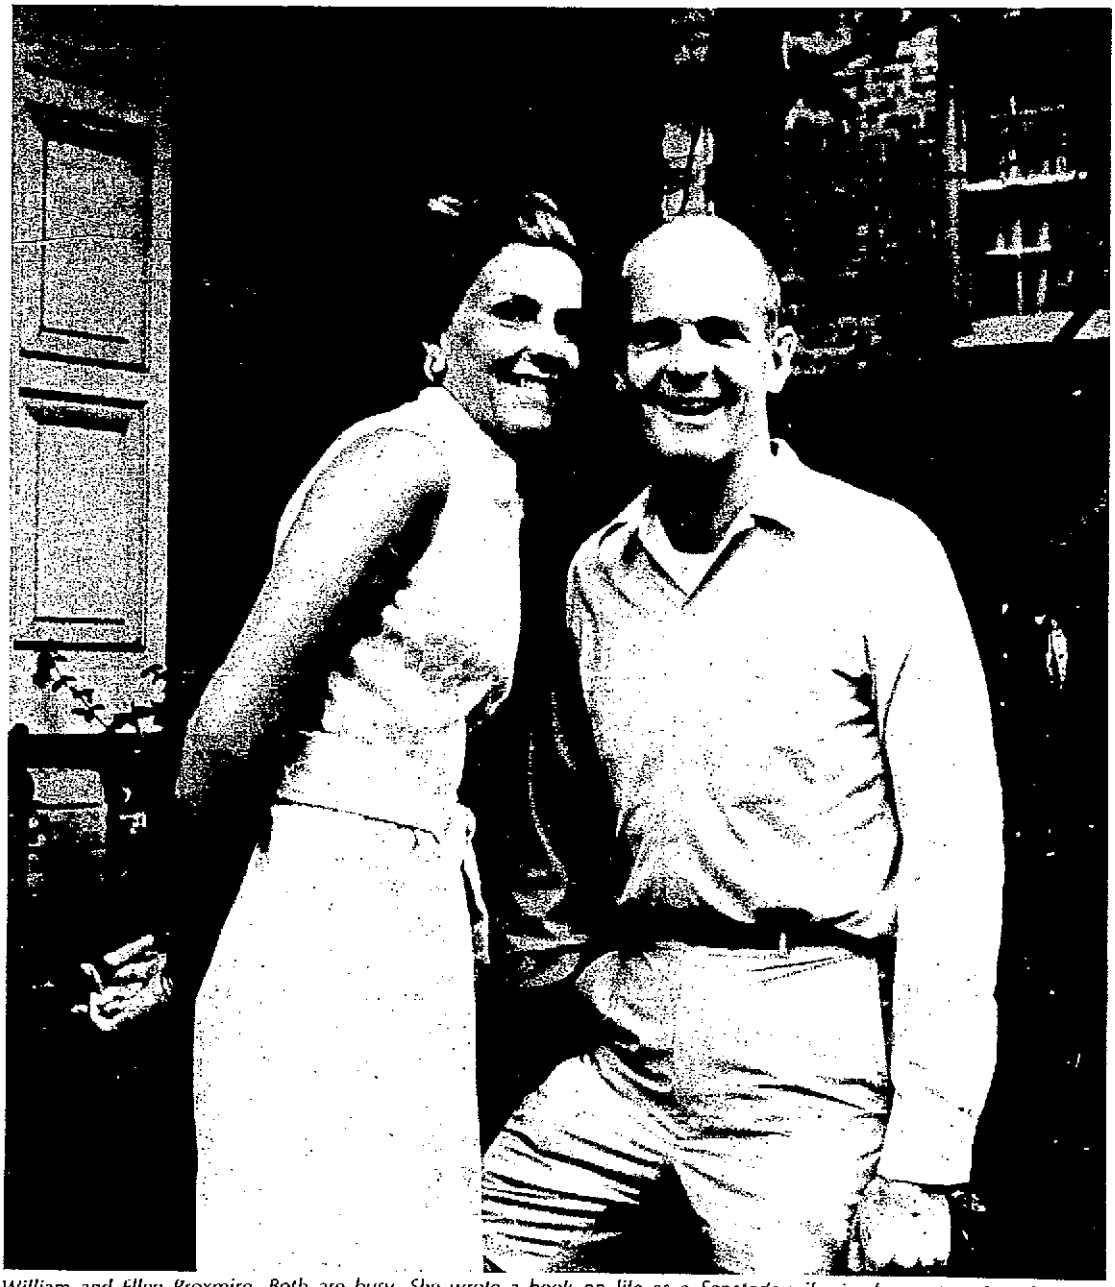

Proxmire realizes that it costs more and more money to run the nation. But he believes the budgetary pie must be sliced differently, "that the federal government is spending too much money on military programs [approximately $80 billion this year—about half the federal budget]" and that "any analysis of national priorities must look to that budget first."

He puts the question: "How can we balance our military needs and expenditures with our domestic problems and needs?"

He puts the question: "How can we balance our military needs and expenditures with our domestic problems and needs?"

Few men in the U.S. Senate or elsewhere are as well qualified as Bill Proxmire to conduct an inquiry into the basic economic orientation of this country.

The son of an Illinois doctor, Proxmire was educated at Hill, a prep school in Pottstown, Pa., was graduated from Yale, was awarded two Master's degrees at Harvard, one in public administration, the other in business administration.

From Wall Street to Senate

He worked for J. P. Morgan & Co. on Wall Street and volunteered for the Army nine months before Pearl Harbor. After four years in the Counter-Intelligence Corps and postwar graduate work in economics, he moved to Wisconsin. There, he worked as a reporter on the Madison Capital Times and entered politics. Having married a Rockefeller heiress, he found himself socially and financially secure. But the alliance did not help him politically. He ran for Governor of Wisconsin three times, and three times lost.

In 1957, however, he was the best-known Democrat in the state: When Wisconsin's controversial Senator, Joe McCarthy, died, Proxmire won the special election to fill McCarthy's seat.

Shortly before this victory, Proxmire, by then divorced, met and married Ellen Hodges Sawall, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Democratic Party. She, too, had been previously married. Her first husband was Warren Sawall, now a public relations man for Wisconsin's other Senator, Gaylord Nelson.

Author, businesswoman

At 46, Ellen Proxmire—she was voted the most beautiful girl in her 1942 class at Woodrow Wilson High School in Washington, D.C.—knows a good deal about budgets, economics, and priorities. Two years ago she and a pair of other Washington wives, Mrs. Raymond Poston and Mrs. Thomas Boggs, daughter-in-law of Louisiana Congressman Hale Boggs, organized Wonderful Weddings Inc., which stages complete weddings so that parents of the bride can enjoy the festivities, too. "Last year," reports Mrs. Proxmire, "we ran at a loss. But this year we'll be in the black."

Ellen Proxmire is also the author of a successful book, One Foot in Washington, in which she describes the life of a Senator's wife. Politically hip, she knows and appreciates that as chairman of the Subcommittee on Government Economy, her husband in the past few months has become one of the most publicized members of the U.S. Senate.

The Proxmires and their brood. Each has two children from a previous marriage. Of their present marriage, they have a son, Douglas Clark Proxmire, named after ex-Senators Paul Douglas of Illinois and Joseph Clark of Pennsylvania.

Also one of the most shrewd, studious, industrious, and intelligent members in that sometimes illustrious body.

After more than 11 years in the Senate, nine of which he spent as a sort of institutional maverick fighting valiantly for seemingly hopeless causes, Bill Proxmire knows how to handle himself in clinch and crunch. He does his homework and tries to be scrupulously fair. For example, when he invited witnesses to testify on military spending at his Government Economy hearings, he not only called a proper mixture of hawks and doves—such highly qualified big names as Harvard professor John Kenneth Galbraith, Senators Barry Goldwater and William Fulbright, labor leader Walter Reuther and former Secretary of State Dean Acheson—he also invited the chief executives of five of the nation's leading defense contractors: Lockheed, Boeing, General Dynamics, North American Rockwell, and Litton Industries.

'Outside our province'

The executives, some of whom serve as trustees for our most distinguished universities, refused to appear at the Proxmire hearings. Questions concerning overcharging the government, negligence, and downright incompetency were described by them as "outside our province."

Their refusal angered much of the nation. "How in all good conscience," Proxmire asked, "can these men who are so intimately involved in the decisions which affect our national security and our $80 billion military budget, be so sanctimonious and uncooperative?"

Even without the cooperation of the defense executives, Proxmire proceeded to extract testimony which revealed all too clearly shocking deficiencies in the entire defense spending program. A few cases in point:

1. The Air Force ordered the C-5A, world's largest cargo plane from Lockheed at a cost of $3.4 billion for 120 planes. Not only did the cost soar by about $2 billion, but the Air Force was reluctant to admit it to Congress.

2. The Defense Department ordered deep-diving rescue submarines for the Navy at $30 million each. The cost is now $80 million each. And the subs may be unnecessary to boot.

3. Minuteman II missiles, ordered at $3 billion, cost $7 billion.

Proxmire believes: "Defense spending is out of control. The system is top-heavy. The military-industrial complex writes its own budgetary ticket . . . after World War II, we over-reacted with respect to contracts for weapons systems. Nothing was too good for the military . . . the military has had a blank check. It could be said that we have had over two decades of carte blanche for defense."

The Senator wants control of "the blank check" restored to a more inquiring, careful, scrutinizing Congress.

He does not blame the military for the immense size of the defense budget. He sees no conspiracy between collusive forces. He knows that it was the nation's civilian policymakers who were paramount in setting national priorities which grant billions to defense and thousands to domestic needs.

It was a preacher's son from Wall Street, John Foster Dulles, who spent much of his time building military alliances with more than 40 nations. It was an investment banker, James Forrestal, the first Defense Secretary, who created the National Security Industrial Association to insure defense contractors a close relationship with the government. And it was Robert McNamara of the Ford Company, the so-called "business schools' idea of God," who used advanced systems development techniques to concentrate great power in the office of the Secretary of Defense. It was the no-nonsense McNamara who centralized the operations of the Pentagon, an institution which has more than $200 billion in assets including real estate holdings almost the size of New York State. This year the Pentagon will spend $21 billion in procurement, displaying an economic potency that makes General Motors look like small potatoes.

Inefficiency pays

What most Americans do not realize but what Senator Proxmire does is that 90 percent of all defense industry contracts are negotiated with the government, and not won by competitive bidding. The government also provides free to defense firms more than $15 billion worth of government property, including land, buildings, and equipment facilities for private production. According to Richard Stubbings, an examiner for the Budget Bureau, the highest profits sometimes accrue to the most inefficient companies.

Supposedly the Bureau of the Budget is responsible for scrutinizing government spending. But only 50 of the 500 persons in the bureau are assigned to check defense spending. "I think it is fair to say, therefore," Proxmire declares, "that the Budget Bureau makes no adequate review of the military budget."

The price of vigilance

Worse yet, when employees inside the Defense Department try to expose waste they have been ignored or chastised. Take the case of A.E. Fitzgerald, a deputy for management systems in the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force. Fitzgerald revealed at a Proxmire hearing that the cost-overruns on the Lockheed C-5A cargo plane were staggering. The Air Force thereupon rewarded his vigilance by assigning him to check bowling alleys in Thailand.

"Here was a man," an indignant

continued

He does not blame the military for the immense size of the defense budget. He sees no conspiracy between collusive forces. He knows that it was the nation's civilian policymakers who were paramount in setting national priorities which grant billions to defense and thousands to domestic needs.

It was a preacher's son from Wall Street, John Foster Dulles, who spent much of his time building military alliances with more than 40 nations. It was an investment banker, James Forrestal, the first Defense Secretary, who created the National Security Industrial Association to insure defense contractors a close relationship with the government. And it was Robert McNamara of the Ford Company, the so-called "business schools' idea of God," who used advanced systems development techniques to concentrate great power in the office of the Secretary of Defense. It was the no-nonsense McNamara who centralized the operations of the Pentagon, an institution which has more than $200 billion in assets including real estate holdings almost the size of New York State. This year the Pentagon will spend $21 billion in procurement, displaying an economic potency that makes General Motors look like small potatoes.

Inefficiency pays

What most Americans do not realize but what Senator Proxmire does is that 90 percent of all defense industry contracts are negotiated with the government, and not won by competitive bidding. The government also provides free to defense firms more than $15 billion worth of government property, including land, buildings, and equipment facilities for private production. According to Richard Stubbings, an examiner for the Budget Bureau, the highest profits sometimes accrue to the most inefficient companies.

Supposedly the Bureau of the Budget is responsible for scrutinizing government spending. But only 50 of the 500 persons in the bureau are assigned to check defense spending. "I think it is fair to say, therefore," Proxmire declares, "that the Budget Bureau makes no adequate review of the military budget."

The price of vigilance

Worse yet, when employees inside the Defense Department try to expose waste they have been ignored or chastised. Take the case of A.E. Fitzgerald, a deputy for management systems in the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force. Fitzgerald revealed at a Proxmire hearing that the cost-overruns on the Lockheed C-5A cargo plane were staggering. The Air Force thereupon rewarded his vigilance by assigning him to check bowling alleys in Thailand.

"Here was a man," an indignant

Proxmire points out, "who testified at our request. He testified with the permission of the Air Force. He was right. There is a $2 billion cost-overrun on the C-5A aircraft. But because of what he said, the department tried to fire him. His duties were circumscribed. They treated him as if he had typhus or was radioactive."

What bugs Proxmire and many other legislators is that the American people are devoting more of their resources to defense needs than is spent by all agencies of the federal, state, and local governments on health and hospitals, education, old age and retirement benefits, public assistance and relief, housing and community development and agriculture.

After all this Gargantuan spending is the nation more secure? Is it possible in this nuclear age to buy our way to safety?

Says one Defense Department official who prefers to remain nameless lest he be sent to Greenland to roll Red Cross bandages: "We can destroy the Russians tenfold and they can destroy us. No one is really safe any longer. Our only defense is peace."

Inflation causes

Senator Proxmire is fearful that in the pursuit of national security, the country may very well be depleting itself. "The bloated military budget and the excessive prices paid in military procurement . . . are the single biggest causes of the present inflation. We should cut wasteful defense spending to stop inflation instead of relying upon sky-high increases in interest rates which squeeze funds out of the home buyer, small businessman and farmer."

Recognizing the problem, President Nixon a few weeks ago named a blue ribbon panel to study the Defense Department. Subsequently, The Wall Street Journal, in an editorial headed "No Whitewash Wanted," commented:

". . . It is responsibly asserted that $10 billion or more a year could be cut from the military budget without impairing national security. Costly mistakes have been made in planning, execution and contracting."

What, if anything, can be done to reverse American priorities? Says Proxmire: "Congress must do a far better job in scrutinizing and appraising the military budget and procurement contractor practices." Sen. Stuart Symington believes the U.S. must re-think its worldwide commitments and stop being the world's policeman. A recent Congressional conference on national priorities suggested that Congress set up a defense review office to examine military budget requests and that another committee draw up a list of domestic priorities to be checked against a list of military priorities.

Citizens in their own communities can also play a vital role by organizing their own priority committees and asking their Congressmen a list of pertinent questions.

Just for starters, Proxmire suggests the following:

(A) Do we really need a new nuclear task force at a cost of $1.8 billion when carriers are sitting ducks for missiles or modern submarines?

(B) In an age of sophisticated missiles, do we need a new manned bomber to be delivered a decade from now at a cost of $12 billion or more?

(C) Are we really strengthened when there are ten supply troops for every man in a combat unit?

(D) Do we really need more than 400 military and naval overseas bases?

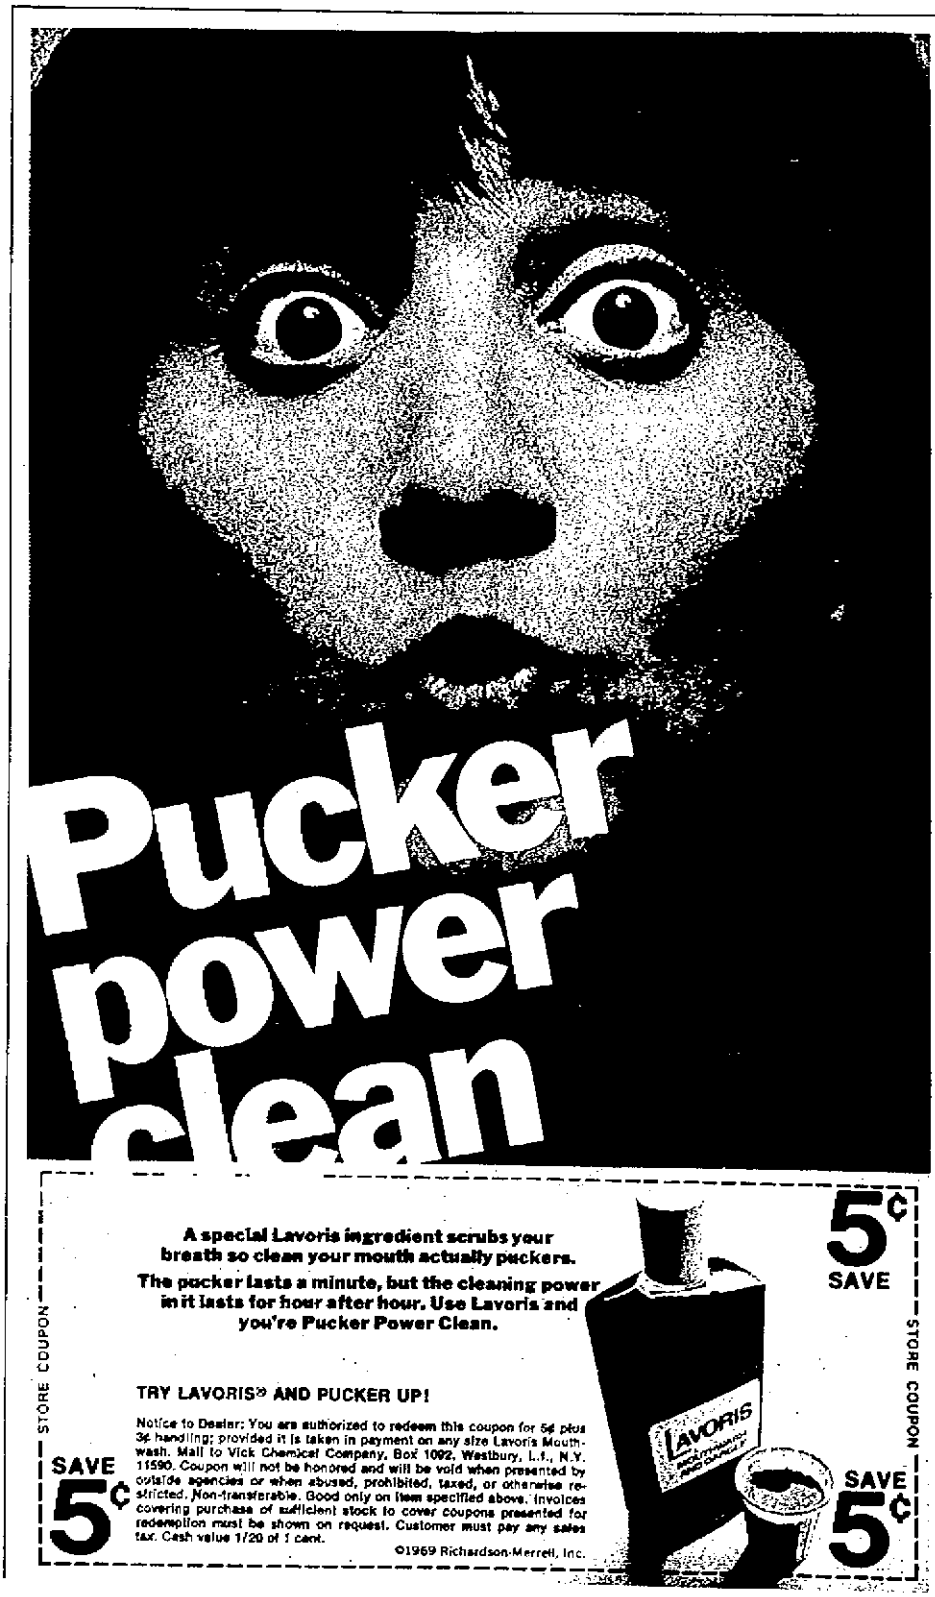

(E) Is this country strengthened when our military aid props up potentates or dictators?

(F) What about priorities for houses, schools, and jobs? With the extra $2 billion for the C-5A cargo plane, this country could house 3.3 million poor families or 12 million poor people for an entire year. Which has the higher priority?

Says Senator Proxmire: "Luxury military budgets weaken this country. Freedom is stifled when we ignore human needs. Let us get our priorities straight."

Sen William Proxmire jogs to his office at the Capitol each weekday—a four-mile run—is at desk ready for work at 8.

Parfait Perfection

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Festive and pretty, but easy to make, parfaits are perfect for summer desserts. The variety you can achieve is practically infinite—just call on your own ingenuity and imagination for colorful, flavorful combinations. The three we have pictured here will prove an incentive:

1. TAPIOCA PUDDING PARFAIT. Arrange alternate layers of pudding (made with quick-cooking tapioca), sweetened cultivated blueberries spiced with cinnamon (or blueberries folded into blueberry preserves) and frozen whipped topping in parfait glasses. Garnish with a few berries.

2. PEACHY PARFAIT. Layer peach ice cream, sweetened fresh red raspberries (or raspberries folded into raspberry preserves) and whipped cream in parfait glasses. Garnish with a few berries. (Another suggestion—peach or lemon ice cream, chopped, sweetened fresh peaches or nectarines and whipped cream.)

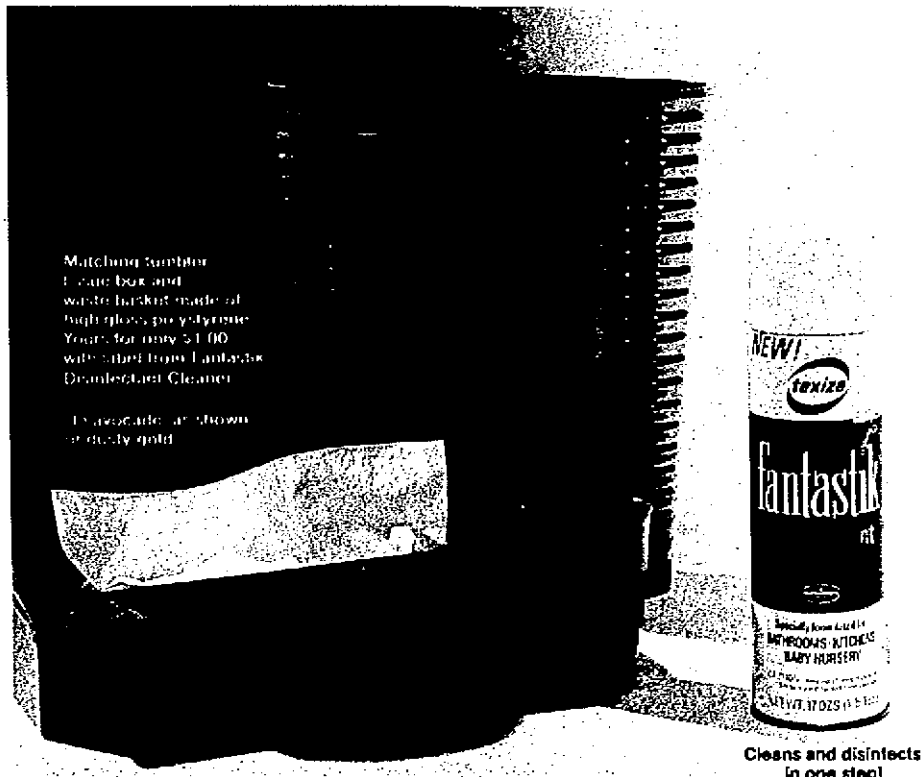

3. VANILLA PUDDING PARFAIT. Spoon into parfait glasses layers of pudding, thick fudge sauce with finely diced bananas or well drained crushed pineapple folded into it, chopped walnuts and whipped cream.

Don't forget other fruits of the summer — strawberries, chopped and sweetened; red currants, sugared; sweet red or black cherries, chopped and sweetened; homemade summer applesauce or canned applesauce, spiced to taste; diced pears combined with melted red currant jelly. Your choice of ice cream or puddings make for other interesting parfait combinations.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

ROOFTOP CONTROL: Up to five TV sets in different areas of your home can have separate controls for a rooftop antenna rotator with a new system. Finger pressure on the bar atop the control unit (above) directs the antenna through 360 degrees. The rotator unit itself (not shown) is said to turn the largest antenna in winds of up to 90 miles per hour. Rotator and one control unit: $39.95. Additional controls: $21.25 each. Alliance Mfg. Co., Inc., Dept. PP, Alliance, Ohio, 44601.

SPEED-LOCK DRILL: A new portable electric drill features variable speed—plus an infinite speed lock that allows you to lock the drill at the proper speed suited to a job. It's no longer necessary to try to maintain a constant speed by finger pressure; in fact, you don't have to hold the trigger at all. The ⅜" drill also provides reversing action and is double insulated for safety. $36.99 in stores. Black & Decker Mfg. Company, Dept. PP, Towson, Md. 21204.

FISH CALLER: New for the angler in your family, this device (above) is designed to rock with the motion of the water and send out seductive sounds and flashing light rays to intrigue fish up to half a mile away, claims the maker. The one-pound, 8½"-long, 1⅞"-diameter unit can be adjusted to buzz like a bee or whine like a mosquito, and the light rays can be made to blink or burn steadily. It may be used during the normal fishing season and for ice fishing. Two flashlight batteries power it. About $10 in stores. D'Amore Products Corp., Dept. PP, 2533 North Cramer, Milwaukee, Wis. 53211.

EXTRA-STEAM IRON: The latest in steam irons is one designed to provide greatly increased steam for certain tougher ironing jobs. When you touch a button on top, the iron delivers an extra, deep-penetrating "shot of steam" which is said to be especially useful for making otherwise stubborn wrinkles disappear, setting professional-type creases in trousers and pleated skirts, touching up permanent-press fabrics, and pressing newly sewn seams flat. You can use it, too, as a dry iron and regular steam iron. $24.99 in stores. Sunbeam Appliance Division, Sunbeam Corporation, Dept. PP, Chicago, Ill. 60650.

My Favorite Jokes

by Bill Cosby

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bill Cosby has gone from a struggling start as a comedian in small clubs to become one of the hottest performers in show business. He's scored on TV in a series, specials and as guest star, in the most glittering night-clubs and on record albums. These days, Cosby has been spending most of his time preparing episodes for his new Bill Cosby Show TV series, which debuts over NBC in September. Cosby is its producer as well as star, and is taking a hand in the scriptwriting, too. He's also responsible for the show's basic concept, through which members of many minority groups are employed both as actors and as members of the production team. Because of his dedication to the success of this project, Cosby has been accepting only a few such bookings as his recent emceeing of the "Emmy" awards on TV and a weekend of appearances at the Westbury Music Fair outside New York City. Cosby never gets out of touch with good comedy material, though, and here are some of his current favorite jokes:

Since I've become a parent I've thrown everything I learned in child psychology courses in college right out the window. Give me 200 2-year-olds and I can take over any country in the world. Without anyone ever telling them anything, they know exactly how to shut the power off in your house, flood it out or set fire to it.

Our two daughters wanted to play with the baby the other day. I told 'em: "No—I've seen your dolls!"

. I'm the dumbest parent in the world. I still believe my kids are where I told them to go.

My wife thinks if you bundle kids up they won't catch cold. She's wrong. Kids will always catch colds. It's nature's way of teaching them to blow their noses.

I ran the 100-yard dash in 9.8 once, but they wouldn't count it. It was so windy that day I kept getting blown off the starting blocks.

I like working in these summer "tent" theaters out in the country. They don't steal your car the way they do in the city.

I wasn't much good in gym class in school. After I'd been in it one semester they started a remedial gym class.

I bought a 21-room house in Beverly Hills. That's a big house, but we needed it. See, I got a big family in Philadelphia and it's started creeping out in our direction. I'll answer the door and it'll be some relative from Philadelphia. I'll say:

"Oh, hello, what are you doing out here?"

He'll answer:

"Come on, kids, meet your Uncle Bill," and kids start coming out of the shrubbery. Then he'll say:

"We don't want to impose. We're only here for life."

I was in a helicopter once and the blade fell off. I said to the pilot: "Is this serious?" He said: "Not this time, because we're still on the ground, but if it happens again . . ."

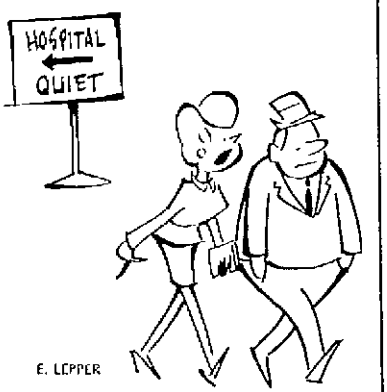

We did a lot of traveling for my last TV series, I Spy, to film episodes at different locations. I could never figure out the money in the foreign countries. When I bought something, I just held out a big handful of their money and said: "Don't hurt me."

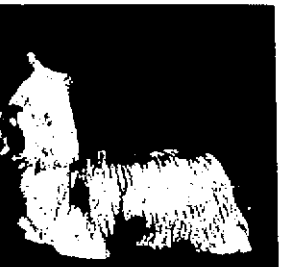

In Japan they have these baths where a nice young girl bathes you. I tried it. In fact, I had several. In fact, when I left Japan my water bill was 19,000 yen!

UNCLE KARL

PAT NIXON

Pat Nixon's Proud Uncle

by Louis P. Lochner

OBER-ROSSBACH, WEST GERMANY.

In this obscure fruit-growing village lives 80-year-old Karl Halberstadt, a retired railway worker, who thinks often these days of the U.S. White House in Washington and with eyes a-twinkle wonders aloud: "Do you suppose President Nixon would call me Uncle Karl?"

For it's been made known to Halberstadt that his sister, Katharina, who moved to America in 1889, later had a daughter who grew up and married a young lawyer and thus became Pat Nixon — today the First Lady of the United States. And Halberstadt is her uncle.

Great joy

"I have become the talk of the town overnight," says the affable old man. "I have been asked questions by various newsmen. That gave me great joy but also some excitement, inasmuch as we had for so long no family relationships."

"No family relationships" is an understatement. Halberstadt never even knew his sister, Katharina. He was born the year she left Germany forever to be brought up in California by an aunt. And he has heard from Pat Nixon, his niece, only twice. The first time was in 1928 when she wrote the news that her mother, Katharina, had died the year before.

But the second time was only recently and the letter was on White House stationery:

"Dear Karl Halberstadt:

"Along with my brother Tom's family we, too, are happy to learn of our relationship.

"It was good to hear from you, and your thoughtfulness in supplying some missing information about our family's history is very much appreciated. We are deeply grateful for your warm good wishes and shall look forward to the time when our paths cross.

"With kindest regards from all of our family,

"Sincerely,

"Patricia Nixon."

Halberstadt had, in effect, a salute earlier this year from his niece's husband. When President Nixon visited Germany, he said in a speech that was on national radio and TV: "I spoke at the airport this morning of the fact that we in the United States owe so much to our German heritage. And I speak personally on that point because the grandmother of my two daughters on their mother's side was born in Germany."

How did it happen that Katharina alone, of all the Halberstadts, moved to the United States? Uncle Karl explains that an aunt, who was Katharina's godmother, had emigrated to California and when it developed that she could not have children, she begged the Halberstadts to let Katharina come and live with her and her husband. So, at the age of 10, Katharina was put aboard a steamship. A friend of the family supervised her to New York but she crossed the country by train all alone. Uncle Karl says that at the age of 20 she married a German-born shop foreman who was killed in a flood catastrophe. Then she married a gold mine superintendent named William Ryan and one of Katharina's three children is the Patricia who has made Uncle Karl famous by moving into the White House.

Last one alive

In the long years before he became "the talk of the town overnight," Halberstadt was wounded in World War I, lost his only son in World War II and his wife in 1956. He retired 20 years ago after a life of railroading and now personally helps care for a fruit farm he inherited. Of his immediate family, he's the last one alive.

His home village is proud of Uncle Karl's new fame. The local dentist, Dr. Herbert Buch, is at work on a family history of the Halberstadts, who trace back to 1651 in these parts. When completed, it will be presented to President Nixon and his family.

As though to celebrate his recent eminence, Halberstadt recently wrote a letter to the local newspaper:

"I desire herewith to express my sincere thanks to my fellow citizens who showered congratulations upon me in connection with the surprising happening. We all wish and hope that the eminent statesman and new President of the mighty nation, R. Nixon, may with God's help succeed in maintaining the longed-for peace. It is an established fact that R. Nixon is friendly to the Germans."

Eat and drink

Then Uncle Karl invited the Nixons to visit him in his ancestral home:

"In case there should result a visit to our little town on the part of the exalted visitors, all doors will be opened. Food, drink and shelter will be offered in the best possible manner at my place."

Whether or not the Presidential family ever visits Ober-Rossbach, the Nixons have a great fan in Uncle Karl and they, in turn, have given the gentle, silver-haired old man a happiness by association that he cherishes gratefully in the twilight of his life.

Out for a stroll in Ober-Rossbach: Uncle Karl says he's "the talk of the town" because of his kinship to U.S. First Lady.

What can Pathway Products Corporation do for you?

Perhaps they can do for you what they have done for so many hundreds of others. Men in blind alley jobs have been made owners of their own businesses; men who already owned businesses that were not prospering have been shown new potentials of growth and profits; men whose earnings were limited by "job function" ceilings suddenly have learned to know the meaning of unlimited profit; and still others, blocked in their progress by "deadwood" at the top, have been shown how to leap over such obstacles into ownership of their own private businesses with the constant help and direction of the experienced corporate staff. What can Pathway Products Corporation do for you? Your name on the blank below will bring full details by return mail.

Executive offices and National Training Center, Verona, N.J.

Would you like to investigate a business in which you could be certain of success before resigning your present job or risking your present paycheck?

Would you like details of a business on which you make money not only on your own efforts but also make a profit on the work of from five to 30 other people who you train, direct and supervise?

Would you be able and willing to invest $1,950 in a business of your own if your own investigation showed you could expect to make $2,000 or more in profits every month?

Although less than five years old, our corporation already has launched more than 400 men (or women) or man-and-wife teams in one of the most rapidly growing privately owned businesses to emerge in the last decade.

It is such a business that we invite ambitious men to weigh and consider. With a spectacular record of public response in the areas already opened, we are now ready to appoint Pathway Products Sales Coordinators in a limited number of additional marketing areas in 49 of the 50 states.

To those who qualify, our staff will give complete on-the-ground training. They will show the new coordinator how to find, hire, and train the people who will work under his direction. The staff members will train the Coordinator in every phase of his business. They will work with him until his business is launched. Then they will be available for continuing help in promoting rapid growth and healthy expansion of his business.

The products you will handle are those that are used in every household and every industry every day. They are the non-food products which are bought, used up, and bought again—almost weekly. And when a housewife sees how Haste®—for $3 can give her the equivalent of almost $30 worth of products she now buys at the supermarket, she becomes an eager and steady buyer. Her enthusiasm makes her one of your strongest new business builders through "word of mouth" advertising among her friends.

In spite of the exciting success factors in the Pathway Plan, it is not a plan for dreamers. It is not for those who expect to make $30,000 to $40,000 a year without effort. No. We will not franchise men who will not implement their desires with the kind of eager application to their own businesses that will lead to success for them and for our company.

We do not charge a "franchise fee." We do not ask monthly royalty payments. Our corporate profits must come only after you, as a Sales Coordinator, have profited more richly than the company. It is for that reason that our executive screening committee is highly selective in picking only those men whose characteristics we know to be associated with success in our field.

If you have had some sales experience it will count in your favor, but it is not essential to success. If you have had some experience in business management or in directing other people, it will be helpful, but, again, it is not necessary. The prime requirements are enthusiasm, belief in yourself, and—of most importance—the willingness to follow the simple plan that has brought success and personal independence to so many others.

To get complete information by mail, it is only necessary to mail the Request for Information printed below. No charge. No obligation. Get the facts and then decide if you wish to explore the possibilities more deeply with one of our corporation executives. No salesman will call on you without your invitation.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

GOOD TEETH Most people don't know it, but a sticky, transparent, filmy substance called bacterial plaque is responsible for most of the tooth decay and gum disease in adults.

Eliminate the plaque, and you eliminate major dental problems.

How to do it? That's the question. The simple answer, according to a research dental team at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco, lies in a small wafer and an equally small dental mirror.

You take the wafer, a harmless staining agent known as erythrocin. It's a little pink tablet available in drugstores. You chew it and swish it around in your mouth, and it stains the plaque pink. This is important, because plaque is transparent and, without some staining agent, you can't easily detect it. You then take the little dental mirror and observe the pink spots. With your toothbrush or dental floss, you eliminate the plaque sites, and thereby remove the major cause of dental trouble.

The technique is described in a booklet entitled "For 9 Out of 10 Adults Only." It's available at no charge to dental schools and dentists who may order in bulk and then distribute copies to patients.

Copies may be obtained from the Division of Periodontology, School of Dentistry, U. of California, San Francisco Medical Center, San Francisco, Calif. 94122.

Ask your dentist to get you a copy. Follow the instructions carefully, and your dentist may find himself with more leisure time.

VANDAL-PROOF TELEPHONES How goes the Bell System's battle with coin-phone vandals and thieves? Better, reports the world's largest telephone company.

The Bell System has about 1.2 million coin phones. Last year, the system lost $3 million to coin-phone looters, and spent $10 million repairing and replacing phones damaged by vandals and larcenists. Here are some of the things Bell companies are doing:

A new, more ruggedly constructed phone, dubbed the 1A1, with highly pick-resistant locks and a single coin slot, has been introduced. One Bell company's quarterly losses to vandalism and theft had been averaging $30,000. The losses were cut in half in the three months after 1A1 was installed.

Also designed to thwart the professional coin-box thief is a "chute guard." The typical thief disables phones so that when customers drop in money, they are unable to make a call. He returns later to collect the nickels, dimes and quarters left by disgruntled customers. The chute guard blocks the coin slot in a phone that has been tampered with.

The New York Telephone Company hires private guards to apprehend thieves at transportation terminals and major complexes with high coin-phone usage.

Companies also are installing more walk-up, drive-up public phones. Not being enclosed in booths, they are more visible, reduce opportunity for thieves. One phone booth installed by Northwestern Bell brought 28 complaints in one year, 11 of them for vandalism. It was replaced by a walk-up phone, and after the change, only one complaint was filed--for a burned-out light bulb.

Dial-tone-first also is being introduced so coin-phone users will know the unit is operating before they insert their money. In emergency use, the service means a person doesn't reduce his chances of getting help because he doesn't have any change. He picks up the receiver, listens for a dial tone, dials "operator" and gets aid.

LICENSES FOR BOAT OPERATORS There were 4195 boating accidents in the U.S. last year. These killed more than 1300 people, injured another 1300, and cost more than $6,500,000 in damages. Most of the accidents occurred in pleasure boats less than 16 feet long.

What caused these accidents? Boat operators. They either overloaded their boats, ignored safety precautions, or lacked proper knowledge and experience.

The same kind of failures will cause the same kind of accidents this year, which is why there is a move underway to license boat operators. Automobile operators are expected to know how to drive, to be acquainted with the rules of the road, to prove a certain degree of driving competency. Boaters, it is suggested in many quarters, should be able to fulfill similar requirements.

The basics of seamanship, the ability of the operator to protect himself and his passenger, can be learned in about four hours.

Most activities, including marriage, require a license in this country. Logic and safety demand that boating be licensed,too.

THEY'RE GETTING BIGGER AND HITTING HARDER: ROGER BROWN (L) OF THE LOS ANGELES RAMS IS 6-5, WEIGHS 300. TEAMMATE MERLIN OLSEN IS 6-5 AND WEIGHS 276.

BIGGER AND BETTER Professional football players are getting heavier all the time. In 1942 they averaged 200 pounds per man. Last year they averaged 222.

"As momentum equals mass times velocity," says Dr. Howard Knuttgen, Boston University biologist, "there can be no doubt that these men are hitting harder and injuring each other more seriously. The question can be logically raised as to whether this change in player size might require modification of the rules of play."

NO TIME FOR LOVE One of the most discussed books in Scandinavia this summer--it will eventually be published in this country--is The Theory of the Harried Leisure Class.

Its author is a bright young economist and a member of the Swedish Parliament named Staffan Linder.

Linder contends that modern man is spending less and less time making love. "Love takes time," he writes. "To court and love someone in a satisfactory manner is a game with many time-consuming phases...the time spent on each occasion of lovemaking is being reduced. The total number of sexual encounters is declining almost everywhere...the French institution of the 'cinq-à-sept' (the 5-to-7 period for which French husbands traditionally do not have to account to their wives) is reported to be disappearing in the increased pace of life even in France."

Linder says that love affairs are becoming too business-like. No flowers, no poetry, no music, no frills, no lengthy and elaborate seductions. Everything seems to be timed. "Okay, baby. We've got half an hour."

SUEZ CANAL When the six-day war closed down the Suez Canal two years ago, it looked like the Egyptian economy would go with it. Now it seems that halting the canal trade may have been a disguised blessing for the Egyptians.

In the ten years during which Egypt controlled the Suez, she became increasingly tied to it economically. Between 1955 and 1967 the canal's revenue rose from $76 to $240 million.

The closure of the canal did seriously damage the economy of Egypt. She was deprived of predictable revenue; development projects were indefinitely delayed. The damage to the west-bank industries and towns from Israeli shelling was extensive.

But like any organism with one weakened part, Egypt compensated by strengthening her other sectors. The Egyptian economy has begun a shift away from its concentration around the canal, now the battlefront area, and toward the western part of the country. New indigenous sources of revenue are being discovered and developed.

Production of oil in Alexandria and the western desert has increased. The oil is shipped from the new port of Sidi Abdel Rahman near Alexandria, and the area is showing the effects of the thriving trade.

Important ore discoveries have been made recently in the western desert and a railroad is now being built which will ship these products to the country's population centers.

Many Egyptians feel that the forced reorientation of the economy away from the canal and the canal zone will be beneficial in the long run. It forces Egypt to explore her own agricultural and industrial potential, instead of living on the fruits of being the middleman in European trade.

Secretaries: the nation's most-wanted women

by Herbert Kupferberg

The boss was interviewing an applicant for a secretarial job—or, more accurately, the applicant was interviewing the boss. She was a pretty girl, just out of secretarial school, wearing a miniskirt.

"Of course, starting salary is at least $125 a week," she said to the boss.

"Of course," he answered.

"Three weeks' vacation?"

"Naturally."

"Stock options?"

"All you want."

"Two coffee breaks a day?"

"We've just added a third."

The secretary seemed impressed and there was a pause.

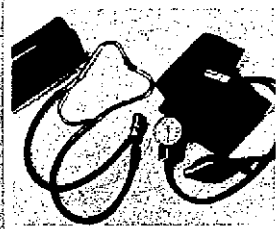

"Then you'll accept the job?" the boss asked eagerly.

The girl rose. "Well, of course I can't say right off that I'll actually take it," she answered. "But I'll consider it. You'll hear from me in a few weeks. Oh, yes, one more thing: Don't call me. I'll call you."

Close to the truth

The above dialogue is, of course, fictitious—but only just barely. The actual secretarial job situation today is almost that way, with good office help so scarce that frantic executives and personnel managers are resorting to all sorts of lures and inducements to get girls to take jobs.

High salaries and long vacations are only the start. There are 750,000 secretaries currently employed in the U.S., and the demand will increase in the years ahead. To get them, employers are competing by advertising such extras as annual bonuses, tuition grants, group travel plans, and discounts on company products like cosmetics, drugs, clothing and books. Job applicants long ago stopped paying agency fees—the employer pays them now—gladly.

These secretaries look happy because they're all starting in new jobs with salaries and benefits as they want them. Seated is employment agency executive Liz Reed.

The secretary shortage is nationwide, but is especially acute in big cities. In New York, the current starting salary for a beginner is $110 to $120 a week. Five years ago it was $75. In Chicago and Los Angeles beginners are getting $100, compared to $65 or $70 five years ago.

For girls who stay on the job, raises come regularly—or the girls go elsewhere. "It used to be that you could keep a girl by giving her a $5 raise when she got another offer," moans one personnel executive, "but now they can often get $20 or $25 more by changing jobs." Even Uncle Sam is contributing to the high cost of office help. Last July 1 the Federal government granted $800 raises that boosted the salary of experienced secretaries in Washington to $8400 a year—forcing private employers in the area to up their levels, too. In New York City, perhaps 100 top firms are paying their top girls $15,000 after eight years' experience. Girls with specialized knowledge, as in medicine or law, command high pay. Legal secretaries are among the best paid in the business, with some in the $12,000-$14,000 range.

But to many girls, money isn't everything. A typical want ad in a New York newspaper last month in addition to other benefits offered such enticements as two hours for lunch, nearby shopping boutiques, "lots of young executives" and office cocktail parties. The employer, a Madison Avenue advertising agency, explained that such parties for new accounts were routine events, so it was decided to include them in the job package.

Honeywell, one of the country's biggest electronic and computer firms, recently startled personnel experts by throwing an evening party at a Manhattan hotel to interest secretaries in taking jobs at its Long Island City, N.Y., branch office. "What Are You Doing Tonight, Honey?" its ad in the Long Island Press was headed, urging applicants to attend a "career bash—refreshments on us" the following evening. At the party 17 girls enjoyed coffee and Danish while Honeywell executive Jerry Hacker expounded on the company's virtues, including a plan for employees to purchase its stock at a considerable discount. One secretary, 23-year-old Mary Lilly, was hired on the spot; two others expressed interest.

Among those at the Honeywell bash were "spies" from other employers trying to see how the idea worked out. One of them, Nancy Adams of the Camp Fire Girls, said her organization was desperate to get secretaries. "Our trouble is that we don't have single young men working in the office," she said mournfully. "The only thing we can sell applicants on is the opportunity to help youngsters. This does appeal to some of them. Our address is 65 Worth St., New York," she added hopefully.

'Bounty hunters'

Parties aren't the only dodge being used to recruit likely talent. Many companies are trying to work out arrangements with public schools that have secretarial courses. Earlier this year, a Boston bank took 150 high school guidance counselors to the Ice Follies while they talked about likely graduates. Secretarial schools, whose students pay anywhere from $800 to $1200 for a year's course, find themselves being courted by employment agencies. Many companies pay their own secretaries "bounties" to recruit new girls. For each secretary a girl brings in she may get up to $50, with a similar payment if the new employee lasts six months or a year.

Employment authorities agree that the "glamor" jobs are attracting secretaries away from the more conventional industries. Stock brokerage houses offer girls not only liberal bonuses but the hope of making money in the market. The travel and transportation industry has built-in attractions. Says the personnel manager of a popular magazine: "The airlines are ruining it for the rest of us. They don't pay so much, but they offer the girls practically free transportation to Europe and Hawaii. What can we offer? A free copy of the magazine?"

The upsurge in job openings has also had its effect in changing standards in secretarial dress. Not too many years ago the elite Katharine Gibbs secretarial school in New York used to send its young ladies out to their jobs wearing hats and white gloves. Nowadays, Gibbs girls, like most others, go forth in miniskirts. Some of the more "advanced" type of employers, like ad agencies, even let their employees wear pants suits.

The girls themselves are well aware of holding the whip-hand in the current employment market, and they like it that way. Says Kathleen Herman, a receptionist-switchboard operator who recently re-entered the employment field after 12 years out of it: "It used to be when you came into an employment agency they'd say: 'Who are you and what do you want?' Now they welcome you like a long lost relative." Other girls admit they prefer to work in a "swinging" office where there are plenty of unattached young men. The companies try to attract them with ads entitled "WE'RE LOOKING FOR THE SMART SET," "JOIN THE BEAUTIFUL PEOPLE," and "HAPPINESS IS A WONDERFUL YOUNG BOSS AND A PRETTY OFFICE." Some girls, like Susanna Krch, who is starting her third job at the age of 20, insist that what they want above all is a sense of responsibility and the opportunity to do more than routine work.

Are schools at fault?

Personnel authorities ascribe the secretarial shortage to a variety of factors. Liz Reed, an executive of the Fanning Agency, which processes thousands of job applicants throughout the country yearly, blames the educational system. She thinks more "ghetto" students could make the secretarial grade if they had proper instruction. "It's definitely the fault of the schools," she says. "Too many of these girls are thrown into large classes where the teacher spends her time acting like a policeman." Miss Reed also feels that many other girls who should be going to secretarial school are going to college instead—and that the colleges aren't teaching them anything useful: "Every mother and father is sending their kids to college, and they come out lacking the tools for the commercial world."

The former secretarial job pool is also being drained off by the pull of other jobs. Fashion modeling and being an airlines hostess are more glamorous. Teaching, with rising salaries and built-in security, has growing appeal. All sorts of jobs, from editing a magazine to driving a taxi, once regarded as exclusively male, have been opened to women in recent years. Rosie the Riveter, that fabled female of World War II, has many daughters.

Miss Reed admits that she doesn't expect any overnight change in the job situation, and neither does anyone else. Says a publishing personnel executive grimly: "Until now, having a secretary has been a status symbol. Well, lots of executives are going to have to get along without it. Dictaphone machines are coming more and more into use. The only trouble is, they don't wear miniskirts."

Want-ads in newspapers offer an array of enticements as employers, trying to combat secretarial shortage, exercise imaginations in campaign to get girls' attention.

My Favorite Jokes

by Bill Cosby

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bill Cosby has gone from a struggling start as a comedian in small clubs to become one of the hottest performers in show business. He's scored on TV in a series, specials and as guest star, in the most glittering nightclubs and on record albums. These days, Cosby has been spending most of his time preparing episodes for his new Bill Cosby Show TV series, which debuts over NBC in September. Cosby is its producer as well as star, and is taking a hand in the scriptwriting, too. He's also responsible for the show's basic concept, through which members of many minority groups are employed both as actors and as members of the production team. Because of his dedication to the success of this project, Cosby has been accepting only a few such bookings as his recent emceeing of the "Emmy" awards on TV and a weekend of appearances at the Westbury Music Fair outside New York City. Cosby never gets out of touch with good comedy material, though, and here are some of his current favorite jokes:

Since I've become a parent I've thrown everything I learned in child psychology courses in college right out the window. Give me 200 2-year-olds and I can take over any country in the world. Without anyone ever telling them anything, they know exactly how to shut the power off in your house, flood it out or set fire to it.

Our two daughters wanted to play with the baby the other day. I told 'em: "No—I've seen your dolls!"

I'm the dumbest parent in the world. I still believe my kids are where I told them to go.

My wife thinks if you bundle kids up they won't catch cold. She's wrong. Kids will always catch colds. It's nature's way of teaching them to blow their noses.

I ran the 100-yard dash in 9.8 once, but they wouldn't count it. It was so windy that day I kept getting blown off the starting blocks.

I like working in these summer "tent" theaters out in the country. They don't steal your car the way they do in the city.

I wasn't much good in gym class in school. After I'd been in it one semester they started a remedial gym class.

I bought a 21-room house in Beverly Hills. That's a big house, but we needed it. See, I got a big family in Philadelphia and it's started creeping out in our direction. I'll answer the door and it'll be some relative from Philadelphia. I'll say:

"Oh, hello, what are you doing out here?"

He'll answer:

"Come on, kids, meet your Uncle Bill," and kids start coming out of the shrubbery. Then he'll say:

"We don't want to impose. We're only here for life."

I was in a helicopter once and the blade fell off. I said to the pilot: "Is this serious?" He said: "Not this time, because we're still on the ground, but if it happens again . . ."

We did a lot of traveling for my last TV series, I Spy, to film episodes at different locations. I could never figure out the money in the foreign countries. When I bought something, I just held out a big handful of their money and said: "Don't hurt me."

In Japan they have these baths where a nice young girl bathes you. I tried it. In fact, I had several. In fact, when I left Japan my water bill was 19,000 yen!

UNCLE KARL

PAT NIXON

Pat Nixon's Proud Uncle

by Louis P. Lochner

OBER-ROSSBACH, WEST GERMANY.

In this obscure fruit-growing village lives 80-year-old Karl Halberstadt, a retired railway worker, who thinks often these days of the U.S. White House in Washington and with eyes a-twinkle wonders aloud: "Do you suppose President Nixon would call me Uncle Karl?"

For it's been made known to Halberstadt that his sister, Katharina, who moved to America in 1889, later had a daughter who grew up and married a young lawyer and thus became Pat Nixon — today the First Lady of the United States. And Halberstadt is her uncle.

Great joy

"I have become the talk of the town overnight," says the affable old man. "I have been asked questions by various newsmen. That gave me great joy but also some excitement, inasmuch as we had for so long no family relationships."

"No family relationships" is an understatement. Halberstadt never even knew his sister, Katharina. He was born the year she left Germany forever to be brought up in California by an aunt. And he has heard from Pat Nixon, his niece, only twice. The first time was in 1928 when she wrote the news that her mother, Katharina, had died the year before.

But the second time was only recently and the letter was on White House stationery:

"Dear Karl Halberstadt:

"Along with my brother Tom's family we, too, are happy to learn of our relationship.

"It was good to hear from you, and your thoughtfulness in supplying some missing information about our family's history is very much appreciated. We are deeply grateful for your warm good wishes and shall look forward to the time when our paths cross.

"With kindest regards from all of our family,

"Sincerely,

"Patricia Nixon."

Halberstadt had, in effect, a salute earlier this year from his niece's husband. When President Nixon visited Germany, he said in a speech that was on national radio and TV: "I spoke at the airport this morning of the fact that we in the United States owe so much to our German heritage. And I speak personally on that point because the grandmother of my two daughters on their mother's side was born in Germany."

How did it happen that Katharina alone, of all the Halberstadts, moved to the United States? Uncle Karl explains that an aunt, who was Katharina's godmother, had emigrated to California and when it developed that she could not have children, she begged the Halberstadts to let Katharina come and live with her and her husband. So, at the age of 10, Katharina was put aboard a steamship. A friend of the family supervised her to New York but she crossed the country by train all alone. Uncle Karl says that at the age of 20 she married a German-born shop foreman who was killed in a flood catastrophe. Then she married a gold mine superintendent named William Ryan and one of Katharina's three children is the Patricia who has made Uncle Karl famous by moving into the White House.

Out for a stroll in Ober-Rossbach: Uncle Karl says he's "the talk of the town" because of his kinship to U.S. First Lady.

Last one alive

In the long years before he became "the talk of the town overnight," Halberstadt was wounded in World War I, lost his only son in World War II and his wife in 1956. He retired 20 years ago after a life of railroading and now personally helps care for a fruit farm he inherited. Of his immediate family, he's the last one alive.

His home village is proud of Uncle Karl's new fame. The local dentist, Dr. Herbert Buch, is at work on a family history of the Halberstadts, who trace back to 1651 in these parts. When completed, it will be presented to President Nixon and his family.

As though to celebrate his recent eminence, Halberstadt recently wrote a letter to the local newspaper:

"I desire herewith to express my sincere thanks to my fellow citizens who showered congratulations upon me in connection with the surprising happening. We all wish and hope that the eminent statesman and new President of the mighty nation, R. Nixon, may with God's help succeed in maintaining the longed-for peace. It is an established fact that R. Nixon is friendly to the Germans."

Eat and drink

Then Uncle Karl invited the Nixons to visit him in his ancestral home:

"In case there should result a visit to our little town on the part of the exalted visitors, all doors will be opened. Food, drink and shelter will be offered in the best possible manner at my place."

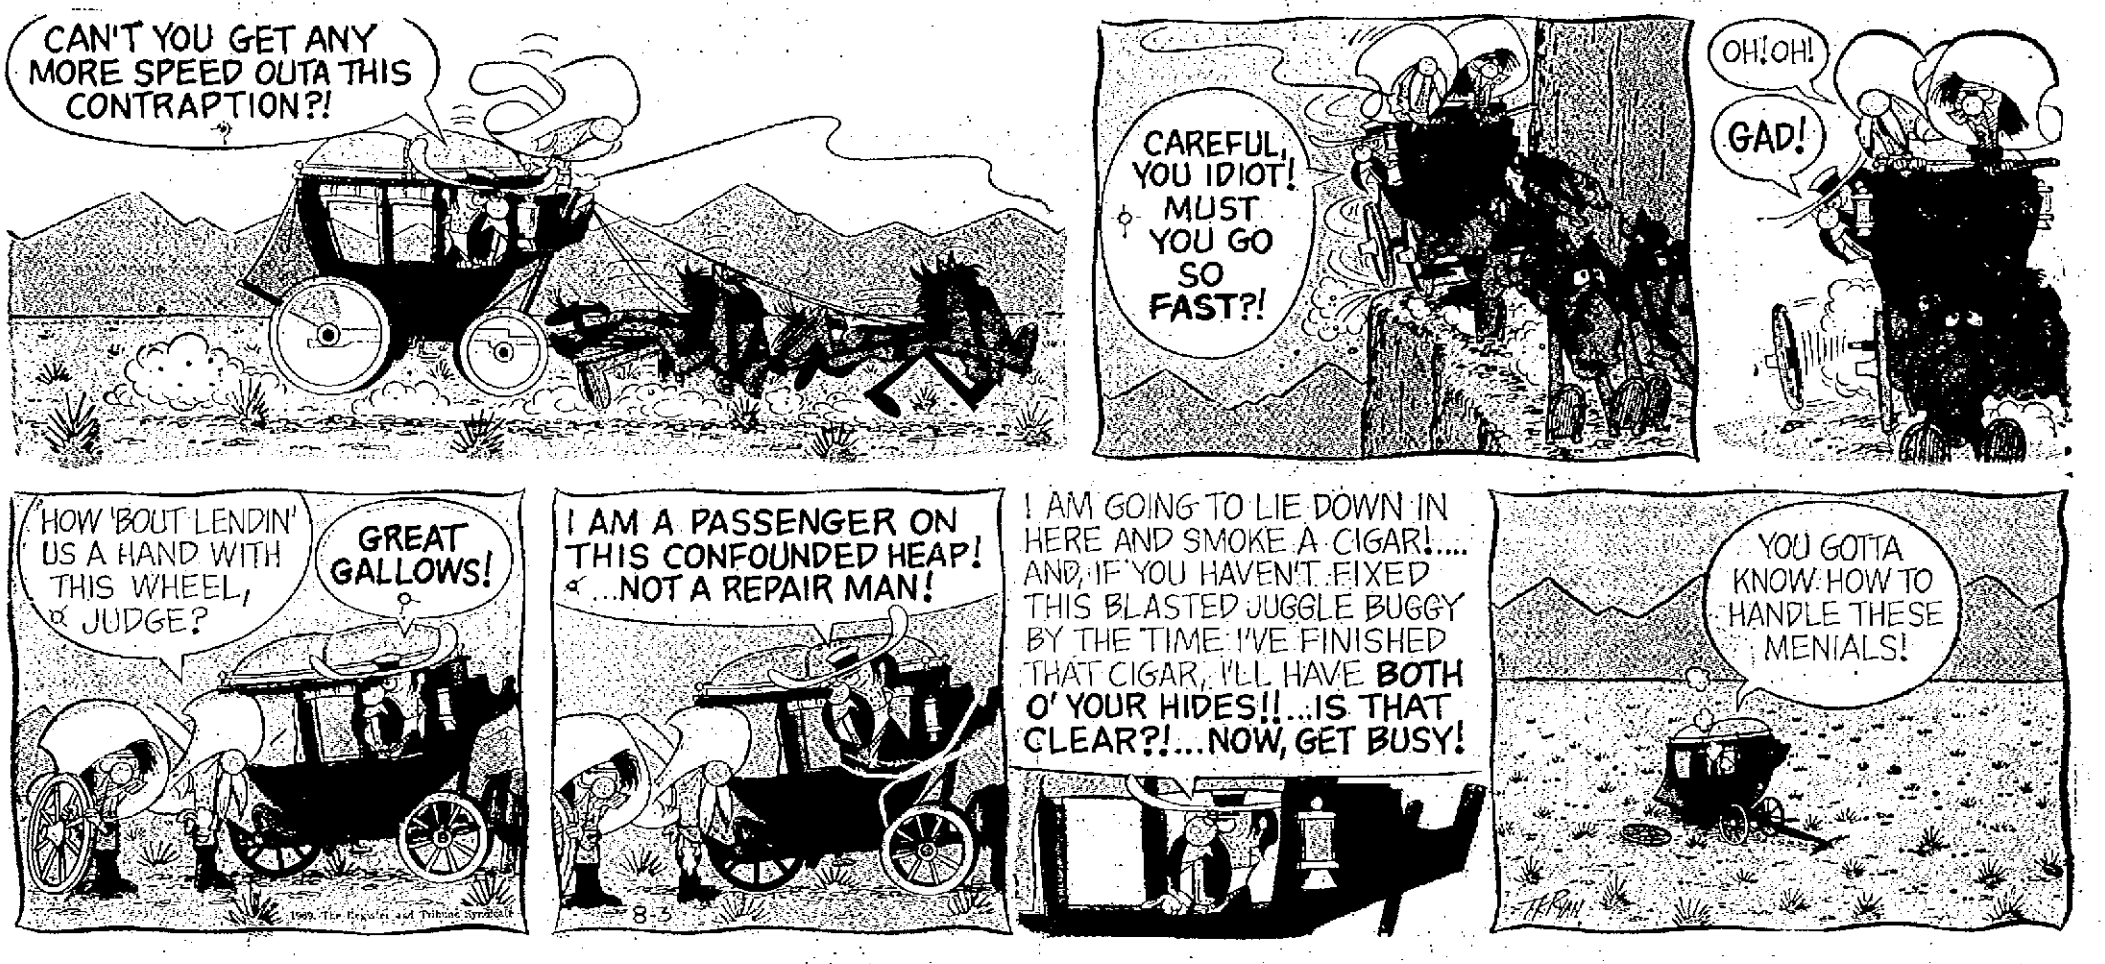

Whether or not the Presidential family ever visits Ober-Rossbach, the Nixons have a great fan in Uncle Karl and they, in turn, have given the gentle, silver-haired old man a happiness by association that he cherishes gratefully in the twilight of his life.

What can Pathway Products Corporation do for you?

Perhaps they can do for you what they have done for so many hundreds of others. Men in blind alley jobs have been made owners of their own businesses; men who already owned businesses that were not prospering have been shown new potentials of growth and profits; men whose earnings were limited by "job function" ceilings suddenly have learned to know the meaning of unlimited profit; and still others, blocked in their progress by "deadwood" at the top, have been shown how to leap over such obstacles into ownership of their own private businesses with the constant help and direction of the experienced corporate staff. What can Pathway Products Corporation do for you? Your name on the blank below will bring full details by return mail.

Executive offices and National Training Center, Verona, N.J.

Would you like to investigate a business in which you could be certain of success before resigning your present job or risking your present paycheck?

Would you like details of a business on which you make money not only on your own efforts but also make a profit on the work of from five to 30 other people who you train, direct and supervise?

Would you be able and willing to invest $1,950 in a business of your own if your own investigation showed you could expect to make $2,000 or more in profits every month?

Although less than five years old, our corporation already has launched more than 400 men (or women) or man-and-wife teams in one of the most rapidly growing privately owned businesses to emerge in the last decade.

It is such a business that we invite ambitious men to weigh and consider. With a spectacular record of public response in the areas already opened, we are now ready to appoint Pathway Products Sales Coordinators in a limited number of additional marketing areas in 49 of the 50 states.

To those who qualify, our staff will give complete on-the-ground training. They will show the new coordinator how to find, hire, and train the people who will work under his direction. The staff members will train the Coordinator in every phase of his business. They will work with him until his business is launched. Then they will be available for continuing help in promoting rapid growth and healthy expansion of his business.

The products you will handle are those that are used in every household and every industry every day. They are the non-food products which are bought, used up, and bought again—almost weekly. And when a housewife sees how Haste©—for $3 can give her the equivalent of almost $30 worth of products she now buys at the supermarket, she becomes an eager and steady buyer. Her enthusiasm makes her one of your strongest new business builders through "word of mouth" advertising among her friends.

In spite of the exciting success factors in the Pathway Plan, it is not a plan for dreamers. It is not for those who expect to make $30,000 to $40,000 a year without effort. No. We will not franchise men who will not implement their desires with the kind of eager application to their own businesses that will lead to success for them and for our company.

We do not charge a "franchise fee." We do not ask monthly royalty payments. Our corporate profits must come only after you, as a Sales Coordinator, have profited more richly than the company. It is for that reason that our executive screening committee is highly selective in picking only those men whose characteristics we know to be associated with success in our field.

If you have had some sales experience it will count in your favor, but it is not essential to success. If you have had some experience in business management or in directing other people, it will be helpful, but, again, it is not necessary. The prime requirements are enthusiasm, belief in yourself, and—of most importance—the willingness to follow the simple plan that has brought success and personal independence to so many others.

To get complete information by mail, it is only necessary to mail the Request for Information printed below. No charge. No obligation. Get the facts and then decide if you wish to explore the possibilities more deeply with one of our corporation executives. No salesman will call on you without your invitation.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

EDITED by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

GOOD TEETH

Most people don't know it, but a sticky, transparent, filmy substance called bacterial plaque is responsible for most of the tooth decay and gum disease in adults.

Eliminate the plaque, and you eliminate major dental problems.

How to do it? That's the question. The simple answer, according to a research dental team at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco, lies in a small wafer and an equally small dental mirror.

You take the wafer, a harmless staining agent known as erythrocin. It's a little pink tablet available in drugstores. You chew it and swish it around in your mouth, and it stains the plaque pink. This is important, because plaque is transparent and, without some staining agent, you can't easily detect it. You then take the little dental mirror and observe the pink spots. With your toothbrush or dental floss, you eliminate the plaque sites, and thereby remove the major cause of dental trouble.

The technique is described in a booklet entitled "For 9 Out of 10 Adults Only." It's available at no charge to dental schools and dentists who may order in bulk and then distribute copies to patients.

Copies may be obtained from the Division of Periodontology, School of Dentistry, U. of California, San Francisco Medical Center, San Francisco, Calif. 94122.

Ask your dentist to get you a copy. Follow the instructions carefully, and your dentist may find himself with more leisure time.

VANDAL-PROOF TELEPHONES

How goes the Bell System's battle with coin-phone vandals and thieves? Better, reports the world's largest telephone company.

The Bell System has about 1.2 million coin phones. Last year, the system lost $3 million to coin-phone looters, and spent $10 million repairing and replacing phones damaged by vandals and larcenists. Here are some of the things Bell companies are doing:

A new, more ruggedly constructed phone, dubbed the 1A1, with highly pick-resistant locks and a single coin slot, has been introduced. One Bell company's quarterly losses to vandalism and theft had been averaging $30,000. The losses were cut in half in the three months after 1A1 was installed.

Also designed to thwart the professional coin-box thief is a "chute guard." The typical thief disables phones so that when customers drop in money, they are unable to make a call. He returns later to collect the nickels, dimes and quarters left by disgruntled customers. The chute guard blocks the coin slot in a phone that has been tampered with.

The New York Telephone Company hires private guards to apprehend thieves at transportation terminals and major complexes with high coin-phone usage.

Companies also are installing more walk-up, drive-up public phones. Not being enclosed in booths, they are more visible, reduce opportunity for thieves. One phone booth installed by Northwestern Bell brought 28 complaints in one year, 11 of them for vandalism. It was replaced by a walk-up phone, and after the change, only one complaint was filed--for a burned-out light bulb.

Dial-tone-first also is being introduced so coin-phone users will know the unit is operating before they insert their money. In emergency use, the service means a person doesn't reduce his chances of getting help because he doesn't have any change. He picks up the receiver, listens for a dial tone, dials "operator" and gets aid.

LICENSES FOR BOAT OPERATORS

There were 4195 boating accidents in the U.S. last year. These killed more than 1300 people, injured another 1300, and cost more than $6,500,000 in damages. Most of the accidents occurred in pleasure boats less than 16 feet long.

What caused these accidents? Boat operators. They either overloaded their boats, ignored safety precautions, or lacked proper knowledge and experience.

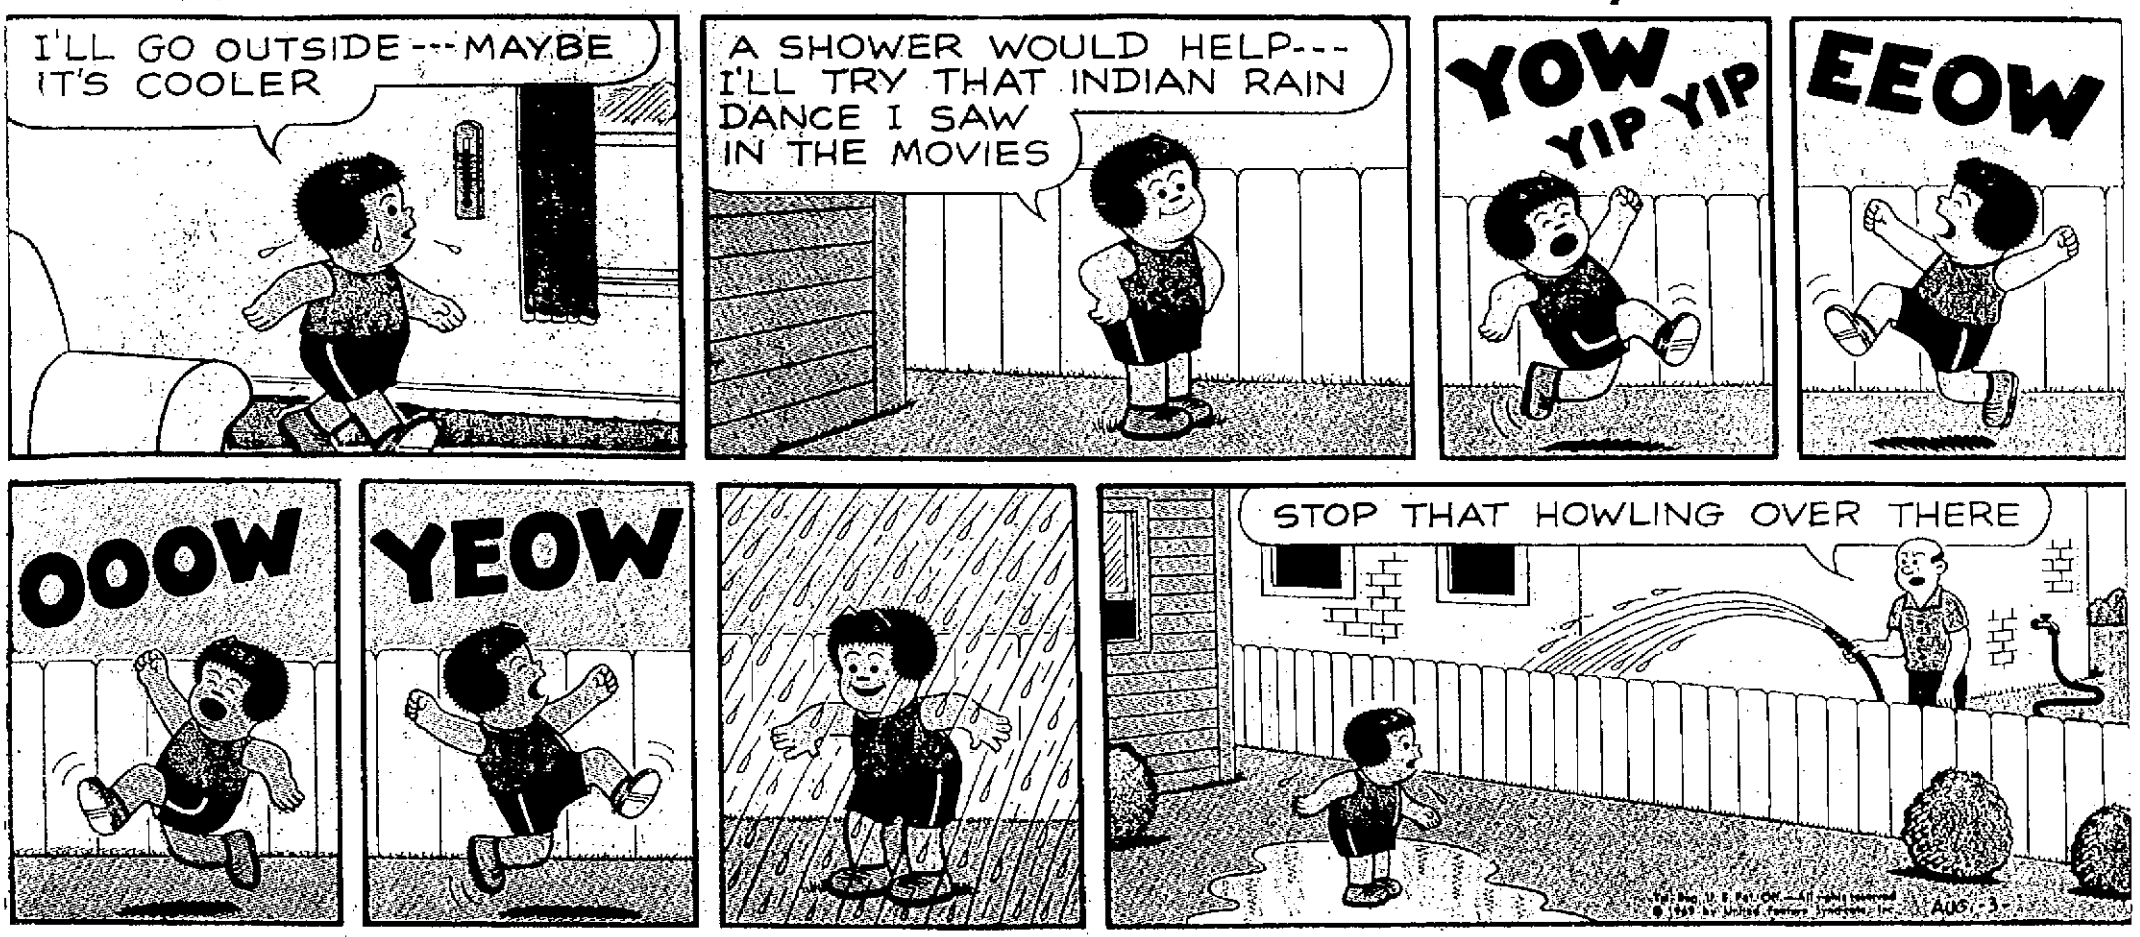

The same kind of failures will cause the same kind of accidents this year, which is why there is a move underway to license boat operators. Automobile operators are expected to know how to drive, to be acquainted with the rules of the road, to prove a certain degree of driving competency. Boaters, it is suggested in many quarters, should be able to fulfill similar requirements.

The basics of seamanship, the ability of the operator to protect himself and his passenger, can be learned in about four hours.

Most activities, including marriage, require a license in this country. Logic and safety demand that boating be licensed, too.

THEY'RE GETTING BIGGER AND HITTING HARDER: ROGER BROWN (L) OF THE LOS ANGELES RAMS IS 6-5, WEIGHS 300. TEAMMATE MERLIN OLSEN IS 6-5 AND WEIGHS 276.

BIGGER AND BETTER Professional football players are getting heavier all the time. In 1942 they averaged 200 pounds per man. Last year they averaged 222.

"As momentum equals mass times velocity," says Dr. Howard Knuttgen, Boston University biologist, "there can be no doubt that these men are hitting harder and injuring each other more seriously. The question can be logically raised as to whether this change in player size might require modification of the rules of play."

NO TIME FOR LOVE One of the most discussed books in Scandinavia this summer--it will eventually be published in this country--is The Theory of the Harried Leisure Class.

Its author is a bright young economist and a member of the Swedish Parliament named Staffan Linder.

Linder contends that modern man is spending less and less time making love. "Love takes time," he writes. "To court and love someone in a satisfactory manner is a game with many time-consuming phases...the time spent on each occasion of lovemaking is being reduced. The total number of sexual encounters is declining almost everywhere...the French institution of the 'cinq-à-sept' (the 5-to-7 period for which French husbands traditionally do not have to account to their wives) is reported to be disappearing in the increased pace of life even in France."

Linder says that love affairs are becoming too business-like. No flowers, no poetry, no music, no frills, no lengthy and elaborate seductions. Everything seems to be timed. "Okay, baby. We've got half an hour."

SUEZ CANAL When the six-day war closed down the Suez Canal two years ago, it looked like the Egyptian economy would go with it. Now it seems that halting the canal trade may have been a disguised blessing for the Egyptians.

In the ten years during which Egypt controlled the Suez, she became increasingly tied to it economically. Between 1955 and 1967 the canal's revenue rose from $76 to $240 million.

The closure of the canal did seriously damage the economy of Egypt. She was deprived of predictable revenue; development projects were indefinitely delayed. The damage to the west-bank industries and towns from Israeli shelling was extensive.

But like any organism with one weakened part, Egypt compensated by strengthening her other sectors. The Egyptian economy has begun a shift away from its concentration around the canal, now the battlefront area, and toward the western part of the country. New indigenous sources of revenue are being discovered and developed.

Production of oil in Alexandria and the western desert has increased. The oil is shipped from the new port of Sidi Abdel Rahman near Alexandria, and the area is showing the effects of the thriving trade.

Important ore discoveries have been made recently in the western desert and a railroad is now being built which will ship these products to the country's population centers.

Many Egyptians feel that the forced reorientation of the economy away from the canal and the canal zone will be beneficial in the long run. It forces Egypt to explore her own agricultural and industrial potential, instead of living on the fruits of being the middleman in European trade.

Secretaries: the nation's most-wanted women

by Herbert Kupferberg

The boss was interviewing an applicant for a secretarial job—or, more accurately, the applicant was interviewing the boss. She was a pretty girl, just out of secretarial school, wearing a miniskirt.

"Of course, starting salary is at least $125 a week," she said to the boss.

"Of course," he answered.

"Three weeks' vacation?"

"Naturally."

"Stock options?"

"All you want."

"Two coffee breaks a day?"

"We've just added a third."

The secretary seemed impressed and there was a pause.

"Then you'll accept the job?" the boss asked eagerly.

The girl rose. "Well, of course I can't say right off that I'll actually take it," she answered. "But I'll consider it. You'll hear from me in a few weeks. Oh, yes, one more thing: Don't call me. I'll call you."

Close to the truth

The above dialogue is, of course, fictitious—but only just barely. The actual secretarial job situation today is almost that way, with good office help so scarce that frantic executives and personnel managers are resorting to all sorts of lures and inducements to get girls to take jobs.

High salaries and long vacations are only the start. There are 750,000 secretaries currently employed in the U.S., and the demand will increase in the years ahead. To get them, employers are competing by advertising such extras as annual bonuses, tuition grants, group travel plans, and discounts on company products like cosmetics, drugs, clothing and books. Job applicants long ago stopped paying agency fees—the employer pays them now—gladly.

These secretaries look happy because they're all starting in new jobs with salaries and benefits as they want them. Seated is employment agency executive Liz Reed.

The secretary shortage is nationwide, but is especially acute in big cities. In New York, the current starting salary for a beginner is $110 to $120 a week. Five years ago it was $75. In Chicago and Los Angeles beginners are getting $100, compared to $65 or $70 five years ago.

For girls who stay on the job, raises come regularly—or the girls go elsewhere. "It used to be that you could keep a girl by giving her a $5 raise when she got another offer," moans one personnel executive, "but now they can often get $20 or $25 more by changing jobs." Even Uncle Sam is contributing to the high cost of office help. Last July 1 the Federal government granted $800 raises that boosted the salary of experienced secretaries in Washington to $8400 a year—forcing private employers in the area to up their levels, too. In New York City, perhaps 100 top firms are paying their top girls $15,000 after eight years' experience. Girls with specialized knowledge, as in medicine or law, command high pay. Legal secretaries are among the best paid in the business, with some in the $12,000-$14,000 range.

But to many girls, money isn't everything. A typical want ad in a New York newspaper last month in addition to other benefits offered such enticements as two hours for lunch, nearby shopping boutiques, "lots of young executives" and office cocktail parties. The employer, a Madison Avenue advertising agency, explained that such parties for new accounts were routine events, so it was decided to include them in the job package.

Honeywell, one of the country's biggest electronic and computer firms, recently startled personnel experts by throwing an evening party at a Manhattan hotel to interest secretaries in taking jobs at its Long Island City, N.Y., branch office. "What Are You Doing Tonight, Honey?" its ad in the Long Island Press was headed, urging applicants to attend a "career bash—refreshments on us" the following evening. At the party 17 girls enjoyed coffee and Danish while Honeywell executive Jerry Hacker expounded on the company's virtues, including a plan for employees to purchase its stock at a considerable discount. One secretary, 23-year-old Mary Lilly, was hired on the spot; two others expressed interest.

Among those at the Honeywell bash were "spies" from other employers trying to see how the idea worked out. One of them, Nancy Adams of the Camp Fire Girls, said her organization was desperate to get secretaries. "Our trouble is that we don't have single young men working in the office," she said mournfully. "The only thing we can sell applicants on is the opportunity to help youngsters. This does appeal to some of them. Our address is 65 Worth St., New York," she added hopefully.

'Bounty hunters'

Parties aren't the only dodge being used to recruit likely talent. Many companies are trying to work out arrangements with public schools that have secretarial courses. Earlier this year, a Boston bank took 150 high school guidance counselors to the Ice Follies while they talked about likely graduates. Secretarial schools, whose students pay anywhere from $800 to $1200 for a year's course, find themselves being courted by employment agencies. Many companies pay their own secretaries "bounties" to recruit new girls. For each secretary a girl brings in she may get up to $50, with a similar payment if the new employee lasts six months or a year.

Employment authorities agree that the "glamor" jobs are attracting secretaries away from the more conventional industries. Stock brokerage houses offer girls not only liberal bonuses but the hope of making money in the market. The travel and transportation industry has built-in attractions. Says the personnel manager of a popular magazine: "The airlines are ruining it for the rest of us. They don't pay so much, but they offer the girls practically free transportation to Europe and Hawaii. What can we offer? A free copy of the magazine?"

The upsurge in job openings has also had its effect in changing standards in secretarial dress. Not too many years ago the elite Katharine Gibbs secretarial school in New York used to send its young ladies out to their jobs wearing hats and white gloves. Nowadays, Gibbs girls, like most others, go forth in miniskirts. Some of the more "advanced" type of employers, like ad agencies, even let their employees wear pants suits.

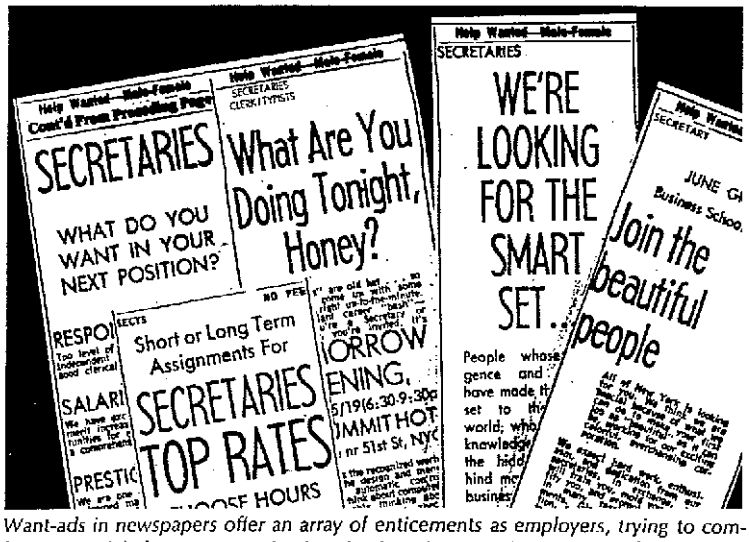

The girls themselves are well aware of holding the whip-hand in the current employment market, and they like it that way. Says Kathleen Herman, a receptionist-switchboard operator who recently re-entered the employment field after 12 years out of it: "It used to be when you came into an employment agency they'd say: 'Who are you and what do you want?' Now they welcome you like a long lost relative." Other girls admit they prefer to work in a "swinging" office where there are plenty of unattached young men. The companies try to attract them with ads entitled "WE'RE LOOKING FOR THE SMART SET," "JOIN THE BEAUTIFUL PEOPLE," and "HAPPINESS IS A WONDERFUL YOUNG BOSS AND A PRETTY OFFICE." Some girls, like Susanna Krch, who is starting her third job at the age of 20, insist that what they want above all is a sense of responsibility and the opportunity to do more than routine work.

Are schools at fault?

Personnel authorities ascribe the secretarial shortage to a variety of factors. Liz Reed, an executive of the Fanning Agency, which processes thousands of job applicants throughout the country yearly, blames the educational system. She thinks more "ghetto" students could make the secretarial grade if they had proper instruction. "It's definitely the fault of the schools," she says. "Too many of these girls are thrown into large classes where the teacher spends her time acting like a policeman." Miss Reed also feels that many other girls who should be going to secretarial school are going to college instead—and that the colleges aren't teaching them anything useful: "Every mother and father is sending their kids to college, and they come out lacking the tools for the commercial world."

The former secretarial job pool is also being drained off by the pull of other jobs. Fashion modeling and being an airlines hostess are more glamorous. Teaching, with rising salaries and built-in security, has growing appeal. All sorts of jobs, from editing a magazine to driving a taxi, once regarded as exclusively male, have been opened to women in recent years. Rosie the Riveter, that fabled female of World War II, has many daughters.

Miss Reed admits that she doesn't expect any overnight change in the job situation, and neither does anyone else. Says a publishing personnel executive grimly: "Until now, having a secretary has been a status symbol. Well, lots of executives are going to have to get along without it. Dictaphone machines are coming more and more into use. The only trouble . they don't wear miniskirts."

Want-ads in newspapers offer an array of enticements as employers, trying to combat secretarial shortage, exercise imaginations in campaign to get girls' attention.
